A metal plate is given to each man, a lota, or metal cup, filled with water is placed by his side, and the women bring the food and serve it out to their lords and masters. In the hot season a woman twirls one of the huge fans, or punkahs, in a very deft manner, creating a little breeze in the close hot room. When the men have finished and gone out to take their usual whiffs at the hookah, the women bring in the rest of the food and eat their breakfast by themselves.

They cook without the aid of a stove or range, and generally without even a chimney. Two or three sets of chulhas, which are merely little standards built of brick or mud, are in one corner of a little kitchen. The little kettles rest upon them. Fires of small sticks are kindled in these chulhas whenever wanted, the food is cooked quickly, and the fire immediately extinguished. Flat cakes, flattened out in the hands, are made of the wheaten dough and baken on an iron plate over the fire, first on one side, then on the other. It is reckoned a nice accomplishment to do this "just right," i. e., to have the cakes perfectly baked, but not burnt.

With these cakes, or chapatis, they serve stewed vegetables or a pulse, called dal, highly seasoned and enriched with ghi, or boiled butter, or oil. Their only beverage is cold water. They use no china, glass, spoons, knives, forks or chopsticks. They convey food to the mouth with the right hand alone, using pieces of the flat cakes as spoons to scoop up the stewed pulse. At the evening meal they have a little more variety; rice in some form, perhaps, with a curry of fish or vegetables, and a dessert of fruit or sweetmeats. They are extremely fond of sweetmeats, and have them in great variety. They are made of rice, sugar, flour, butter, cocoanut and other fruit. Some kinds are very good; but most of them are too heavy and oily to be digestible.

Some women smoke the hookah, and all of them chew pan a large portion of the time. This is composed of betelnut, a little shell lime, cardamon seeds, etc., wrapped in a pungent leaf. After chewing this awhile a blood red juice escapes, which colors the teeth and mouth in a very unpleasant manner.—Mrs. E. J. Humphrey in Demorest's Magazine.

The Montagnais of Canada.

It is a significant fact that, although even the faintest trace of Indian's blood predominates over that of the more effemenate yet conquering blood of Europeans, yet the pure blooded Indians have almost disappeared, while the half breeds now compose the Canadian tribes. The disappearance of the Indians must be due to some psychological influence rather than to any adverse material conditions. Even here, under the best attainable relations with civilization and the least possible change of habits, they are diminishing about as fast as our abused tribes. Scrofula and smallpox are their most common diseases, and they injure their health by unnecessary exposure, overloading on the carries, inordinate feasting and fasting, and excessive labor in running down reindeer and moose; and their losses are not made up by their small families.

Sickness is much dreaded, and if one or two die in a place any one else who is indisposed thinks he also is to die, and the others gather about and express the same opinion. Those writers ever who assert that insanity and deformity are unknown among them; they have a superstition that an evil spirit is taking possession of such persons, to change them into a supernatural creature that will wander about the woods and devour men. They therefore strangle the demented and many of the ill formed.—C. H. Farnham in Harper's Magazine.

Feeding Young Fish.

Mr. F. Lugrin, of Geneva, has discovered a method of feeding young fish of the trout and salmonoid varieties. Great difficulty has hitherto been experienced in carrying the young fish through the first year of their existence, the artificial food not being sufficiently nutritious, often costly and involving constant care and attention. Mr. Lugrin's invention consists in a material which, when spread on the bottom of a tank, spontaneously produces myriads of minute organisms (daphniæ, cyclops, limnæ, etc.) When one tank is depleted the fish are driven off to another pasture similarly prepared. The first tank, at the end of a few weeks, is again swarming with organic life.

Explosive Naphtha Gas.

Two German experimenters find that the illuminating power of naphtha gas is reduced one-half by 20 per cent. of air. The mixture becomes explosive when it contains from about five to eighteen volumes of air to one of gas.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Running Rapids in Canada.

The running of rapids is the climax of the voyageur's adventurous life. Even the most experienced voyageur changes color with excitement when he feels the canoe crouch and spring, sway and dart over the first swells of a rapid. The voyageurs that I have known all possessed keen observation, a cool judgment, and a decisive turn of mind. In a small canoe of, say twelve feet, without much load, a man alone will kneel on the bottom about one-third of her length from the stern, and paddle down a rapid pretty well. But the typical crew in an eighteen foot canoe consists of a captain in the bow and a helmsman in the stern. —C. H. Farnham in Harper's Magazine.

The Portland District Methodist campmeeting at Old Orchard closed on the evening of the 10th inst., with a sermon by Principal Ricker of the Great Falls high school, followed by a service of prayer. The Old Orchard Campmeeting Association has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Rev. W. S. Jones of Woodfords; secretary, Rev. S. F. Weatherbee of West Kennebunk; treasurer, Rev. T. P. Adams of South Portland; board of managers, Rev. L. H. Bean of South Portland, Rev. Israel Luce of South Berwick, Rev. A. W. Pattle of Saco, Sylvester Moulton of Eliot, C. K. Ladd of Portland. The association voted to hold the next annual campmeeting the last week in August.

To the Delicate and Malarious.

The most incredulous are convinced of the virtues of Aunt Rachael's Malarial Bitters upon a trial of them. Their base is Speer's port wine, with herbs and roots so favorably known to the medical profession and the community at large as the best cure for malaria. They are all that can be desired by the most feeble victims of malaria.

Hay fever sufferers ought to know of its efficacy. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me as a preventive to hay fever. Have been using it since the 9th of August and have found it a specific for that much dreaded disease. For ten years I have been a great sufferer from August 9th till frost, and have tried many alleged remedies, but Ely's Cream Balm is the only preventive I have ever found. —F. B. Ainsworth, publisher, Indianapolis, Ind.

European astronomers on the 10th inst. discovered Faye's comet. Three comets, two of them (Encke's and Faye's) periodical, were discovered last week.

The many remarkable cures Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes are sufficient proof that it does possess peculiar curative powers.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do? —and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

From Birth to the Grave

We carry with us certain physical traits, as we do certain mental characteristics. Insomuch that psychologists have striven to designate by generic titles certain temperaments—as the billious, the nervous, the lymphatic. The individual with a sallow complexion is set down as billious, often rightly so. If the saffron in the hue of his skin is traceable to bile in the blood, its presence in the wrong place instead of the liver, will also be evinced by fur on the tongue, pain beneath the right ribs and through the right shoulder-blade, sick headache, constipation, flatulence and indigestion. For the relief of this very common, but not essentially perilous complaint, there is no more genial and thorough remedy than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is also a beneficent tonic and strength promoter, and a widely esteemed remedy for and preventive of fever and ague, rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles.

Vigor and Vitality

Are quickly given to every part of the body by Hood's Sarsaparilla. That tired feeling is entirely overcome. The blood is purified, enriched, and vitalized, and carries health instead of disease to every organ. The stomach is toned and strengthened, the appetite restored. The kidneys and liver are roused and invigorated. The brain is refreshed, the mind made clear and ready for work. Try it.

How Adamson's Balsam Does Such Good.

It expels the mucous from the throat and the air passages of the head, and lessenses the mucous membrane. It alleys inflammation, puts a stop to tickling in the throat and coughing, and enables the patient to rest.

Young, old, and middle aged, all experience the wonderfully beneficial effects of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young children, suffering from sore eyes, sore ears, scald head, or with any scrofulous taint, become healthy and strong by the use of this medicine. Six bottles, $5.

Gunner Robert Sommers is ordered from the Galena to the naval academy.

Seymour Thatcher, M. D., of Hermon, N. Y., says Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry cures a cough by loosening and clearing the lungs and allaying irritation, thus removing the cause instead of drying up the cough and leaving the cause behind.

Lieut. Yorke Noel and Gunner Wm. Wilson, attached to the Vermont, have been granted a month leave.

It Is Useless

For young ladies who are troubled with freckles, pimples, moth and tan and a bad skin generally to use liquid paints or dry powders, for they only make the skin look well for the time being. To have a good complexion you must have pure blood. Use Sulphur Bitters and your skin will be fair and your complexion rosy.—Young Ladies' Magazine.

He held one-twentieth of No. 10,445, which won the capital prize of $300,000. He got the money immediately by depositing his ticket with Ball, Hutchings & Co., without even having to pay any discount or exchange.—Galveston (Tex.) News, July 7th.

DRINKING WARM BLOOD.

Consumptives Who Swallow a Pint Each Day—Of Doubtful Benefit.

She was a slight, pale girl, and though the air was balmy, a shiver ran through her frame. As she put the silver goblet, which anon had been filled with hot blood, down on the blood besmeared board it could be seen that the vessel was empty. The maiden with the pallid cheeks smacked her lips and then said, in a low, sweet voice, to the burly butcher before her:

"That blood tasted especially good today."

"Will you have another, miss?"

"Yes, I think I will."

The butcher disappeared, but he was back in an instant. "That will just make a pint today," he remarked, as he poured the dark life fluid, rich and reeking, into the girl's silver goblet. She drank it with apparent gusto. Then she turned, without speaking a word, left the gloomy building, and a moment later was whirling homeward in a carriage.

It was early morn. The sun had risen but a short span above the horizon, and its golden rays fell slantingly on the stock yards and on the ungainly dimensions of the slaughter house on Halsted and Forty-second streets, where the killing of cattle had just been resumed. The young lady with the consumptive look had merely done what a great many others in search of restored health have done before her, and are doing every day—drank the blood of freshly slaughtered animals in the belief that its invigorating, nourishing properties will cure them of their ills and that this healthy blood will take the place of the thin, serous fluid they themselves have lost. The young lady is the only daughter of wealthy parents living on Prairie avenue. She goes to the slaughter house every morning before breakfast and drinks from half a pint to a pint of blood.

"I guess it's doing her good," said the foreman, who had waited on her. "She doesn't look so pale now as she did a month ago. She was looking like a shadow, just ready to waste away, the first time I saw her. She told me she had been dissipating too much last winter, going to balls and parties and not getting her regular sleep, and living under too much excitement. She'll pull through, though, I have no doubt."

This young woman is one of a score or more who indulge regularly in the same practice. Oddly enough, it is not the large slaughter houses in the stock yards themselves, but the smaller ones outside the gates to which those debilitated or consumptive sufferers go as to a Mecca of promise. There are a half dozen slaughter houses on Archer avenue and Halsted street and the other thoroughfares around. They are away from the rough crush and bustle of the stock yards, uninfested by the whoop and yell of the cowboy and the coarse oaths of the drovers. To these the timid women in search of blood repair, and there they drink their fill. A few of them go there later in the day, but the most of them are on hand in the early morning. Men, too, and boys may be seen on the same errand. Some of the experiences had by the butchers at the slaughter houses with these queer customers are quite pathetic, some again the reverse.

"About three years ago," said the boss butcher at a huge establishment, "a lawyer began to come here regularly to drink beef's blood. I can't give you his name, although it is one well enough known in the city. He had been a hard worker and a high liver, and his mental and physical powers all of a sudden began to give way to an alarming extent. Symptoms which threatened consumption began to appear, and he consulted the most eminent physicians in town. They said he was overworked and needed rest. But they could not give him relief. He went to New York and put himself into the hands of a specialist. But his condition from bad became worse. He came back to Chicago. On the cars a man told him he ought to try blood at the slaughter houses. He gave up business altogether, bought himself a horse, practiced a great deal with dumb bells, and lived very plainly. Every morning he started from home at 5 o'clock and took a long ride on horseback. He came here regularly at 7 o'clock and drank from a half pint to a whole pint of fresh blood, took plenty of exercise at home and out of doors, and retired to bed early and at a regular hour. When I saw him first he looked like a man about to die—with hollow eyes, sunken cheeks and listless gait. Within six months he was strong, active, and full of life and vim. He resumed his business, and can again work as hard as ever without injuring himself in the least. But he is still taking plenty of exercise, and I see him every once in a while riding on a bicycle in the park."

"Have you known many instances of this kind?" was asked.

"Well, no. To tell you the truth about it, I don't think it was the blood that cured that lawyer. His altered manner of living is what did it. I remember the case of a lady who used to come to the slaughter house regularly and drink a pint of blood every day. It didn't do her a particle of good. I also knew the case of a young fellow, a student at one of the colleges, who had been taken with consumption. He was so weak that he had to be assisted up the stairs into the slaughter house. But it didn't help him. After awhile he stopped coming, and the next thing I heard of him he was dead. For persons who are really consumptive I don't believe any amount of blood would do. But persons who are simply debilitated, with proper diet and exercise and regular living, are much benefited by drinking blood."—Chicago Herald.

The Death of Cleopatra.

Dr. Viaud Grand-Marais, of Nantes, has been holding an inquest on the sudden death of Cleopatra. He rejects the theory that her death was caused by the bite of a viper. She was accustomed to test the effects of various poisons on her slaves, in order to ascertain which caused the easiest death. Having shown that no viper was found in the room of the fair suicide, that her body presented no traces of bites, and that her two maid servants were found dead or dying at the foot of her bed, he comes to the conclusion that her death was caused by carbonic oxide.—Bulletin General de Therapeutique.

Poisons of the Toilet.

The modern toilet artist deals in the strongest drugs, poisons and stimulants. She will offer you gentian and cocoa as fillips to the nervous force, and genteel "pick-me-ups," and women will take them, ignorant that they are spending life double tides, and using up in two or three brilliant years the nervous force that should carry them safely through a score. You are offered corrosive sublimate (under another and prettier name) as a face wash, sovereign for refining the complexion, and you may buy arsenic bonbons to produce the blanc mat admired in certain circles, and overlay your face with lead lotions and powders, which make short work of paralyzing the muscles and painting the dreaded "blue line" of lead poisoning on the gums and lips. Foolish girls see the dead white actress' complexion worn by venturesome creatures, who would sign their souls away, supposing them to own such things, for a new grace, and feel sure there can't be any harm in it, for she looks lovely, and says she never felt better in her life. But they do not see the terrible closing experience of such lives of folly, which are known only to doctors and agonized friends. Idiocy, dropsy, are the kindest finale, but death in some form is the penalty you must all pay who begin the arsenic habit. You hear that bismuth powders and lotions are harmless, and they appear so in nine cases out of ten. But the effect in the unlucky tenth case is so much like poisoning no one can tell the difference. But few stop to think that the sallow, deadened complexion left in a few years by the use of bismuth powders and washes is produced by atrophy of the skin vessels, and is, in fact, death at the surface.—Shirley Dare's Letter.

The Luxury of Today.

Now, the growth of luxury for the last half century has been very great and very general. We do not merely mean that the rate of living has advanced. This of itself is not necessarily to be deplored in any class, and in some classes is a matter for serious congratulation. That an agricultural laborer, for instance, should be able to procure more food, better clothing, better housing, and better education for his children than he could fifty years ago is a matter to rejoice over, and a state of things to secure by every proper means. What we mean is, that the scale of comfort deemed necessary by very class has enormously grown. Take the upper classes. The great houses throughout the country are administered in a style the increase of which is quite disproportionate to the growth of income of their owners. The expenditure on far fetched foods and most recherche wines, the most costly amusements, has vastly developed. And the tendency is ever upward. Young men begining life try to start where their fathers left off. Some quarter of a century ago there was a discussion in the newspapers as to the prudence or otherwise of young persons in the upper classes marrying on an income of 300 a year. Three times that income would be now considered inadequate by the critics who conducted the discussion.—Quarterly Review.

San Francisco's Mint Chimney.

In 1856 the old mint chimney was taken down and the rubbish deposited on a vacant lot, where the vigilance committee had their fort (Fort Gunnybags), and near which they hanged Casey, Cora, Hetherington and Brace. Some men poking among this rubbish found gold sticking to the scattered bricks and mortar? An excitement was organized immediately, and for a few days the lot was alive with men and rockers, washing out the debris of the old mint chimney. How did the gold get into the brick and mortar? It flew up the chimney when melted in a sublimated form, and, being condensed into a solid before reaching the top, collected on the inside, as found. These city gold washings were as much of a novelty to many San Francisians as they would be in New York, for the nearest gold mines are 150 miles distant from San Francisco, and thousands in that city had never been to them.—Prentice Mulford in New York Star.

Fashion in Canine Pets.

The fashion in pet dogs is as varying as in wearing apparel. A certain breed will be all the rage for a few years and then it is supplanted by another. For instance, two years ago the pug was the most popular pet in the canine family, but now his star is on the wane and he falls back to the rear of the procession. While the pug is a stylish looking dog and decidedly aristocratic in his behavior, he has quite a phlegmatic temperament; but since he has begun to run counter to fashion's decree he will degenerate and become as cor . as other dogs. Five or ten dollars will buy a fine pug pup now. Two years ago $50 would not purchase the same dog. One thing in the pug's favor will always make him a popular household pet—there has never yet been a case of hydrophobia from the bite of one of these little pets, and they are decidedly kind and affectionate to the children.—Globe-Democrat.

Female Street Car Conductors.

They have female street car conductors in Valparaiso, and the street cars are double deckers. The average Chilian is a rough character, haughty, arrogant, impertinent and abusive, and the country has more intemperance than any other in South America, and quarrels and murder. The young bloods flirt with the female conductors and make the cars a nuisance. These female conductors wear a uniform of blue flannel, with a Panama hat and white pinafore with many pockets, reaching from the breast to the ankles. The Chilian women are not pretty, and many of them are of a Saxon mixture. Criminals and castaway women wear a kind of nun costume, and are thus advertised. Women who have been false to their marriage vows sometimes go to a convent and whip themselves literally.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

To Have a Big Globe.

Students of the earth's surface will be anxious to see the huge globe that is to be exhibited next year in the Champs de Mars, Paris. It will rotate properly on an axis, and will be accurately constructed on a scale of one-millionth. Even at that it will be a tremendous thing and give considerable of an idea of the appearance of the world we live in.—Chicago Herald.

WACO, TEXAS, May 9, 1888—Gentlemen: The wife of one of my customers was terribly afflicted with a loathsome skin disease, that covered her whole body. She was confined to her bed for several years by this affliction, and could not help herself at all. She could not sleep from a violent itching and stinging of the skin. The disease baffled the skill of the physicians who treated it. Her husband began finally giving his wife Swift's Specific, and she commenced to improve almost immediately, and in a few weeks she was apparently well. She is now a hearty, fine-looking lady, with no trace of the affliction left. Yours very truly,

INAUGURATION

Of The New City Government.

Mayor Hodgdon's Address In Full,

The new City Government assembled at the Court House at 10 o'clock this forenoon, and the record of the convention declaring the election of Mayor Hodgdon was read. The oath of office being administered to the Mayor elect by Mercer Goodrich, Esq., the oath was then administered to the Aldermen and Council elect. The convention then rose.

IN COUNCIL.

The Council was called to order by the Clerk and Rufus M. Adams, chosen Pres. Pro tem,. Dennis J. Sullivan was then elected President and Chas. E. Senter, Clerk.

IN CONVENTION.

Mercer Goodrich was elected City Clerk. The Mayor then delivered his inaugural address, whereupon the convention rose and both bodies adjourned to Thursday evening, Aug. 16th, at 8 o'clock p. m. Following is Mayor Hodgdon's address in full:

GENTLEMEN OF THE CITY COUNCILS:

In assuming for a second term the duties of Chief Executive officer of this municipality, I cannot forbear expressing my sincere acknowledgements to my fellow-citizens for the bestowal of their confidence, in again selecting me by an exceptionally large majority of their suffrages, for this honorable and responsible position.

Encouraged by this manifestation of their approval of my past official service, and animated with a desire for the advancement of the interests of our beautiful city and the welfare of her people, I enter upon the discharge of my duties with renewed energy and zeal.

A custom, as old as our charter, makes it incumbent on me at this time to communicate to you the present condition of our municipal affairs, and to recommend such measures for your consideration as the interests of the city seem to demand.

This will necessarily require to a certain extent a brief review of the work of the year just closed, supplemented with suggestions relative to the labor that is before us.

First among the matters which should attract the attention of a prudent people is the condition of their FINANCES.

The bonded debt of the city is $187,500. Of this amount $50,000 is payable Jan. 1, 1889. It will be for you to consider and determine a suitable plan for meeting this indebtedness.

My predecessor in his first message to the City Councils, recommended that a portion of the stock in the Portsmouth & Dover Railroad belonging to the city be sold, and the proceeds applied to this purpose, a suggestion which I deem worthy of your careful consideration. Should you decide to again fund this debt for the full amount of the bonds for a term of years, the credit of the City will enable you to secure the loan at a greatly reduced rate of interest, and would result in a decrease of one thousand dollars in the annual interest account of the City.

The amount appropriated by the City Councils for the year ending December 31, 1888 is $136,095.70. The most important items being as follows:

State and County Taxes	$37,995.70
Schools	22,000.00
Streets	10,000.00
Fire Deparment	8000.00
Streets Lights	7000.00
Police & Watch	7000.00
Interest	6200.00
Salaries	5700.00
Discount on Taxes	5000.00
Support of the Poor	4500.00
Repairs on Roads and Bridges	2800.00
Improvements, Sagamore Road	2500.00
Dedication of Soldiers and Sailors Monument	2500.00
Improvements at Goodwin Park	2000.00
Rent and repairs of School Houses	1500.00
Public Library	1250.00
Sewers	1000.00

To meet these expenditures, the city depends upon its apportionment of the State insurance, railroad and Savings bank taxes (amounting for the year 1887 to $28,869.24) and the amount realized from taxation.

The tax levy for the present year is $116,069.77 against $11,806.68 for 1887. The advance is due to an addition of $7,261.36 to our State and County taxes. Notwithstanding this increase, the erection of new dwellings, the enlargement of our manufacturing industries and the consequent increase in population, City that the Assessors were able to return an increase of $283,591.00 in the taxable property of the City, and the burden of taxation has been diminished.

The uncollected taxes due the City are as follows:

For 1874	$231.19
" 1884	177.61
" 1885	159.86
" 1886	464.33
1887	1,118.82
1888	34,351.69

At the beginning of the year, January 1, 1888, the City Treasurer had on hand a cash balance of $25,749.59
Receipts to Aug. 11. 152,616.65

178,366.24
Expenditures to Aug. 11. 124,998.66

Cash on hand to Aug. 11. 53,367.58

FIRE DEPARTMENT.

This important branch of the public service still maintains the excellent standard which it has attained in former years; its equipment has recently been strengthened by the purchase of two thousand feet of extra hose, a deficiency for some time existing.

I feel assured that under the direction of the present Board of Engineers our Fire Department is in a state of preparation for the most efficient work, so far as its membership and apparatus are concerned.

The supply of water, however, in some localities is inadequate and in others entirely wanting for the extinguishment of fires occurring therein.

Upon this subject I will reiterate the recommendations which I made one year ago to the late City Councils, earnestly hoping they will receive your early and favorable consideration; that the reservoirs on Haymarket and Market squares, which can be exhausted by a single steamer in less than two hours, should be connected by larger feeding pipes, with the main pipes of the Portsmouth Aqueduct.

A reservoir should be located on Court place between Court and State streets, and another on Cabot or Rockingham streets to be connected with the large reservoir on Dover street belonging to the Portsmouth Aqueduct Co.

I would also recommend that a large reservoir be constructed on the low land near Miller Avenue.

This could be done at a comparatively small expense and readily supplied with water from local springs, which would protect a large and rapidly growing section of the city, at present entirely unprovided with water for the extinguishment of fires.

STREETS.

Within the limits of our city there are fifty-six miles of streets and roads, most of which are constantly travelled by the public and many of them are made on soil naturally unfitted for their construction, or narrowed on their margins by ledges which also in numerous places protrude through the road beds.

To keep them all in such condition as the public now demand, is almost impossible with any reasonable appropriation, and good judgment should therefore be exercised in the management of this always expensive department.

The expenditures upon our thoroughfares during the past year, have been unusually large, caused by the heavy snow storms of winter, and the extent of the repairs and permanent improvements, which have been made on them.

Among the improvements in our public streets I name in particular, Water street, so long avoided by the travelling public, by reason of the rough and uneven cobble stones with which it was paved many years ago. This street has been covered from its junction with State street to Liberty bridge with crushed and pulverized stone, a work completed in a most thorough and satisfactory manner. I would advise that the remainder of this street during the year be covered with the same material.

SAGAMORE ROAD.

In the month of February last a petition signed by prominent residents and tax-payers was presented to the Board of Mayor and Aldermen for the widening and strengthening of Sagamore road north of Creek, and the reconstruction of Sagamore bridge.

To properly comply with the request of the petitioners and render the road and bridge convenient and safe for the passage of vehicles of all kinds, required that a new bridge should be constructed eight feet higher above the water, with a corresponding raising of the grade of the road abutting, and also on the eastern margin of the road it was necessary to cut away and remove a ledge nearly three hundred feet in length with an average width of twenty five feet and height of twelve feet.

The board upon the examination of the proposed improvement were unanimously of the opinion that the petition should be granted, and accordingly work was commenced on the 19th of April and so far advanced that on the 30th of June the road and bridge were opened to the public.

The expense of an improvement of such a magnitude has necessarily been considerable, yet the labor was performed by our own citizens and the money with the exception of that expended for the material used in the construction of the bridge has remained in the city. When we consider that this road is the shortest route to that part of the Sea shore which has in recent years become a favorite summer resort, and that for at least three months in the year, it has much the largest share of the travel to and from the business portion of our city, together with the remarkable improvement effected in the appearance and convenience of this thoroughfare by reason of the work accomplished, I believe any fair minded citizen will say that the money has been wisely expended.

into six districts, each under the management of a surveyor.

While this system may perhaps be well adapted to sparsely settled towns through which there is but comparatively a small amount of travel, our suburban roads are constantly in use, and should conform as far as circumstances will admit to the system adopted in the compact part of the city.

I would therefore suggest the enactment of an ordinance extending the jurisdiction of the Street Commissioner over the present districts of the surveyors, for the reason that the Commissioner who is supposed to be an expert in the art of road building may personally direct the work to be performed in the several districts.

I would not advise that the office of the surveyors be abolished, but that they be subordinate to the Street Commissioner, who should have a general supervision over the entire system of our public highways.

SEWERS.

The city is unprovided with any regular system of sewerage and consequently is freed from the heavy bonded obligations of that class, which so largely swell the liabilities of other cities of an equal size.

The modern improvements of late years so extensively introduced into our buildings of all kinds, have so much increased the amount of waste water for which there is no sufficient outlet, that petitions are frequently before the Board of Mayor and Alderman, for the construction or enlargement of public sewers in various sections of the city.

This important subject upon which is so greatly depending the health and comfort of our community is deserving of your careful attention.

POLICE.

The Police force as at present constituted consists of one marshal or chief, two assistant marshals, one night captain, seven night patrolmen and twelve supernumary officers. There are also nine special officers without pay, who are permanently stationed in different parts of the city.

During the past year a new system of regulations for the government of the force has been adopted, by the rigid enforcement of which, I am pleased to state, it has become a model of discipline and efficiency.

The Chief and his subordinates have been untiring in their efforts to preserve the good order of the city, and to protect the property of her citizens.

No stronger commendation of the vigilance and efficiency of the police department can be given than the fact that during the entire year, there has not been a single case of robbery reported in our community, and one only of burglary, the culprit being soon arrested by our officers, and all the property stolen restored to the owner.

STREET LIGHTS.

The city is at present lighted by 25 gas, 113 naptha and 51 electric lights, at an annual cost of about $7000.

The electric lights are furnished by a contract made with the Portsmouth Electric Light Company in September, 1886, at the rate of $100 annually per light. This contract will expire in September, 1889.

I am of the opinion, from information obtained from various sources, that the amount per light is much larger than is now paid by other cities; before the expiration of the contract and during the current year, some measures should be taken for a reduction of the rate now paid.

SCHOOLS.

A Board of Instruction consisting of the Mayor as chairman ex-officio, and twelve members elected for a term of thee years by the Board of Mayor and Alderman, are vested by the city charter, with the exclusive control of our public schools.

It is our duty however to appropriate the money required for their support and to provide suitable buildings for the accommodation of the pupils.

One item of expenditure connected with this department, should demand your attention; it is the large sum of money annually paid for repairs on our antiquated school houses.

This has been an incessant drain upon the city treasury, with little or no prospect of any cessation in the future and amounting during the last twenty years to upward of fifty thousand dollars.

To obviate in a measure this constant outlay and to meet the necessities of the present generation, I would recommend the erection of one centrally located school building of brick and stone, of sufficient capacity to seat five hundred scholars, at an expense not to exceed thirty thousand dollars, a part of which might be derived from the sale of the school houses on State, School and Hanover streets, which have become unsuited for school purposes.

I would also recommend that the lease of the academy building be terminated, which can be done at the option of the city upon one year's notice to the lessors. The annual amount of the rental ($450) would pay one-third of the interest upon the cost of a new structure.

Such a building as I have indicated for construction would be both an ornament to our city and afford to our youth educational facilities equal to those of other cities, which, I regret to admit, we are at present far behind.

The fact that two of the school houses which I have mentioned are now under indictment by the grand jury of this county as common nuisances, certainly reflects upon the reputation of our city, and should prompt proposition which I have advanced.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The utility of the Public Library as an auxiliary to our schools in the cause of education is so clearly manifest that any suggestions of my own, commending it to your generous and cordial support would be superfluous.

By the provisions of the city ordinances, while this institution is under the management of a Board of Trustees, the appropriations for its maintenance comes from the City Councils.

The number of volumes in the library exceed eight thousand, and are increasing year by year, through the generosity of private individuals and legacies of deceased residents.

CITY FARM.

The City Farm is now reduced to forty-six acres, of valuable land: Its extensive buildings, inside, are generally in a dilapidated condition, and are much larger than necessary for the accommodation of the present small number of inmates.

Under the careful management of the present Superintendent the income derived from the farm has been in excess of the expenditures, and so long as the city is not subjected to any expense in holding this property, I would not advise its sale.

THE POOR.

The unfortunate poor are always the worthy subjects of our public charities, and liberal provisions should be made to relieve the distress of those living among us whom misfortune has deprived of the comforts and necessities of life.

GOODWIN PARK.

On the Fourth of July last there was unveiled and presented by the contributions of our citizens to the city an elegant monument of bronze zinc, erected in Goodwin Park to commemorate the services of the sons of Portsmouth who participated in the war for the preservation of the Union.

The grounds of the park, although graded, are not at the present time arranged in a manner to correspond with the imposing structure which they surround.

As this park, by reason of the beautiful and interesting structure which adorns it, will be largely frequented by our residents and visitors from abroad, I would suggest that the Park Commissioner be authorized to complete the arrangement of the grounds as soon as practicable.

CONCLUSION.

The exposition of our municipal affairs on an occasion of this kind must of necessity be brief. I have, therefore, reviewed before you and in a general manner those topics only which involve the leading public interests committed to our care.

And now, gentlemen, as we enter upon the discharge of the duties of the several positions to which we have been assigned by the will of the people, let us remember that we are their sworn agents, and that all of our official acts must be subjected to their revision and judgment.

To meet their unqualified approval should therefore be our constant aim and purpose: with this object attained we may conscientiously feel at the expiration of our official terms, that our labors to advance the prosperity and welfare of our city have not been in vain.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." MR. BLAINE IN PORTSMOUTH.

Hon. James G. Blaine passed through this city via the Boston & Maine railroad at three o'clock Tuesday afternoon, he and his party being in the private car of Hon. Payson Tucker of the Maine Central railroad, at the rear of the train. There was a crowd of from 2000 to 3000 people at the station to see the man who has such a wondrous hold on the regards of millions of the American people, and much disappointment was caused by the necessary stopping of the train in such a position as to leave the special car a long way outside the station, so that many hundreds were unable to see him, not being able to force their way out. The committee of the republican club, Col. Sise, Col. Hackett and President Moore, had boarded the train at North Hampton, and on the stopping of the train Mr. Blaine, in response to loud cheers and calls, appeared on the platform and was presented to the crowd by Mr. Moore. In a few remarks Mr. Blaine expressed his appreciation of the honor shown him, shook hands with a number of old friends whom he recognized, and the train moved on. It was a remarkable ovation to a remarkable man. He looked to be in excellent health, and could easily have been recognized from his pictures, by those who had never met him before.

BASE BALL.

About 400 persons attended the game on the South street grounds, Tuesday afternoon, between the Worcester and Portsmouth clubs. It was a good game, and abounded in fine plays, the principal feature being a home run by Clare while three men were on bases. The detailed score is as follows:

POCKET PICKING.

A number of persons are reported to have been relieved of their valuables at the railroad station on Tuesday afternoon, probably by a detachment of the swell mob travelling on the train to which the car carrying Mr. Blaine was attached. Among the victims we understand were Mr. Thomas K. Locke, who had a valuable watch stolen, and Hon. John Dame, who had his pocketbook pilfered. Mr. Dame did not lose much money, but there was a valuable and highly-prized Masonic jewel in the pocketbook.

JOHN S. MOULTON'S COMEDY CO.

On Monday evening next the well known manager, John S. Moulton, formerly connected for many years with the Bennett & Moulton Opera Co., will present his noted comedy company to the theatre-going public of this city. The company includes some well known artistes, among them Mr. Jay Hunt, formerly associated with the famous Kiralfy stage manager for many years. Reserved seat sale opens next Friday morning; get your tickets early.

PERSONAL.

Mr. William Hodgdon, supervisor of music in the public schools of St. Louis, is on a visit to relatives in this vicinity, among them Rev. Samuel Hoyt of Newington, and Col. Charles A. Sinclair and Mr. Josiah F. Adams of this city.

Hon. Wm. Pitt Kellogg of New Orleans, formerly United States senator from Louisiana, is registered at the Rockingham house.

Mr. J. N. Tarlton and wife of Everett, Mass., are visiting at Mr. Woodbury Scavey's on Pleasant street.

Mr. William Odiorne and wife of Somerville, Mass., are visiting Mr. Odiorne's brother, Eben N. Odiorne of this city.

James F. Hartshorn, Esq., and family, of Swampscot, Mass., are visiting relatives on Lafayette road.

Carpenter Samuel N. Whitehouse, U. S. N., retired, of New York, is making his annual visit to this city, and is accompanied by his son, Samuel S. Whitehouse, Esq., a practicing lawyer of New York city. Mr. Whitehouse learned his trade with the late George Raynes of this city, and recites many reminiscences of the days of his apprenticeship.

Hon. Alexander Junkins of Greenland, formerly of Eliot, Me., who was a member of the Maine senate in 1855, when Hon. James G. Blaine attended its sessions as reporter for several prominent newspapers of Maine, was in the throng at the railroad station in this city on Tuesday afternoon to greet the great American statesman as he passed through the city on his way to his eastern home. Mr. Junkins was instantly recognized and warmly greeted by his old acquaintance.

MARITIME NOTES.

The steamer Oceanic took large loads of passengers to the Shoals on Tuesday.

The schooner Emily C. Dennison, Garland master, from Bangor for Boston, put into the lower harbor on the afternoon of the 13th inst., having had her main boom broken, mainsail split and jibs blown away.

The schooner Melville, Gross, from Bangor for New York with lumber, in entering the lower harbor for shelter on Monday, the 13th, struck on the ledge which makes out to the westward of Wood island, and came off with the loss of her forefoot, and leaking badly. She was towed up to Russell's wharf, and a survey will be called.

The big schooner yacht Sea Crest, and the mammoth steam yacht Sagamore, sailed on Tuesday from this port for Bar Harbor.

The U. S. S. Despatch, Cowles, remained in the lower harbor on Tuesday evening. Comdr. Cowles is said to be a son-in-law of the "noble old Roman," Thurman, of red bandana fame.

Grand illumination at York beach this evening. Special rates via Y. H. & B. R. R.; see advertisement.

Two barges with members of Canton Senter will leave Odd Fellows' hall this morning for Hampton, returning after the anniversary exercises.

Commodore Francis M. Gunnell, medical director United States navy, and chief of the bureau of medicine and surgery, paid an official visit to this navy yard on Tuesday, and received the customary salute.

Roland Reed, the comedian, who is now playing a short engagement at the Museum in Boston, will appear at Music hall, this city, on Wednesday evening, Aug. 29th.

Mr. George O. Wilson of Kittery Foreside has hoisted over the entrance to his store a flag bearing the names of Harrison and Morton, Burleigh for governor of Maine, and Reed for congressman from the first Maine district.

The Eastern railroad station at Salmon Falls was broken into on the night of the 13th inst., but the thieves got little of value except about $10 worth of tickets.

Excursions Direct to Southern California.

Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb announce two autumn excursions direct to Southern California, the dates of departure being Monday, September 10th, and Monday, October 8th. These trips are intended for persons who wish to reach Southern California by the most direct and expeditious route. The transit will be made in the most comfortable manner possible, and the halts by the way will be only for rest. The period of the year selected is when travelling is a delight and when detentions from storms or other causes are least likely to occur. In short it is the most desirable part of the whole year for a transcontinental journey. Persons who join these parties can dispose of their time as they prefer while in California. Hotel coupons which supply board at the leading hotels at reduced rates, may be availed of if desired, and the tickets cover side trips everywhere. The return tickets are good until next summer, and there is a choice of five different routes eastward. In addition to these trips, Messrs. Raymond & Whitcomb have autumn excursions to the Pacific Coast via the Yellowstone National Park, and to Colorado. Descriptive circulars may be obtained of W. Raymond, 296 Washington street, opposite School

On Tuesday forenoon Mr. Thomas Morrissey, while at work in the basement of Boynton's bottling establishment on Bow street, hearing a commotion looked out of the window, and saw about 500 feet away an object in the water which he took to be a drowning boy. Hurrying to the Spring market wharf he jumped into a boat, and pulling with all his might reached and caught the boy, then about fifty yards out from the wharf where he fell overboard, as he was going down for the last time. The boy, a son of Mrs. Robeck, is about nine years old. Mr. Morrissey was so exhausted by his violent exertions to reach the spot in time that he was obliged to go home to rest.

It is stated that Mr. Valentine Hett, who last week bought the Sherburne place on Christian Shore for $2500, has been offered $4000 for the property, and refused to accept it.

The salute of eleven guns from the navy yard shortly before noon on Tuesday was not, as many persons in this city supposed, fired in honor of the inauguration of the new democratic city government of Portsmouth, but was in recognition of an official visit of the surgeon general of the navy.

The democratic campaign flag at Kittery Foreside has not yet been raised. There is a grand rumpus among the faithful of the navy yard village, which has resulted in repeated postponements of the flag raising, notice of the last postponement, "until further notice," having been given on Tuesday; it had been previously announced that the flag was to be raised Tuesday evening, sure pop.

L. E. Hanson's jewelry store in South Berwick was burglarized on the night of Aug. 13th, the safe blown open, and over $2000 worth of goods stolen.

What a Time

People formerly had, trying to swallow the old-fashioned pill with its film of magnesia vainly disguising its bitterness; and what a contrast to Ayer's Pills, that have been well called "medicated sugar-plums"—the only fear being that patients may be tempted into taking too many at a dose. But the directions are plain and should be strictly followed.

J. T. Teller, M. D., of Chittenango, N. Y., expresses exactly what hundreds have written at greater length. He says: "Ayer's Cathartic Pills are highly appreciated. They are perfect in form and coating, and their effects are all that the most careful physician could desire. They have supplanted all the Pills formerly popular here, and I think it must be long before any other can be made that will at all compare with them. Those who buy your pills get full value for their money."

"Ayer's Pills outsell all similar preparations. The public having once used them, will have no others."—Berry, Venable & Collier, Atlanta, Ga.

There will be a republican rally and flag raising at North Berwick next Saturday evening. Hon. Thomas B. Reed will address the meeting.

Henry D. Cotson of Barrington, hitherto always a democrat, ran out a Harrison and Morton flag on Saturday evening, Aug. 11th.

Frank E. Upham and his cousin, Frank J. Thrasher, of Boston, summering at Squirrel Island, near Boothbay, Me., went boating Saturday, were capsized, and Upham was drowned. Thrasher got his friend's body ashore on a barren rock, and stopped there with it till daylight Sunday morning, when he swam to Heron island for aid.

PERSONS desiring to have their names placed upon the Register in order to vote at the coming election must comply with the following regulations of the Trustees. "Every holder of Certificates of Indebtedness who desires to have them registered in his name shall present to the Trustees at their office, No. 10 Tremont St., Boston, a written statement signed by him and giving his address and the denomination and number of every certificate of indebtedness claimed to be held by him, and shall if required by said Trustees verify the oath of his holding such certificates and the whole or some other evidence of his title to the reasonable satisfaction of the Trustees; and said Trustees shall endorse with his title shall indorse their approval upon said written statement, and delivered to the holder may thereupon be registered in order at the election. The approval of one of said Trustees shall be sufficient authority for such registration, and no registration after the 15th day of August, 1888, shall be valid without such approval, and no approval shall be granted after the time for closing the Register."

The Voting Register will close at the close of business on the 21st day of August, between which time and the special meeting on the 28th day of August, 1888, no registration will be allowed.

RAYMOND'S VACATION EXCURSIONS.

ALL TRAVELLING EXPENSES INCLUDED.

Parties will leave Boston, Monday, September 10, and Monday, October 8, for Two Grand Trips Direct to

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

These trips are intended for persons who desire to reach Southern California by a direct route and as expeditiously as may be consistent with perfect comfort. The halts by the way are intended for rest. The trips will be carried out upon the same plan that has made our winter excursions of the past few years so acceptable and popular, and ticket-holders will possess all the advantages given in connection with the later excursions in the season of 1888-89. The tickets supply every needed comfort during the transits to and from California, including sleeping-car accommodations, meals, transfers, and board at hotels, but leave the holders to dispose of their time in California in accordance with their own preferences. All travel in Palace Sleeping Cars. The Return Tickets Good until July, 1889, with a Choice of Five Different Routes Eastward from San Francisco or Los Angeles.

In addition to the above, parties will leave September 10 for the Yellowstone National Park, the Pacific Northwest and California, and "Around the Circle" in Colorado; and October 8 for the Pacific Northwest and California and for Colorado. Also Eighteen Autumn Trips to popular Northern and Eastern resorts during the month of September.

Three Summer Dangers.

Three summer dangers menace the household and traveller at every turn. They are climate, food and water. To guard against them requires a ligament, abdomen, and SANFORD'S GINGER.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer complaints, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of cholera morbus,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

As a pure fruit stimulant for the aged, mentally and physically overworked, for delicate females, especially mothers, and as a means of reforming those addicted to an excessive use of alcoholic stimulants, it is invaluable.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Beware of worthless "zingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists and dealers on those who call for and desire only

A DIPLOMAT'S DINNER.

A Plain and Cheap Banquet Where Everybody Was Extremely Well Pleased.

Some years ago an accomplished diplomate at Washington, the representative of a power not of the first importance, expressed his regret to a friend that he could not give dinners, "because," he said, "my government is poor, and I cannot afford it." The conversation occurred at the profuse and splendid table of a rich and courteous host, whose feasts were of great fame, and whose invitations were credentials of admission to the best society. A young diplomatic comrade who sat by heard the remark, and smiled as he said: "My government is poorer than yours, and I am but lately arrived. But what is diplomacy without dinners? and I am going to give one. It will not be like this, but the splendor is not an essential part of the feast. I shall give a plain and cheap dinner, to which I invite you both."

His manner was gay, and his invitation was gayly and gladly accepted because he was one of the delightful men in Washington. His colleague, however, who had spoken first, shrugged his shoulders, and said that, for his part, he couldn't do it; he couldn't ask people to come to his house and eat a poor dinner. "Not so fast," replied his friend; "I didn't say a poor dinner, but a plain and cheap dinner. I hope it will be good, nevertheless, although there may be no baked carp or stewed nightingales' tongues. But come and see."

The young minister of the small and poor kingdom was one of the most accomplished men in Washington. He was known to have corrected a justice of the supreme court in regard to a decision of a United States court in a western state, and to have made the correction in English, which was a foreign tongue to him, but in English so exquisitely chosen and urbanely expressed that the justice was probably unconscious of the mortification of the correction. The young minister had no foolish, fond reserves. "My government is poor, I am poor, we are all poor in my country," he said, "and I and my secretary work like day laborers here in Washington to acquire and to report necessary information to my government." But nobody was more sought; there was nobody whose coming more surely brought pleasure to any circle than that of the young minister.

The day of the dinner came, and a plainer and pleasanter dinner was never known in Washington. Every guest, from the secretary of state and the English envoy to all their neighbors at table, gave every week, indeed, repasts much more magnificent. But the simple dinner, admirably cooked and served, without display of table service, without the carp and nightingales' tongues, but with the enlivening and inspiring charm of the host and the welcome variety of plainness, after the luxurious extravagance and ostentation of the usual dinner, was so fresh and delightful that the satisfaction and pleasure were universal, and the skeptical colleague who had thought great cost essential to a successful dinner owned himself converted, and the next month ventured upon a similar feast, and with the same success.—George William Curtis in Harper's Magazine.

Lifting a Thousand Pounds.

To lift 1,000 pounds on the health lift is no very remarkable feat for a person of average strength, giving sufficient time daily for a few months to practice. Mr. Blaikie learned in this way, at the age of 17, to lift 1,000 pounds after only six months' practice. Those who prefer to lift an actually measured weight will find it necessary to adopt some such plan as was employed by Topham, preparing a framework to bear the weight and standing in its midst, so as to lift the weight by means of symmetrically attached straps. For the body cannot, when at all aslant, bear such a weight as 1,000 pounds.

Whether such exercise is good for the body as a whole depends a good deal on the opportunities which a man has for correcting an abnormal development of the lifting muscles by means of other exercises, increasing the development of other muscles and giving activity as well as strength to the frame.—Richard A. Proctor.

Georgian and Circassian.

The Georgian has a beauty quite different from that of the Circassian. The Circassian is dazzling, queen like and stately. She has a fair skin. She is elegant in form. She is kindly and gentle in voice, but lazy in movement and without spirit. One of her own sex has said: "There is no soul in a Circassian beauty; and as she pillows her pure, pale cheek upon her small dimpled hand, you feel no inclination to arouse her into exertion; you are contented to look upon her and to contemplate her loveliness." The Georgian is a creature with eyes like meteors and teeth almost as dazzling as her eyes. Her mouth does not wear the sweet and unceasing smile of her less vivacious rival. But the proud expression that sits upon finely arched lips accords so well with her stately form and lofty brow that you do not seek to change its character.—Home Journal.

Origin of Color Blindness.

That the origin of color blindness lies in the brain, and not in the eye, has been suggested by Professor Ramsay. While engaged in teaching in Brooklyn some years ago, the principal of a school insisted in treating every case of color as dependent on the will of the pupil. His remedy was the rod. This certainly seemed a tyrannical and unwarranted treatment, but the result was favorable to his theory. Is it possible that a thorough examination will ultimately demonstrate that the fault lies very largely in the shiftless methods of observation which have grown up under the old classical system of education, and which have to a large extent become hereditary?—Science.

The Confectionery of India.

All kinds of India sweetmeats are made of brown sugar, many of them molded into various shapes of birds and beasts. Tubes also are made, filled with honey, and twisted into various forms. Then there are balls of sugar and clarified butter. These confectioneries are soft and melt in the mouth. Those made by the higher caste differ from those made by the lower, so absolute are the laws of caste.—Wide Awake.

Supply of Artesian Wells.

A striking confirmation of the theory of the source of supply of the artesian waters has been observed at Tours, where the water, spouting with great velocity from a well 110 meters in depth, brings up, together with fine sand, fresh water shells and seeds in such a state of preservation as to show that they could not have been more than three or four months on their voyage. Some of the wells of the Wady Rir have also ejected fresh water mollusks, fish and crabs, still living, which must, therefore, have made a still more rapid transit.—Professor G. A. Daubres in Popular Science Monthly.

The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

It may be admitted that large reductions in the duties on imported manufactured goods would produce great distress in many parts of the United States. The free importation of iron, coal and wool would be a great boom to British producers. * * * If it were accompanied with reductions in the tariff upon cotton, woolen and other manufactures the artisans of this country would derive a marked benefit from it.—The Scotsman.

To the Delicate and Malarious.

The most incredulous are convinced of the virtues of Aunt Rachael's Malarial Bitters upon a trial of them. Captains Thomas O. Selfridge and L. A. Beardslee, and Lieut. Comdrs. J. J. Brice and Edward Longnecker, are ordered to the naval war college.

Hay fever sufferers ought to know of its efficacy. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me as a preventive to hay fever. Have been using it since the 9th of August and have found it a specific for that much dreaded disease. For ten years I have been a great sufferer from August 9th till frost, and have tried many alleged remedies, but Ely's Cream Balm is the only preventive I have ever found.—F. B. Ainsworth, publisher, Indianapolis, Ind.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do? —and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor!" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

Commander Charles H. Davis is detached from the Saratoga, and ordered to command the Quinnebaug, now at Nice, on the European station.

Honest.

In these days of adulteration and fraud, in all branches of business and pursuits, it is pleasing to know that there is one medicine prepared which is strictly pure. Such a medicine is Sulphur Bitters in curing scrofula; you can depend on them every time.—W. B. Evarts, A. M., Charleston, S. C.

From Birth to the Grave

We carry with us certain physical traits, as we do certain mental characteristics. Insomuch that psychologists have striven to designate by generic titles certain temperaments—as the billious, the nervous, the lymphatic. The individual with a sallow complexion is set down as billious, often rightly so. If the saffron in the hue of his skin is traceable to bile in the blood, its presence in the wrong place instead of the liver, will also be evinced by fur on the tongue, pain beneath the right ribs and through the right shoulder-blade, sick headache, constipation, flatulence and indigestion. For the relief of this very common, but not essentially perilous complaint, there is no more genial and thorough remedy than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is also a beneficent tonic and strength promoter, and a widely esteemed remedy for and preventive of fever and ague, rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles.

Capt. Robert Boyd, commanding the Richmond, has been granted a month leave.

Don't fill the system with quinine, to prevent or cure fever and ague. Ayer's Ague Cure is the specific for this disease, and leaves no poisons to produce dizziness, deafness, headache, or other disorders.

Gunner John Gaskins is detached from the naval magazine at Fort Mifflin, Pa., and granted three months leave.

How Adamson's Balsam Does Such Good.

It expels the mucous from the throat and the air passages of the head, and cleanses the mucous membrane. It alleys inflammation, puts a stop to tickling in the throat and coughing, and enables the patient to rest.

It Is Useless

For young ladies who are troubled with freckles, pimples, moth and tan and a bad skin generally to use liquid paints or dry powders, for they only make the skin look well for the time being. To have a good complexion you must have pure blood. Use Sulphur Bitters and your skin will be fair and your complexion rosy.—Young Ladies' Magazine.

Comdr. Wm. M. Folger is detached from command of the Quinnebaug on the reporting of his relief, and ordered home.

The favorite washing compound of the day is James Pyle's Pearline. It cleanses fabrics without injury and without the laborious scrubbing necessary with ordinary soap. For sale by grocers.

An Important Element

Of the success of Hood's Sarsaparilla is the fact that every purchaser receives a fair equivalent for his money. The familiar headline "100 Doses One Dollar," stolen by imitators, is original with and true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla. This can easily be proven by any one who desires to test the matter. For real economy, buy only Hood's Sarsaparilla. Sold by all druggists.

A Great Surprise

Is in store for all who use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, the great guaranteed remedy. Would you believe that it is sold on its merits and that any druggist is authorized by the proprietor of this wonderful remedy to give you a sample bottle free? It never fails to cure acute or chronic coughs. All druggists sell Kemp's Balsam. Large bottles 50c and $1. a15

WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is Remedies for Writer's Cramp.

Change all the conditions frequently, the height of the chair or of the table, the kind of paper, using sometimes the smoother, sometimes the rougher sort. Have every description of pen and penholder at hand, and change them frequently. Don't try to write a handsome hand, for that is something that a person who has writer's cramp in perfection cannot do. Be satisfied with legibility, and this there need be no difficulty about. The trouble seems to be a nervous one, and very little things will affect it. The change from paper that is ruled to paper that is not, and vice versa, will often give relief, and even a change from black ink to blue has been known to be beneficial. Of course you must have quill pens in your assortment, but their exclusive use will not help you. A friend who does a great deal of writing has turned to the typewriter for relief, but that is all that it affords. The fingers have got into the cramp habit, and in time the use of the typewriter wearies and stiffens them. Nothing but an infinite variety of appliances, constantly changed, will afford the desired relief.—"Causerie" in Boston Herald.

Dyeing with the Henna Plant.

The lady who is about to undergo the dyeing process is stretched out at full length on her back, and is not allowed to stir. The paste is put on the soles of the feet, the toes included, about an inch thick; the upper part of the feet is never dyed. Soft leaves are then applied, as a covering, and the whole is tightly wrapped in linen.

The same process is gone through with the palm of the hand and the fingers. To keep the application in place, the lady must lie perfectly still all night, for no other parts of the body must receive the dye, and a spot on the back of the hand or the finger joints would be a great disfigurement.

At this time she is dreadfully teased by swarms of musquitoes and flies, but she dare not move to drive them away. In the upper classes slaves watch all night to keep away these pests with fans.

The same process must be repeated for three nights to obtain the desired red tint; but, once finished, it remains for a month, and cannot be washed out.—"An Arabian Princess."

Grizzly and Buffalo.

When there were buffalo on the plains the Manitoba grizzlies were great hunters of them. When a grizzly and a buffalo met there was always sure to be a contest, but it seldom lasted long, and the buffalo was usually the victim. The buffalo would charge upon the bear, which awaited the onset of his foe erect on his haunches. As the buffalo dashed upon him the bear threw himself aside, and with a blow as quick as lightning with one of his fore paws seldom failed to break his antagonist's neck. A grizzly bear has been known to engage in quick succession four and even five big buffalo bulls, and to kill every one of them. It frequently happened however, that some younger and more active bull than his companions succeeded in evading the fatal blow of the grizzly's terrible fore paw long enough to give in turn a fatal thrust with his horn in the bear's side, puncturing the vitals, and making of the contest a mutual slaughter.—New York Sun.

Educating Arabian Girls.

"Educate a girl!" exclaimed a Mohammedan to Dr. Jessup, a missionary among the Arabs, who was urging him to place one of his daughters in a girls' school in Tripoli. "Educate a girl! You might as well try to educate a cat!" Several aristocratic Mohammedan gentlemen of Beirut were induced a few years ago to place their daughters in one of the Protestant schools there, and one of them remarked: "Would you believe it? I heard one of the girls read the other day, and she actually asked a question about the construction of a noun preceded by a preposition! I never heard the like of it! The things do distinguish and understand what they read after all!" The other replied: "Mashallah! Mashallah! The will of God be done!"—St. Louis Republican.

The Coolies of Trinidad.

The coolies work excellently. They are picturesque additions to the landscape, as they keep to the bright colors and graceful drapery of India. The grave dignity of their faces contrasts remarkably with the broad, good humored, but common features of the African. The black women look with envy at the straight hair of Asia, and twist their unhappy wool into knots and ropes in vain hope of being mistaken for the purer race; but this is all. The African and the Asiatic will not mix, and the African being the stronger, will and must prevail in Trinidad, as elsewhere in the West Indies. Out of a total population of 170,000 there are 25,000 whites and mulattoes, 10,000 coolies, the rest negroes. The English part of the Europeans shows no tendency to increase. —J. A. Froude.

Belief in the Moon's Influence.

Men are not superstitious nowadays. Oh, no! but some of them kill their hogs only in the light of the moon, and plant their potatoes when it is full. One of our citizens relates a remarkable instance in proof of Luna's effects upon mundane affairs. He says that in Pennsylvania, before he left that state, two men put new roofs upon their houses. One house was roofed while the moon was new, and the other while it was either dark or full. Before he came away the roof of the former house had drawn up till a full story had to be put underneath, while the roof of the latter had pressed the building down till the lower story was under ground!—American Magazine.

Curious Deception in Sound.

A curious manner of deception in sound was developed the other day through a bet. One man wagered that if blindfolded a person is unable to tell the direction from which any sound comes. A gentleman was blindfolded, and another, holding two silver coins between his fingers, snapped them together right under his friend's nose. When called on to locate the sound the gentleman was positive it was behind him. experiment was tried from every side, but the gentleman was not able to tell correctly just where the sound came from.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Where Neatness Pays Well.

"Untie that parcel and tie it up again neatly."

The speaker was the proprietor of a large dry goods store. He was addressing one of the clerks.

"Don't you ever send a parcel out of the store wrapped up carelessly, or you will leave."

"Neatly wrapped up parcels are a great advertisement to the house," resumed the merchant. "A customer always likes to have her parcels put up in as small a space as possible. It is very annoying for merchant and customer if the bundle looks ragged or becomes loosened and exposes the contents. We make all our clerks learn how to tie up a parcel before they are allowed to wait on customers. They learn in what we call the entering room."

"Does it take long to learn?"

"No. A few hours' experience and one can wrap up a parcel quite expertly. It simply requires a little care and order. Druggists always take a little care to tie up their parcels, and hence are proverbial for their neatness in this particular. We have our parcels wrapped up neatly, and on each parcel have the name of our house stamped. The moment any one sees these packages they know where the shoppers have made their purchases. This affords a good deal of advertising, provided the packages are done up by skilled hands."—New York Mail and Express.

The Meaning of America.

The meaning of the name Amerigo has often been discussed, the only thing certain being that it is one of those names of Teutonic origin, like Humberto, Alfonzo, Grimaldi, or Garibaldi, so common in northern Italy, which testify to the Gothic or Lombard conquest. Americ, which occurs as early as 744 A. D., is probably a contracted form of the name Amalaric, borne by a king of the Visigoths, who died in 531. A Bishop—Emrich was present at the council of Salisbury in 807, and an Americus Balistarius is mentioned in the Close Rolls (Thirteenth century).

It has been conjectured that the stem is im, from which we get the name of Emma. The meaning of this is not known with certainty, though Ferguson thinks it may denote "strife" or "noise." Since, however, the name is probably of Gothic origin, and since the Amalungs were the royal race of the Ostragoths, it is more likely that the stem is amal, which was formerly thought to mean "without spot," but is now more plausibly connected with the old Norse aml, "labor," "work." The suffice ric, cognate with rex, reich and rick, means "rich" or "powerful," and therefore the most probable signification of Amerigo is "strong for labor."—Isaac Taylor in Notes and Queries.

Pampering the Pugs.

Dog fanciers could tell very funny stories about their experience with ladies and their pets. One well known fancier here says that a wealthy dame from Fifth avenue will come bowling down to his shop in her carriage, and, with tears in her eyes, beg him to save the life of her adored pug. He promises her he will do his best, and, after kissing the black nose of the little beast and leaving many instructions for his welfare, she drives away. The dog fancier then examines the pug carefully and finds that it is suffering from being overfed and getting no exercise, so he puts it on low rations for a week and has his boy run it up and down the yard for an hour or so every day until it works some of the flesh off its bones. Then he sends it back to the grand dame, who is delighted to pay $25 for the wonderful transformation that has taken place in her pet. People who keep large dogs are apt to have more common sense about their care than those who keep toy animals, and they do not feed them on meat and candy all day long, so they escape the illness that comes from too much pampering.—New York Cor. Philadelphia Record.

Persia's Domestic Spy System.

I found that the easiest way to keep Persian servants or employes in order was to encourage the spy system and listen to informers among them. As they are quarrelsome and jealous, after acting on this principle many of my difficulties were lessened. So great is the feeling which sometimes exists in a Persian menage among the servants, that I have known of a woman to place a dozen leeches under her hair and then bring complaint of having been struck on the head and grievously hurt by a fellow servant. The charge seemed about to be substantiated and the alleged offender punished, when the judge, aware of the character of the Persian domestic, ordered an examination. It was then discovered that the blood streaming down the face of the moaning woman was caused by leeches actually puncturing her temples at that very time. The case was dismissed.—S. G. W. Benjamin's Letter.

A Drunken Man's Memory.

I remember a Cambridge man who, though not given to drinking, and now "a sober man among his sons," was more than once overtaken by liquor during the time when he had yet to learn his brain's exceptionally limited power of resisting the action of intoxicants. This man would not only be unable to recall what had happened during the time when he was intoxicated, but a number of preceding events which had taken place while he was still perfectly sober. His friends would tell him of things which had happened a full hour before he was "overtaken" (as the quaint expression has it), which had altogether passed from his remembrance. He used to say that his recollection was clear up to a certain point, beyond which everything seemed "velled."—Knowledge.

An Introduction in Mexico.

When two people are introduced in Mexico, if both are women, they exchange a light embrace and palmadita or little pat on the back; where one or both are men, a hand shake is in order. And beside the formula, "Let me present," etc., of the officiating party, each of those introduced gives his name and his address, with the formal, "Your obedient servant," "At your orders," or some such stereotyped phrase. By those who have suffered from not hearing the name of a stranger, mumbled or slurred over by his introducer, this custom will be seen to have its merits.—Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 27, 1888—Swift's Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: In the early part of the present year, a bad case of blood poison appeared upon me. I began taking S. S. S. under advice of another, and to-day I feel greatly improved. I am still taking the medicine and shall continue to do so until I am perfectly well. I believe it will effect a perfect cure. Yours truly,
DOC. P. HOWARD,

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 7, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: I was a great sufferer from muscular rheumatism for two years. I could get no permanent relief from any medicine prescribed by my physician. I took over a dozen bottles of your S. S. S., and now I am as well as I ever was in my life. I am sure your medicine cured me, and I would recommend it to any one suffering from any blood disease. Yours truly,
O. R. HOUGH,
Conductor C. & C. H. R.

WACO, TEXAS, May 9, 1888—Gentlemen: The wife of one of my customers was terribly afflicted with a loathsome skin disease, that covered her whole body. She was confined to her bed for several years by this affliction, and could not help herself at all. She could not sleep from a violent itching and stinging of the skin. The disease baffled the skill of the physicians who treated it. Her husband began finally giving his wife Swift's Specific, and she commenced to improve almost immediately, and in a few weeks she was apparently well. She is now a hearty, fine-looking lady, with no trace of the affliction left. Yours very truly,
J. E. SKAGG,
Wholesale Druggist, Austin Avenue.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

"How Much M' Offered?"

The "American party national convention," which commenced its session at Washington on the 13th inst., at first talked of nominating Abram S. Hewitt for president. Then one prominent man after another was mentioned, and on the 15th some of its managers hinted that unless they were bought off by the republicans, they would nominate Harrison, and the blight of their support would be ruinous to any party. The convention is evidently for sale to the highest bidder, but the bids do not come in.

In the Wholesale Business.

Frederick von Oberkampf and Thomas J. Mack have been held in $5000 each at Chicago, for robbing letter-boxes. They have been engaged in the business two years, and have stolen over $1,000,000. Over $250,000 worth of checks and drafts were found in Oberkampf's rooms.

Twelfth Regiment Excursion.

The veterans of the 12th Regiment, New Hampshire Volunteers, have perfected arrangements for a grand excursion to Gettysburg, Richmond, Petersburg, Fredricksburg, Chancellorsville and Washington. They leave Boston on Thursday afternoon, Sept. 27th. and will be due in Boston on their return Saturday morning, Oct. 6th. The entire expense of this ten days' trip, including fare and board, will be only $45 from Boston back to Boston. For further information write for circulars to Capt. R. W. Musgrove, Bristol, or Capt. A. W. Bartlett, Pittsfield.

WOULD LIKE SOME.

Detective Nichols Power of Halifax, Nova Scotia, who last winter presented a claim to the Saco & Biddeford Savings Institution for service in arresting the defaulter, Frank C. McNeally last September, and demanded the reward offered by the bank for the recovery of the stolen securities, has begun legal proceedings against the bank. A writ of attachment to the amount of $10,000 has been served on Treasurer Mellville H. Kelly. The case will be tried at the September term of the supreme judicial court of Maine for York county. Frank C. McNeally, the defaulter, is still in the Dominion of Canada. He has not yet settled down to work. It is believed that the bank paid him all or a large part of the reward offered for the stolen bonds after they were returned to the institution.

One of the tactics of the English free trade club in New York, which is working to elect Cleveland, is to send "Sample Copies" of the Notion and other free trade journals controlled or retained by the club, all over the country addressed to persons as if sent from the office of the paper as a solicitation to subscribe, as is the custom with some New York newspapers.

THE BUFFALO QUESTION.

A Solution Which Should Be Adopted at Once—A Manitoba Herd.

There is no question in Taxidermist Richardson's opinion that the buffalo is now well nigh extinct on the plains. There are a few in Yellowstone park protected by the government, but they are likely to be killed at any time. In Texas a herd of about thirty is owned by one ranchman; several other small bunches may be found, but the days when they rambled at large over the country have been numbered. Unless some means of protecting them is adopted within ten years the American bison must become an extinct species. In Central park Director Conklin has several specimens of buffalo, but the cow is growing old and another one has not been secured. The buffalo will not breed in captivity unless, like other domestic animals, it has abundant room for feeding and exercise. In Central park the animals are confined in narrow stalls because the space at the disposal of the manager is so cramped.

There is a practical solution of the buffalo question, Mr. Richardson thinks, which, if adopted at once, may prevent the extinction of the animal. The buffaloes are easily domesticated, and if accustomed from birth to domestic surroundings, they become quite as easy to control as ordinary domestic cattle. In the northwest, where the winters are long and the thermometer sinks below zero at the slightest provocation, buffalo subsist without any discomfort, while the winters there are generally fatal to domestic cattle unless housed and looked after with the greatest care.

"In Manitoba," said Mr. Richardson, "there is a herd of about fifty buffaloes owned by S. L. Bedson. Ernest E. Thompson, who is assisting me in the museum, has written an interesting account of them in a recent pamphlet 'on the 'Mammals of Manitoba.' A portion of this herd are half breeds, crossed with common cattle, another portion are three-quarters bred, and the rest are pure blood. It may be a question whether the pure breed will continue itself, but it certainly could be maintained if looked after. This herd has developed from five buffalo calves, brought by some Indians from Winnipeg in 1878. It requires no care beyond what is necessary to keep the different animals from wandering or being stolen or shot. The buffaloes are as hardy as in their wild state.

Mr. Thompson saw them late in January last year, when they were able to dig down in the snow and find grass enough to keep them fat. During a blizzard they would lie down in a group, with their backs to the wind, and let the snow drift over them. The snow and their woolly coats kept them perfectly comfortable. In January, 1884, one of the cows calved in the open prairie, where the thermometer registered 38 degs. below zero, and both cow and calf survived and did not appear to suffer.

"It seems to me that this is an important question for the farmers of the northwest, and the national government ought to take measures for the encouragement of the raising of buffalo stock. An ordinary cowhide is worth $2, but it is useless as a robe, while an average buffalo hide is worth $10 and, as a robe, is almost indispensable in the northern climate. The buffalo sheds its woolly hair once a year. This wool is easily gathered, and it works up well into a coarse yarn. One animal will yield ten to twelve pounds of raw wool. At one time there were factories for the manufacture of buffalo wool, but they have disappeared with the buffalo. The wool of the hybrid animal becomes darker and finer, and the buffalo hump disappears in the mixed breed. The animal itself becomes more docile, though retaining its hardihood, and is a better milker than the pure buffalo. This cross breeding affords a wide opportunity for stock raisers."—New York Tribune.

The Most Decorated Man.

It would be difficult to say who is the most decorated man of Europe. Each of the three emperors and the royal sovereigns of Europe average fifty grand crosses, with their respective appendages. Aside from the sovereigns and princes, I should think the most decorated man must be either Count Andrassy, the former chancellor of Austria, or the station master of ——, a well known watering place. The latter receives an average of three minor crosses annually, depending mainly on the number of sovereigns and princes visiting the place; station masters, physicians, police commissioners and others are in many instances remunerated for their services with crosses, very much as the gate keeper of the castle of Chillon receives a shilling from every visiting Englishman. —Ernst von Hesse Wartegg in The Century.

The Rich Man's Coachman.

A rich man who beats his dog is no more important in Mr. Bergh's eyes than the poor man who torments his neighbor's pet. The coachman of a millionaire is the prisoner. His employer has become bondsman for him, and his attorney is present to see that justice is dealt out to him. And that is just what is done—just that and nothing more or less. He was arrested for using an infamous bit, the sides of which contained sharp tacks which pressed cruelly into the sides of the horse's face, inflicting such pain that he reared and danced. This gave him the appearance of great spirit. Mr. Bergh briefly states the case to the court. The bit is produced. Half an hour of argument is heard and the prisoner, in spite of his master's wealth and social position, is fined $25.—Benjamin Northrop.

Reform in Our Penal System.

It needs no argument to show that our penal system is as bad as it can be. Probably one-half of those incarcerated could be made excellent citizens without being disgraced. Of the other half a large part, by a course of wise discipline, could be lifted out of the ranks of vice and crime. At present a man once in state's prison is pretty sure to be back again soon after his release, and his incarceration only hardens him. The only pardoning power now recognized as possible is that lodged in the hands of our governors; a power that is generally exercised with discretion and ends in vast good. We cannot too soon eradicate the idea of vindictiveness from our penal system and substitute therefor the idea of reformation.—Globe Democrat.

English and American Divorce

American women who marry English husbands will have much difficulty in dissolving their union if the conditions are unhappy, by a new divorce decision of an English court, which establishes the point that if an American woman married to an English husband wishes to obtain a valid divorce, she must sue in the English courts, or she cannot get it, the domicile of her husband being the controlling fact in the eye of the law. The daughter of an American consul, who obtained a divorce in a Colorado court from her husband, who declined to appear, has recently lost the custody

THE MAINE REGISTER.

Mr. Wm. E. Noyes has taken the agency for this vicinity of the "Maine Register & State Year Book" to April 1st, 1888. This is one of the best and most complete state registers that we know of; it is some larger than the one of last year, and contains, besides a vast amount of political, business and general information concerning the state and its many towns, a map revised to date, showing the Central Pacific and York Beach railroads, etc.

ELIOT ITEMS.

ELIOT, ME., Aug. 15th.

Barges will run from Eliot depot to the fair grounds on Aug. 21st and 22d.

Miss Nellie B. Foster returned home on the 9th from York Harbor, where she has been engaged as waiter at the Varrell house, on account of ill health.

Dr. L. H. Guptill, and Mr. Winslow W. Guptill and family, who have been visiting their parents, Dr. C. H. Guptill and wife, returned home on Thursday to Charlestown, Mass.

Geo. O. Athorne and family have been passing a week at Alton Bay campground.

Mrs. Melville Spinney is the guest of her sister, Mrs. Howard E. Spinney.

Harris Spinney, while at work in the Portsmouth shoe shop last week, had two of his fingers badly crushed, but is slowly recovering.

Mrs. Joseph Wherren, son and daughter, and four friends from East Deerfield, Mass., arrived on Thursday, the 14th, at Mrs. Wherren's house, near the residence of Mr. Daniel Wherren, for a couple of months. HARRY.

MARITIME NOTES.

The naval despatch steamer Despatch remained in the lower harbor on the 15th inst., and a large fleet of coasting vessels were lying at their anchors there in the afternoon.

There was a considerable fleet of vessels at the draw of the Portsmouth bridge on the 15th inst., among them being the schooner Eva D. Rose, Post master, with pipe for the Dover water works.

The Portsmouth Athletic club chartered the steamer Undine, Capt. Duncan, to take them on a trip to York beach Wednesday evening, the 15th inst., to enable them to see the illumination and displays of fireworks all along the beach to the best advantage. The evening was a beautiful one for the trip.

In the Martha's Vineyard yacht race on the 14th inst. the Puritan beat the Mayflower by four minutes and twenty-seven seconds corrected time. The Volunteer was not in the race. There was a stiff breeze and heavy sea.

A new main boom fifty-two feet long is being constructed by Mr. Thomas J. Varrell at Piscataqua wharf for the schooner Emily C Dennison, Capt. Garland.

The river and harbor bill which has just become a law appropriates $9,000 to complete the improvements of the Cocheco river.

Mr. Daniel Cook of Eliot, eighty-three years of age, was in this city on Wednesday of this week, attending to business connected with his farm. His wife, ninety-three years of age last September, is still able to attend to her household affairs, although of course she is weakened by years. Mr. Cook is of the third consecutive generation bearing the name of Daniel.

New ripe apples, mostly from York county, Me., are being brought into the markets of this city, and meet a ready sale. Although small they are very pleasurable to the taste, and seem to be healthful.

The democrats of Kittery Foreside will raise a Cleveland and Thurman campaign flag Saturday evening.

The republicans of York Corner will raise a Harrison and Morton campaign flag on Thursday evening of this week; speaking by Dr. J. C Stewart and others.

A citizen of Kittery Point, to the manor born, says that if the invasion of a "new set" keeps on as it has of late years, that all those who boast of their descent from the Mason & Gorges stock will soon be completely ousted.

The Times, whose publisher is a member of the Board of Instruction, has the following choice specimen of correct English: "The following autographs of Portsmouth residents appear on the registry," etc. True, this is vacation time, and the schoolmaster is abroad just now.

Note the difference in the figures of women who do and those who do not use modern labor-saving devices.

MORE BACKS are drawn out of shape by the old-fashioned see-saw, rubbing, twisting, wrecking way of washing clothes and cleaning house than by any other means. You ruin your health, form, clothes, paint, and don't get the best results.

Try the greatest invention of this Century in the way of soap—James Pyle's PEARLINE. It does away with the rubbing, hence there is no wear and tear on body or fabric. You don't have to bob up and down over a tub of soiled clothing and dirty water, inhaling poisonous odors and steam; hence you save your health. Its success is marvellous. Millions use it. Millions more will use it. Economical—Effective—Harmless. Every grocer sells Pyle's Pearline. Beware of peddled imitations, they're dangerous. JAMES PYLE, New York.

The democrats of Concord had a very successful ratification meeting on the evening of the 14th inst. Five campaign flags were raised with the usual cheers and music, after which a crowd in Phenix hall was addressed by Hon. Charles F. Stone of Laconia and Hon. W. E. Russell, mayor of Cambridge, Mass.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." BASE BALL.

Base ball clubs, like man who is born of woman, seem to be of few days, and full of sorrow. The Interstate league started out with bright anticipations and a grand flourish of trumpets, and finally dwindled down to a newspaper dispute as to which one of two clubs should have the honor of possessing the championship pennant of a league that long ago ceased to exist. Then in the New England league, first the Portlands, them the Salems and then the Lynns, drew their last feeble breath and departed, which would have left the league in a three-cornered condition had it not been for the transfer of the Portsmouth club to that league from the Interstate conglomeration. Then came positive assertions that the Portsmouth club was to go to pieces, and that in consequence the New England league would no doubt dissolve; and no sooner was it announced that the Portsmouths, by the aid of a new pilot, had succeeded in tiding over the shoal place into deep water, than a report came that Lowell was in imminent danger of total wreck, and no life-saving crew in sight. At a meeting of the stockholders of the Lowell club, Tuesday evening, the 14th inst., the president reported the indebtedness of the club to be a note of $700, about $800 due to players, and some small sums to Lowell tradesmen. He said that a reduction of twenty per cent—horizontal reduction—in salaries would enable the club to finish the season without loss, but five of the players refused to accept the reduction; and it was then voted that if they did not accept by noon on the 15th, that the club would disband after the game with the Manchesters on the date named.

P. S. The Lowells will continue to exist. A despatch of the 15th from that city says "The players of the club have accepted the proposed reduction in their salaries, and the club will continue until Sept. 15th."

O'Connor, pitcher for the Portsmouth club, has been released, and McDermott, late pitcher for the Manchesters, has signed with the Portsmouths.

THE ELIOT FETE.

Rev. A. P. Peabody, D. D., will deliver an address on the 21st inst., the opening day of the fete in Eliot in aid of the Library fund. Prof. E. S. Morse of Salem, late of the University of Tokio, Japan, will also speak. The Hungarian Gypsey band will furnish music on the opening day, and the South Berwick Cadet band in the evening; on the second day the Salem Brass band will supply the music. The tent, 140 feet long, and (with its two wings) 160 feet wide, will hold 4000 persons. Eighty young ladies in the costumes of all nations will have charge of the various tables, on which the products of all climes and peoples will be exhibited and for sale.

HOW HE FOOLED THEM.

We are assured on the very best authority that Mr Thomas K. Locke did not lose a $200 gold watch through the skill of a pick-pocket in the crowd at the railroad station on the occasion of Mr. Blaine's recent passage through this city. Mr. Locke circumvented the rascals in the same way that the Dutchman saved his life when his ship was wrecked with the loss of all hands except himself—he wasn't there.

A Boston drummer had his watch stolen, and an ex-city marshal of Portsmouth was relieved of his pocketbook, showing that the thieves were not only positively dishonest but had no respect for persons.

BOARD OF INSTRUCTION.

At a meeting of the Board of Instruction, held on Tuesday evening, Aug. 14th, Wilbur J. Rockwood resigned his position as master of the Jones school. Applications for the position were received Mass.; Charles S. Alexander, Marlboro, Mass.; Lewis E. Philbrick, Gardiner, Me.; George H. Clough, Canterbury, Mass.; Elmer L. Curtis, Avon, Mass.; L. G. Smith, Newton Center, Mass.; George W. Chamberlain, North Lebanon, Me.; H. N. Andrews, Grafton, Mass.; W. L. Murphy, Westboro, Mass.; C. E. Perkins, Bar Harbor, Me.; J. Edwin Pickering, Newington, N. H. The last named gentleman was elected to the position.

PERSONAL.

Miss Martha S. Ricker of Daniel street left on Tuesday, the 14th inst, for Farmington, Me., on a visit of several months to Mrs. George C. Purington.

Mr. Charles Jenness and wife, of State street, have gone to East Epping to occupy a cottage there with some friends.

Boatswain Isaac T. Cacoate, U. S. N., retired, with his wife and adopted daughter, left this city on the 15th inst. for Washington, D. C., where they will hereafter reside.

Mr. John Locke of New York, formerly of Portsmouth, is visiting his brother, Mr. Thomas K. Locke of this city.

Hon. Charles Levi Woodbury was at the Rockingham on Tuesday night of this week, and left on Wednesday morning for the Appledore, Isles of Shoals, which is his usual summer resort.

Prof. Barrett Wendell sails from Europe this week on his return to the United States. Mrs. Wendell left Newcastle on Wednesday of this week, to pass the remainder of the season at Quincy, Mass.

Mr. Wm. T. Raynes of Lowell, Mass., is passing several weeks at Franconia, this state.

James G. Blaine, Jr., and wife, will go from New York to Augusta, Me., Thursday, to remain a couple of weeks. James G. Blaine, extra junior, will with his nurse accompany them. The young gentleman is now seven months old, and up to this time has never seen his grandparents, or been seen by them.

It is reported that a side track is to be built from the breweries, soon, to take the grains to the milk farms of Hampton. Heavy teams drawn by horses are now running daily over the roads for that purpose. The price of grains has gone up five cents per bushel.

Among the guests from this city at the Hampton celebration on the 15th inst. were Mayor Hodgdon, Ex-Mayor Page and Col. Wm. H. Hackett. Ex-Governors Bell and Weston, Ex-Senator Patterson, Hon George B. Loring, Col. J. B. Batchelder and Hon. J. W. Hammond were also present, with many other prominent men.

Alderman Griffin on Tuesday evening of this week lost by colic a horse valued at $300. He took the oath of office as alderman that day, but the aldermanic honors will hardly balance the loss, as aldermanic honors go now-a-days.

Samuel Harding Ilsley of Syracuse, N. Y., son of the late Rev. Silas Ilsley, who was a long time pastor of the Middle street Baptist church of Portsmouth, was in this city on Wednesday, Aug. 15th, coming from the Wentworth, where he was the guest of his uncle, Capt. Samuel Harding. He visited the haunts of his boyhood, and then departed to visit his relatives in the state of Maine, after which he will return home.

Mr. Edward J. Moulton started on the 15th inst. in the schooner Mary Willey, Capt. Zach. Williams, on his 17th annual trip to Portland, Bangor, Bar Harbor, Lake Maranacook and other localities in eastern Maine, to be absent as long as he feels like it.

Mr. Charles F. Richards, deputy collector of internal revenue, came in on Wednesday afternoon, the 15th inst., from Smuttynose island, Isles of Shoals, where he has passed a vacation of two weeks.

The various picnics and excursions in this vicinity, are now so numerous that it is very difficult for the local establishments to retain their help.

What a Time

People formerly had, trying to swallow the old-fashioned pill with its film of magnesia vainly disguising its bitterness; and what a contrast to Ayer's Pills, that have been well called "medicated sugar-plums"—the only fear being that patients may be tempted into taking too many at a dose. But the directions are plain and should be strictly followed.

J. T. Teller, M. D., of Chittenango, N. Y., expresses exactly what hundreds have written at greater length. He says: "Ayer's Cathartic Pills are highly appreciated. They are perfect in form and coating, and their effects are all that the most careful physician could desire. They have supplanted all the Pills formerly popular here, and I think it must be long before any other can be made that will at all compare with them. Those who buy your pills get full value for their money."

"Ayer's Pills outsell all similar preparations. The public having once used them, will have no others."—Berry, Venable & Collier, Atlanta, Ga.

Three Summer Dangers.

Three summer dangers menace the household and traveller at every turn. They are climate, food and water. To guard against them requires a tonic, abstinence, and SANFORD'S GINGER.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer complaints, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of cholera morbus,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

As a pure fruit stimulant for the aged, mentally and physically overworked, for delicate females, especially mothers, and as a means of reforming those addicted to an excessive use of alcoholic stimulates, it is invaluable.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists and dealers on those who call for and desire only

MAKING THE DEAF HEAR.

System of Education Given by the Various Schools for Deaf Mutes.

There are doubtless a large number of children born deaf, or who have become deaf since birth through the evil effect of measles or scarlet fever or some other of the kindred scourges of childhood, who are going through the world as deaf mutes for lack of knowledge, on the part of those that have the care of them, that schools exist to which they may be sent almost free of charge, and sometimes quite free.

In these schools deaf children are not only taught to speak and to know what other people are speaking, but they acquire a thorough education in all branches, and in addition receive instruction in sewing, in the use of tools and a general industrial training, so that when they leave school they are quite prepared, if need be, to earn their own living by their own hands or head.

It would seem that no parent could be indifferent to the possibility contained in the system of education given by the various schools for deaf mutes, if aware of their existence. The little people, who might otherwise go through the world aided only by signs, here acquire language so completely that it is only in the dark that they are returned to their world of silence, being deaf only as the hero of Jean Paul's Titan became blind, after sunset, and returning to all the pleasures of sound with the lighting of the lamps. The children thus educated ask no odds of those other children provided by partial nature with better means of taking care of themselves. Comparison of graduates of deaf mute schools and of those of other schools shows no difference whatever in proficiency and intelligence, and in mingling with the world afterward the deaf mute pupils are not accompanied by any painful sense of deficiency. In fact, the more they mingle with the world, as in the case of other youth, the more self-confidence and the larger vocabulary do they acquire, and they are more injured by receipt of exceeding sympathy than they are by the withholding of it, many of them complaining of the tendency to magnify their misfortune, which almost ceases to be a misfortune to them when they find themselves readily understanding all that goes on about them, finding their way about, and often going to church, to concerts, to theatres, and taking as much enjoyment as those do who are in the possession of all their senses.

Indeed, many educated deaf mutes who have acquired language, and who have any superior intelligence of their own, claim that they have an advantage in their deafness itself; for it has obliged them to concentrate in thought and quick wit and in eyesight the amount of force which is by others dissipated in the world of attaching and detaching sound, and they are, they are apt to think, and that not without reason, the deeper and broader, readier and better, for the occlusion of one of their senses. When Mr. Fawcett, lately a high postoffice official of Great Britain, became in his early boyhood entirely blind, it is said that he resolved that he would go through life exactly as if he saw; and he carried out his intention, as we all know, as far as that was a possible thing, and a large share of his achievement was due to this determination. It would be well if all people robbed of one of their senses formed the same resolution, and carried it out but half as well.

But long before children who are shut out from all actual sound are old enough to make any such determination for themselves, and while they can only see with a poignant pain that they are different from other children, ignorant of any means by which the difference may be cured, it is the duty of parents to supply to them, as far as may be, every deficiency of their senses. This, to a certain extent, can be done at home, and a singular success has attended the practice of treating the deaf child exactly as if it could hear, so that, almost as it were by intuition, it has acquired the art of speech to a limited extent. But as that extent is very likely to remain limited, the rest of the deficiency can only be supplied by schools having no other object than the instruction of the deaf, and it is at once to be seen that every guardian of such a child is under an obligation to the child to inform himself about such schools, and to give the child the advantages to be gained from them, even if in so doing the child in so far has to become a beneficiary of the state. The debt to the state is not a serious one, since it is for the interest of the state that every member of the community shall be brought to the highest perfection.—Harper's Bazar.

How to Thoroughly Enjoy Books.

Lately I have read all the "How I Was Educated" and "Books That Have Helped Me" papers, and I have noted how, in the majority of instances, the great writers and thinkers of today were confined in their childhood and youth to comparatively few books. These they read till they were learned almost by heart. And by so doing they not only got out all, or nearly all, that was in the authors, but insensibly acquired a good literary style. An author whose entire meaning and purpose can be grasped at one reading is not of the highest class, and the more we advance in life and in culture, the more pleasure do we find in our favorite authors. They respond to the improvement in ourselves. The more powers of appreciation we possess, the more do we find in them to appreciate. They never disappoint us, but are constantly revealing new thoughts and previously hidden meanings.

The student alone thoroughly enjoys books. Remember this, you skimmers who are not too confirmed in your bad habits, and you readers who would really enjoy the wisdom of our best friends. Bear with me if I repeat, "it is better not to know so many things than to know so many things that are not so."—Julian Magnus in The Epoch.

Oldest Meeting House.

Probably one of the oldest meeting houses in the world is the Bangund church, in Norway, the age of which is 800 years. The pagoda like structure is covered with shingles and an inch or two of tar. Runic inscriptions, interesting to scholars, are on the building.—New York Tribune.

Capt. Cook's Death.

The unbound volumes and logs of the ships Resolution and Discovery during Capt. Cook's voyage, which were found in the British record office, contain at least ten separate accounts of Cook's death. They give some curious variations from the accepted narrative.—Chicago Herald.

Non-Speaking Telephone.

A non-speaking telephone is exhibited in Pittsburg. A sensitive plate presses against the larynx and glands of the neck, and as the jaws are moved in conversation the motion sends the words along the wire as distinctly as the tele

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

It may be admitted that large reductions in the duties on imported manufactured goods would produce great distress in many parts of the United States. The free importation of iron, coal and wool would be a great boom to British producers. * * * If it were accompanied with reductions in the tariff upon cotton, woolen and other manufactures the artisans of this country would derive a marked benefit from it.—The Scotsman.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood; he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

It is to the New World that the Cobden Club is chiefly looking as the most likely sphere for its vigorous foreign policy. It has done what it can in Europe, and is now turning its eye westward and bracing itself for the struggle which is to come. It cannot rest while the United States are unsubdued.—London Times, July 18th, 1880.

The only time England can use a Celt is when he emigrates to America, and votes for free trade. — London Times

Peculiar

In the combination, proportion, and preparation of its ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures where other preparations entirely fail. Peculiar in its good name at home, which is a "tower of strength abroad," peculiar in the phenomenal sales it has attained, Hood's Sarsaparilla is the most successful medicine for purifying the blood, giving strength, and creating an appetite.

To the Delicate and Malarious.

The most incredulous are convinced of the virtues of Aunt Rachael's Malarial Bitters upon a trial of them. Their base is Speer's port wine, with herbs and roots so favorably known to the medical profession and the community at large as the best cure for malaria. They are all that can be desired by the most feeble victims of malaria.

Boston's valuation is $764,000,000, an increase of $16,000,000 from last year.

It Is Useless

For young ladies who are troubled with freckles, pimples, moth and tan and a bad skin generally to use liquid paints or dry powders, for they only make the skin look well for the time being. To have a good complexion you must have pure blood. Use Sulphur Bitters and your skin will be fair and your complexion rosy.—Young Ladies' Magazine.

From Birth to the Grave

We carry with us certain physical traits, as we do certain mental characteristics. Insomuch that psychologists have striven to designate by generic titles certain temperaments—as the billious, the nervous, the lymphatic. The individual with a sallow complexion is set down as billious, often rightly so. If the saffron in the hue of his skin is traceable to bile in the blood, its presence in the wrong place instead of the liver, will also be evinced by fur on the tongue, pain beneath the right ribs and through the right shoulder-blade, sick headache, constipation, flatulence and indigestion. For the relief of this very common, but not essentially perilous complaint, there is no more genial and thorough remedy than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is also a beneficent tonic and strength promoter, and a widely esteemed remedy for and preventive of fever and ague, rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles.

A Great Surprise

is in store for all who use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, the great guaranteed remedy. Would you believe that it is sold on its merits and that any druggist is authorized by the proprietor of this wonderful remedy to give you a sample bottle free? It never fails to cure acute or chronic coughs. All druggists sell Kemp's Balsam. Large bottles 50c and $1. a18

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. A LITTLE BUNDLE OF RAGS.

A little hungry mouth;
A tiny shaking form;
Two little naked feet,
Out in the bitter storm;
A tattered bundle of rags and stains,
A beggar from door to door,
A freezing bundle of aches and pains,
A starving child of the poor!

Two pleading, tearful eyes
That none will ever miss;
Two little sunken cheeks
That never know a kiss;
A tattered bundle of rags and stains,
Who whines for a crust to eat;
A freezing bundle of aches and pains,
A homeless child of the street!

Two tiny purple hands;
A shock of tangled hair;
A little weary head
Asleep on the pavement bare;
A tattered bundle of rags unblessed,
Whose strife is forever o'er;
A wretched bundle of woes at rest,
A frozen child of the poor!

—Donizetti Muller in Frank Leslie's.

Their Work Was Worth Something.

The cows of a Georgia farmer got into the pea field of his neighbor and destroyed about ten bushels of peas. Thereupon the latter farmer presented an account claiming $6 for ten bushels of peas at sixty cents per bushel. The owner of the cows examined the account and then said: "Look here, my cows ate up ten bushels of your peas, but you know the rules in gathering peas is to give one-half for the gathering. So you see my cows were entitled to five bushels of those peas for picking them. Therefore I only owe you for five bushels at sixty cents, and that makes $3. Here's your money." And at $3 they settled.—Chicago News.

The Psychology of Handwriting.

The North American Review prints a series of the autographs of Napoleon, written at various epochs in his eventful life. Starting in his early years with a bold and clear signature, it retains most of these characteristics in the days of his greatest successes; but parallel with the declining fortunes of the great man is a degeneration of his autograph, until at the end we have nothing more than the rudest, characterless scrawl. The autographs cannot but suggest the ravaging changes in the nervous system that were the physiological concomitant of the turmoil raging in the hero's mind.—Science.

Condiments Promote Digestion.

The value of the various condiments in the preparation of combination dishes is great. Used with discretion they stimulate the appetite and promote digestion, red pepper being specially valuable in this connection. The various herbs and spices are exceedingly valuable; salt is absolutely necessary to health, despite all contrary assertions of the food cranks, and the condiments employed in making salads promote the digestion and assimilation of all food eaten at the same time.—Chicago Times.

Spiders That Capture Birds.

The tarantula of South America is so large and powerful that it attacks birds. Bell, the naturalist, found a web stretched across a tree in which were entangled two birds, one in the clutch of the spider. In some places they often bite the feet of horses and cause their death. A naturalist in the Amazon country reports seeing the native children leading about the huge spiders by threads of fibre wound about their bodies, as boys do dogs in our own country.—C. F. Holder.

Paper Made from Wood.

Making paper from wood pulp is one of the greatest of modern inventions. Paper was formerly made of rags, but the demand for paper greatly exceeded the supply of rags, and it is not many years ago that poplar and other soft woods were ground up into pulp to take the place of rags, in all but the finer kinds of paper. Yet the wasps had been setting an example in doing this for untold centuries.—American Agriculturist.

Bonbons Instead of Love Letters.

Engaged couples in France do not exchange love letters as we do; you never see a French girl with a box containing daintily tied package of letters, of which the key never leaves her possession; such things are unheard of, but boxes of bonbons and exquisite flowers are sent each day with the card of the future husband.—The Argonaut.

Ribs Broken by Coughing.

A London coroner has raised the question whether a man can cough himself to pieces. A broken rib was found in a deceased lunatic, when medical evidence was brought forward to show that under certain abnormal conditions bones may be broken by muscular efforts, or even by a violent fit of coughing.—Arkansaw Traveler.

London Houses Growing More Modern.

For a long while the London houses never changed their appearance. Now, when a house needs rebuilding, the front of it is apt to be remodeled, not in the staid old style which has prevailed hitherto, but according to modern fashion.—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

A Narrow Escape.

Jones was so awkward the other evening as to sit down on a gentleman's silk hat, crushing it flatter than a pancake.

"And to think," was his comment, "that it might have been the new one I've just bought!"—Judge.

Speed of the Electric Current.

Experiments on the speed of the electric current prove that if a proper conductor could be wound around the globe a signal parting from it at any point of it would return to the starting point in one-half a second.—Chicago Herald.

Provoked Her Sympathy

Husband (groaning)—The rheumatism in my leg is coming on again.

Wife (with sympathy)—Oh, I am so sorry, John. I wanted to do some shopping today, and that is a sure sign of rain.—The Epoch.

During the past season two naturalists, G. W. and E. G. Peckham, have found that wasps remember the locality of their nests for ninety-six hours.

There are in the country nearly 400 colleges, with about 3,000 professors and 35,000 students.

CRUELTY TO CHILDREN.

What Becomes of the Unfortunate Infants of the Metropolis.

For some time the business of baby farming has been increasing in this city, until at the present moment it extends from the most squalid East Side localities to the magnificent and luxurious mansions on the ultra fashionable avenues. In this city every year an average of about 800 unfortunate infants are picked up in ash barrels, in hall ways, on the streets, and frequently in the river. These are nearly all the children of poor and indiscreet young women, who in an evil hour gave heed to the voice of the tempter.

Many of these children find their way into regular institutions which are incorporated for business of that description, such as the Foundling asylum, and a number of religious concerns where provision is made for the little waifs. But by far the great majority are "farmed out" to women who for a consideration care for the children or help to end their miserable lives, as the exigency of the case or the pecuniary interest involved may require.

The mother in most cases is drawn from the humbler walks in life and can afford to pay but a small sum for the maintenance of her child. She accordingly seeks out one of the baby farmers, who thrive in every part of the tenement districts of the city, and there arranges for the reception and care of her little one. A fixed sum per week is decided upon, ranging according to location from $1 to $5, and the transaction is concluded. Perhaps the unfortunate mother is sometimes lucky enough to have as partner in her guilt one who will pay the weekly stipend. He furnishes the money for three or five or ten weeks, but with each succeeding payment he grows tired of the job, and finally he drops off altogether.

The baby farmer gets impatient. She threatens the mother of the child and perhaps succeeds in having her make some personal sacrifice to help for its maintenance, but the struggle proves too much and the next chapter in the story is the announcement to the erring mother some day that the baby is dead. Of course, if the child has died while enduring some of the thousand ills that babyhood is heir to a permit for its burial is easily procurable, and that is the last of the drama. But in nearly all cases it is very hard for even a skilled physician to properly account for the little one's departure from this unfriendly world, and no more is heard of the case.

But there are other baby farms, many of them in the gilded neighborhood where Ward McAllister's "400" society ornaments flutter, and there the procedure, charges and arrangements differ, but in the long run the result is invariably the same. The prices charged for the reception of infants in some of these places run as high as $10 a week, but in the majority of cases the bargain is made by the payment of a lump sum which will cover the cost of keeping the child until it is old enough to be received in an orphan asylum or disposed of in some other way. Generally the children of such people are offered for adoption and in this way nearly 40 per cent. of the baby farm children of the better class are disposed of, because the mothers do not wish to have them sent to asylums, where their "blue blood" may be tarnished by commingling with waifs of the common herd.

As the matter is at present conducted in this city all applications from persons "to keep and maintain infants" are turned over to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children by the board of health. The society investigates the moral surroundings of the applicant, and the board of health looks after the sanitary arrangements. When everything is found all right a permit is issued. The establishment at that point is lost sight of, and the board of health or the Children's society may know no more about the place or the number of babies kept there or the way they are treated than the emperor of Morocco. Safety for the lives of these unfortunate waifs can only be relied upon in the regular institutions, where the utmost care that tender nurses, aided by the most approved scientific appliances, can give, is administered.

The utmost efforts of the police authorities or the Children's society to prevent abuses in the system thus far have failed because of the numerous obstacles thrown in the way of reform. The villainous women who, for a consideration, squeeze the young life out of so many little waifs year by year, adopt many and clever ruses to escape detection in their foul work, and they generally succeed. These people give such an unenviable reputation to places constructed and run on a purely legitimate basis that the unfortunate mothers are more frequently tempted to throw their helpless offspring into the depths of the North or East rivers than consign them to a fate that is worse than death itself.—New York Journal.

Cooling Effect of Ice.

The cooling effect of ice is actually dependent upon its melting, as in this process the heat which causes it to melt is absorbed from the surrounding bodies. A pound of ice, in melting, will absorb sufficient heat to cool a pound of water from 174 degs. Fah. to the freezing point, or to cool 142 pounds of water one degree. The heating power of steam is due to the converse of this principle. A pound of water converted into steam and passed into a radiator will, upon condensing, give out enough heat to raise one pound of water, or about 4.2 pounds of air, from 32 degs. to 1,004 degs.—Public Opinion.

Delicacies for the Sick.

The customs division of the United States treasury have compiled a list of Chinese medicines that have recently been imported to this country. The list embraces such simple remedies as tigers' bones, ground blood, bears' gall, asses' glue, tree bugs, elephants' gall, fossil crabs, fossil teeth, fowls' gizzards, "insects of nine smells," Job's tears, cow hair, glass, rhinoceros' horns, cows' knee, puff balls, dragons' teeth, straw, hedge hog skins, dried silk worms, snake skins, crabs' eyes, horse tails and centipedes.—Philadelphia Times.

His Last Law.

The last law signed by Kaiser Frederick was one permitting soldiers of the Guards to wear full beards instead of mustaches only.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 27, 1888—Swift's Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: In the early part of the present year, a bad case of blood poison appeared upon me. I began taking S. S. S. under advice of another, and to-day I feel greatly improved. I am still taking the medicine and shall continue to do so until I am perfectly well. I believe it will effect a perfect cure. Yours truly,

DOC. P. HOWARD, 111 West Sixth St.

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 7, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: I was a great sufferer from muscular rheumatism for two years. I could get no permanent relief from any medicine prescribed by my physician. I took over a dozen bottles of your S. S. S., and now I am as well as I ever was in my life. I am sure your medicine cured me, and I would recommend it to any one suffering from any blood disease. Yours truly,

C. E. HOGEN, Conductor C. & G. R. R.

WACO, TEXAS, May 9, 1888—Gentlemen: The wife of one of my customers was terribly afflicted with a loathsome skin disease, that covered her whole body. She was confined to her bed for several years by this affliction, and could not help herself at all. She could not sleep from a violent itching and stinging of the skin. The disease baffled the skill of the physicians who treated it. Her husband began finally giving his wife Swift's Specific, and she commenced to improve almost immediately, and in a few weeks she was apparently well. She is now a hearty fine-looking lady, with no trace of the affliction left. Yours very truly,

J. E. SEARS, Wholesale Druggist, Austin Avenue.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

That Perilous Surplus.

A Washington despatch of the 16th says: Some of the democratic members of the house who have been loudest in their pessimistic prediction of ruin and distress on account of the surplus which has threatened so much financial danger, have been making an investigation which has led to a calmer state of feelings. It is discovered that when the appropriations made by the present session of Congress shall have been charged up against the current funds on hand, there will be a surplus of only $13,000,000. This result comes from the fact that the total appropriations of the first session of the 50th Congress will aggregate between fifty and sixty million dollars more than ever before during time of peace.

The American Party.

The "American party national convention" at Washington nominated James I. Curtis of New York for president and N. Greer for vice president. There was a split in the convention, and half of the delegates withdrew. The platform adopted favors the total abolition of naturalization laws; demands that no criminals, paupers or insane persons shall be allowed to immigrate, and in order to become an emigrant to the United States a man must satisfy the consul at the port from which he wishes to sail that he does not come under the prohibited classes, and must pay a per capita tax to the consul before sailing. It declares in favor of prohibiting immigration of all persons not in sympathy with the government of the United States; against alien ownership of land; in favor of free technical schools for American children, and in favor of the expenditure of the surplus for the building of fortifications and naval vessels.

That Colored Democratic Convention.

Congressman Owen of Indiana has exposed the origin of the recent alleged democratic colored convention at Indianapolis. He charges that J. Milton Turner, a colored lawyer, undertook to engineer this convention in favor of Cleveland and reform, in consideration of the passage of the bill for the relief of the Cherokee freedmen, as Turner had an interest in the bill amounting, it is said, to $73,000.

Grand Rally at Portland.

The republicans of Portland, Me., had a grand rally on the 15th inst., afternoon and evening. In the afternoon the city hall was crowded by 3000 people, who were addressed by Gen H. B. Cleaves, Hon. James G. Blaine, and Hon. Warner Miller of New York. In the early evening the uniformed campaign companies, numbering over 2000 members, had a torchlight parade, after which the city hall was again crowded, and a still larger throng than was in the hall was addressed from the balconies.

The Pullman company has taken its cars off all the lines south of the Savannah river, and all the sleeping cars which have been in Florida in the past twenty days have been sent to the shops for fumigation. This is on account of the yellow fever in Florida.

A MIDSUMMER SONG.

O! father's gone to market town, he was up before the day;
And Jamie's after robins, and the man is making hay,
And whistling down the hollow goes the boy that minds the mill,
While mother from the kitchen door is calling with a will:
"Polly! Polly! The cows are in the corn! Oh, where's Polly?"

From all the misty morning there comes a summer sound,
A murmur as of waters from skies and trees and ground.
The birds they sing upon the wing, the pigeons bill and coo,
And over hill and hollow rings again the loud halloo:

And in the field and garden a thousand blossoms bloom,
Within the farmer's meadow a brown eyed daisy blows,
And down at the edge of the hollow a red and thorny rose.
But Polly! Polly! The cows are in the corn! Oh, where's Polly?

How strange as such a time of day the mill should stop its clatter!
O! wild the birds are singing in the wood and on the hill,
While whistling up the hollow goes the boy that minds the mill.
But Polly! Polly! The cows are in the corn! Oh, where's Polly?

TRUTH OF WEATHER LORE.

Meteorological Science Embodied in Popular Sayings—The Moon's Influence.

The persistent survival of weather lore in these days of intellectual emancipation is not at all remarkable when we consider the extent to which the vulgar sayings embody real truths. A few years ago Messrs. Abercromby and Marriott embarked on an extremely interesting inquiry with a view to determine, by actual comparison, how far the popular proverbs express relations, or sequences, which the results of meteorological science show to be real. The investigation proved that something like a hundred of the more popular sayings are, under ordinary conditions, trustworthy. Such being the case, we need not be surprised that simple country folk prefer familiar couplets to all the "isobars," "cyclones" and "synchronous charts" in the world. If "hills clear, rain near," means the same as "the presence of a wedge shaped area of high pressure, accompanied by great atmospheric visibility, is likely to be followed by the advance of a disturbance with rain and southerly winds," which for all practical purposes it does, the preference is justified on the mere ground of breath economy. The thirty-one words demanded by science stand no chance against four.

But it is unfortunate that, along with the limited number of folksayings founded on truth, there has survived a very large number founded on the grossest error. These latter have borrowed credence and respect from the proved credibility of the others, and apparently they are all destined to sink or swim together. Hammer as we will at certain favorite proverbs which we know to be based upon error, it is all in vain. The reverence for tradition is too much for us. And of all the superstitions, pure and simple, which defy our attempts at destruction, the most invulnerable are those ascribing certain effects to the influence of the moon.—John Westwood Oliver in Popular Science Monthly.

Steam an Invisible Vapor.

When water once begins to boil it is impossible to raise its temperature any higher; all excess of heat is absorbed by the escaping, as so called, latent heat, and is given out again when it condenses. We often speak of seeing the steam escaping from the mouth of a kettle, but this is incorrect—steam is an invisible vapor, and we can no more see it than we can air. What we do see are the minute drops of water into which the steam condenses on coming into the cool air. If we boil water in a glass flask, we shall notice that nothing can be seen in the interior, and by observing the steam escaping from a kettle we shall notice that there is quite a distance between the end of the spout and the point where the cloud becomes visible. This cloud of steam is of exactly the same nature as the clouds which float in the sky, and which are formed by the condensation in cool upper regions of aqueous vapor in the air.—Safety Valve.

Forty-five Million Hens.

The minister of agriculture has been taking a census of the fowls of France and he informs us that the country contains 45,000,000 hens, worth on an average 50 cents apiece. One-fifth of these hens and 2,000,000 cocks are killed annually, and they sell for $5,500,000 in the market. The other 36,000,000 hens lay about 8,060,000,000 eggs every year, worth 1 1-5 cents apiece. This sums up to not less than $36,740,000. Therefore the chickens of France produce $67,200,000 a year. They form no unimportant item of the national debt; and whether fried, roasted, boiled or stewed, they are the most tender specimens of the feathered tribe you ever tasted.—Paris Cor. New Orleans Picayune.

Mrs. Burnett's Bright Boy.

Some one recently asked Mrs. Burnett's son Vivian, the original of "Little Lord Fauntleroy," what was meant by "society." "Society," said Vivian, "why it's a thing where there's lots of people, who all come to your house, and they come up to your mamma, who is in the drawing room looking very beautiful, in a lovely dress, and they shake hands with her and say, 'Why, how do you do?' and then they gabble, gabble, gabble, gabble, gabble, and then they come up again to your mamma and say, 'Oh, I'm so sorry, but I must go now, good by,' and then they go away, and that's all."—Boston Heardld.

For Cleaning Pig's Feet.

A machine for cleaning pig's feet is about the last thing expected in the line of invention, but that machine has been devised, and does its work by the successive impact against the material to be cleaned of steel knives held on a revolving cylinder by flexible connections, like rubber or other elastic material.—Boston Budget.

View of the Harbor.

There are some advantages in New York, even for the penniless and homeless. For instance, one of the most glorious sights in the world can be seen all day and every day from the Battery park, scenes shifted every minute, and no extra charge for reserved seats. The millionaire can buy nothing finer with all his money.—New York Sun.

Insanity Among Negroes.

Thirty years ago insanity was almost unknown among the southern negroes, but now the number thus effected in North Carolina alone is estimated at 1,000, and the asylum for treatment at Goldsboro has just been enlarged.—New

One of the reported reasons for President Cleveland's delay in sending his letter of acceptance is stated to be that he has seen the handwriting on the wall. The party does not come up to the work. The president is thinking. Some of his sad thoughts are that he is not to be reelected, and in his letter he will decline with thanks the nomination. Then the convention is to reassemble and put in nomination Mr. Randall or some tariff democrat, and the party is to go about on the other tack. The Cobden club representatives are not pleased with the plan, but they admit that in undertaking to run American politics the Englishman is not quite posted "don't you know."

The city of New York recently sold off a million of its consolidated bonds, with interest at the rate of three per cent, due 1907, 1908 and 1918, free from city taxation, at 105 for 1906's and 1907's, and 105 1-8 to 106 for 1918's. $1,100,000 was offered, but there were proposals for nearly six millions, made by bankers and insurance companies.

Hon. Thomas B. Reed addressed a great meeting at Damariscotta, Me., Aug. 14th.

The democratic national committee have sent Col. John R. Fellows to stump Maine for Cleveland and Thurman. Mr. Fellows is the gentleman to aid in whose election as district attorney of New York the president wrote a personal letter.

Hervey C. Calkin, for over thirty years a shining light in Tammany Hall, and at one time sent to Congress on a Tammany nomination, has resigned from the Tammany general committee, and will oppose Cleveland and free trade.

At a type-writing tournament in Toronto, a young lady, Miss Orr, won a prize of a gold medal by writing on the machine 987 words in ten minutes, at the rate of ninety-nine words per minute, or one and a half words per second.

Edward King, the well-known journalist, formerly of Boston, but for some years a resident of Paris, disappeared from that city in April, and nothing has since been heard of him.

A very silly woman in New York has expended $500 on the funeral of a pet pug. A satin-lined coffin and a burial in Woodlawn cemetery under the regulation style of the most fashionable undertaker was to her the proper thing.

A Life Saving Saloon.

A "life-saving saloon" is announced as being among the latest inventions. The average saloon has not generally been regarded as among the most advanced life-saving appliances of the nineteenth century. Some people, many, in fact, have regarded and do regard the saloon as a perilous thing, more dangerous to human life than a railroad crossing at grade, or even than a toy pistol. But the new kind of saloon is not intended to be in any sense a rival of the best-known variety of the article, and in fact is not for use on land at all. It is to benefit seamen, to whom the saloon has not usually been a means of saving grace. It is a deck house, which, while firmly secured and under ordinary circumstances of the usual use as a deck saloon, in case of disaster can be easily detached and allowed to slide overboard, or float clear of the foundering ship, and then practically becomes a small ship itself.

Elmer Rogers Strain, a student in Boston university and clerk of the Oceanside hotel at Magnolia, Mass., was drowned while bathing a few days ago.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt was thrown from her carriage at Newport, R. I., and somewhat injured, Aug. 14th.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating Sick Headache Heart-burn Sour Stomach

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." GEORGE A. PAGE, Watertown, Mass.

MORE BACKS are drawn out of shape by the old-fashioned see-saw, rubbing, twisting, wrecking way of washing clothes and cleaning house than by any other means. You ruin your health, form, clothes, paint, and don't get the best results.

Try the greatest invention of this Century in the way of soap—James Pyle's PEARLINE. It does away with the rubbing, hence there is no wear and tear on body or fabric. You don't have to bob up and down over a tub of soiled clothing and dirty water, inhaling poisonous odors and steam; hence you save your health. Its success is marvellous. Millions use it. Millions more will use it. Economical—Effective—Harmless. Every grocer sells Pyle's Pearline. Beware of peddled imitations, they're dangerous. JAMES PYLE, New York.

BASE BALL.

The Portsmouth club sustained another defeat at the hands and clubs of the Worcesters on Wednesday of this week, at Worcester. The game was a good one, but the Portsmouth was not quite good enough. Neither club scored until the sixth inning, when each made a run. In the ninth inning Worcester made two runs while Portsmouth failed to score, which gave the game to the Worcesters, three to one.

This afternoon the Lowell and Portsmouth clubs play a game on the South street grounds; game called at 3:30 o'clock.

PERSONAL.

Hon. Warner Miller of New York passed through this city on Wednesday, the 15th.

A F. Smith, of the Missouri Pacific Railway Co., formerly of Wakefield, now on a visit to his native state, was in this city this week.

Miss Colby of Salisbury, a sister of the late Capt. Colby, of the ship Atalanta, was in town on Thursday, and visited the Chase Home for Children. Capt. Colby was long in command of ships owned by the late Theodore Chase and his son, George B. Chase.

Capt. Redford W. Sargent, of the steamship Ohio of the Inman line, arrived at his home in Kittery on the 13th inst., accompanied by his wife, to pass the week. They return to New York on Monday next.

All dealers sell the Preston Remedies.

Pears' Soap is an elegant toilet adjunct.

A man in Boston has been arrested for passing a check with Frank Jones' name written thereon. No one who is able to get Mr. Jones' genuine checks ever comes to grief, and the wonder is that any one should fail to appreciate this fact.

The tickets for the opening night of John S. Moulton's Comedy Co., at Music hall next Monday evening, go on sale at Goodrich's this morning. See advertisement.

The Dover Democrat of the 14th inst. said: "Charles Cottle of Kittery, Me., who wandered from the Epping, N. H., campground Thursday night, was found in Greenland by a man named Scott, and returned to his home Saturday morning. Cottle is suffering from softening of the brain, and was taken to Epping in hopes that a change of air might prove beneficial."

Among the large fleet of coasters which arrived at this port on the 15th inst. were four schooners for Dover and one for South Newmarket with coal, and the brick schooners Lillie, Triton and Hattie Lewis and sloop Samoset, from Boston.

The illumination at York beach on the 15th inst. was a very successful affair. Thousands of persons visited the beach to see the display, forty carloads leaving the railroad station in this city during the day. Three extra trains ran from the beach to this city after the fireworks, and all were packed.

A new lookout has been constructed at the Concord railroad wharf, from which a watchman will be enabled to overlook the wharf and track and tell how far down to back cars, whether any obstructions are in the way or not, and just what is going on all over the wharf. One of the sheds for a hoisting engine which has been located in the middle of the wharf has been removed to give a clearer view. The new lookout will be a material aid toward lessening the casualities at this busy place.

Potatoes of the new crop are being freely brought into the market; they are fine and large, and thus far are free from rot. What effect the recent rains may have upon them remains to be seen. The price from the stores is about thirty cents per peck.

Mr. Jethro H. Swett, whose store and stock of goods in Kittery were burned on Sunday morning, Aug. 12th, has opened business in the same line in Parker's block, directly opposite his old stand.

TO OUR PATRONS: Last season's experience taught us that the Public were surfeited with old fashioned Melo-Drama, and to preserve our hard earned reputation we must change with the Public taste, and present New, Bright, Domestic Comedies. To that end our Company has been specially engaged. All our Pieces are Replete with Mirth, New Music, Songs and Dances.

What a Time

People formerly had, trying to swallow the old-fashioned pill with its film of magnesia vainly disguising its bitterness; and what a contrast to Ayer's Pills, that have been well called "medicated sugar-plums"—the only fear being that patients may be tempted into taking too many at a dose. But the directions are plain and should be strictly followed.

J. T. Teller, M. D., of Chittenango, N. Y., expresses exactly what hundreds have written at greater length. He says: "Ayer's Cathartic Pills are highly appreciated. They are perfect in form and coating, and their effects are all that the most careful physician could desire. They have supplanted all the Pills formerly popular here, and I think it must be long before any other can be made that will at all compare with them. Those who buy your pills get full value for their money."

"Ayer's Pills outsell all similar preparations. The public having once used them, will have no others."—Berry, Venable & Collier, Atlanta, Ga.

ALL TRAVELLING EXPENSES INCLUDED.

Parties will leave Boston, Monday, September 10, and Monday, October 8, for Two Grand Trips Direct to

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

These trips are intended for persons who desire to reach Southern California by a direct route and as expeditiously as may be consistent with perfect comfort. The halts by the way are intended for rest. The trips will be carried out upon the same plan that has made our winter excursions of the past few years so acceptable and popular, and ticket-holders will possess all the advantages given in connection with the later excursions in the season of 1888-89. The tickets supply every needed comfort during the transits to and from California, including sleeping-car accommodations, meals, transfers, and board at hotels, but leave the holders to dispose of their time in California in accordance with their own preferences. All travel in Palace Sleeping Cars. The Return Tickets Good until July, 1889, with a Choice of Five Different Routes Eastward from San Francisco or Los Angeles.

In addition to the above, parties will leave September 10 for the Yellowstone National Park, the Pacific Northwest and California, and "Around the Circle" in Colorado; and October 8 for the Pacific Northwest and California and for Colorado. Also Eighteen Autumn Trips to popular Northern and Eastern resorts during the month of September.

EASTERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

To the Holders of Certificates of Indebtedness.

PERSONS desiring to have their names placed upon said Register in order to vote at the coming election must comply with the following regulations of the Trustees. "Every holder of Certificates of Indebtedness who desires to have them registered in his name shall present to the Trustees at their office, No. 10 Tremont St., Boston, a written statement signed by him and giving his address and the denomination and number of every certificate of indebtedness claimed to be held by him, and shall if required by said Trustees verify his title by exhibiting such certificates and the written order of the last registered holder of the same, or other evidence of his title to the reasonable satisfaction of the Trustees; and said Trustees if satisfied with his title shall indorse their approval upon said written statement, and said certificate holder may thereupon be registered in conformity thereto. The approval of one of said Trustees shall be sufficient authority for such registration, and no registration after the 15th day of August, 1888, shall be valid without such approval, and no approval shall be granted after the time for closing the Register."

The Voting Register will close at the close of business on the 21st day of August, between which time and the special meeting on the 28th day of August, 1888, no registration will be allowed.

Three Summer Dangers.

Three summer dangers menace the household and traveller at every turn. They are climate, food and water. To guard against them requires vigilance, abstinence, and SANFORD'S GINGER.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer complaints, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of cholera morbus,—breaks up colds and fevers, and warts off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

As a pure fruit stimulant for the aged, mentally and physically overworked, for delicate females, especially mothers, and as a means of reforming those addicted to an excessive use of alcoholic stimulates, it is invaluable.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists and dealers on those who call for and desire only

THE GREAT INTERESTS OF CIVILIZED CIRCUMSTANCES.

Instances Where They Have Led to Grave and Important Issues.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of the great interests of national prosperity can be felt by the others.—John Quincy Adams.

It may be admitted that large reductions in the duties on imported manufactured goods would produce great distress in many parts of the United States. The free importation of iron, coal and wool would be a great boon to British producers. * * * If it were accompanied with reductions in the tariff upon cotton, woolen and other manufactures the artisans of this country would derive a marked benefit from it.—The Scotsman.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

A few moments' consideration will convince any one that some of the most momentous crises in history have hinged upon very slight circumstances. A glass of wine, for instance, changed the history of France for nearly twenty years. Louis Philippe, king of the French, had a son, the Duke of Orleans, and heir to the throne, who always drank only a certain number of glasses of wine, because even one more made him tipsy. On a memorable morning he forgot to count the number of his glasses, and took one more than usual. When entering his carriage he stumbled, frightened the horses, and causing them to run. In attempting to leap from the carriage his head struck the pavement, and he soon died. That glass of wine overthrew the Orleans rule, confiscated their property of £30,000,000, and sent the whole family into exile.

If Mr. Grenville had not carried, in 1765, his memorable resolution as to the expediency of charging stamp duties on the plantations of America, the western world might still have been under British rule. In connection with this matter, there is another slight, albeit remarkable, circumstance, which may be told in Thackeray's own words. "It was strange," says he, "that, in a savage forest of Pennsylvania, a young Virginian officer should fire a shot, and waken up a war which was to last for sixty years, which was to cover his own country and pass into Europe, to cost France her American colonies, to sever ours from us and create the great western republic to rage over the old world when extinguished in the new; and of all the myriads engaged in the vast contest, to leave the prize of the greatest fame with him who struck the first blow."

If the nose of Cleopatra had been shorter, says Pascal, the condition of the world would have been different. His meaning is, that if Cleopatra had had a nose short of deformity she would have failed to attract Antony, who would not have been drawn into the conduct which culminated in the loss of the battle of Actium, which loss made way for the close of the Roman republic in the inauguration of the Roman empire.

Dyspepsia has been the cause of many momentous crisis. A leg of mutton is said to have controlled the tide of Leipsic's battle; and the consequences of the indigestion of a certain duchess are proverbial.

The great failure of the potato crop in Ireland cannot be called a slight circumstance, yet it was comparatively slight compared with the momentous changes which it brought about; for the repeal of the corn laws was hastened by the potato famine. As Lord Beaconsfield has observed: "This mysterious but universal sickness of a single root changed the history of the world."

Many men have been drawn to their destiny by the most trivial occurrences. Fenimore Cooper became a novelist through his wife's challenge. One evening, while reading a novel, he threw it down, saying: "I believe I could write a better book myself." "Let me see you do it," said his wife, with a smile. In a few days he had written several chapters of "Precaution," which, when finished, he published at his own expense. The novel attracted little attention; but it gave Cooper an inkling of his capacity for story writing, and the "Spy," his next novel, appealed so strongly to the patriotic sympathies of his countrymen that it became a great success. Hawthorne, too, was induced to write the "Scarlet Letter" by a remark of his wife.

If Cowley had not found the "Faery Queen" in his mother's parlor it is just possible that he would never have been a poet. Giotto, one of the early Florentine painters, might have remained a rude shepherd boy if a sheep drawn by him upon a stone had not attracted the notice of Cimabue. Opie might have perished in obscurity if he had not looked over the shoulder of his companion, Mark Oates, while he was drawing a butterly. Had his friend and companion escaped the thunderstorm at Erfurt, Luther might have been a lawyer.—Chambers' Journal.

Bigger Than They Used to Be.

I have measured a great many Roman coffins, and my average shows that the Roman could not have greatly exceeded five feet five inches. In taking measurements of ancient armor, I find that the English aristocracy have decidedly increased in average height within 500 years.

I measured twenty-five mummies in the British museum as nearly as I could through the cases, making estimate for wrapping, and I found the average height of males sixty-one inches, females fifty-five inches.

The mummy of the celebrated Cleopatra measures about fifty-four inches, about the height of the present European girl of 13. The most ancient mummy of an Egyptian king yet discovered measured fifty-two inches.—Nature.

A Tramp's Modest Request.

Farmer's Daughter—I suppose you want my father to take you in for the season?

Theory Regarding Migration.

The earliest records of the Aryan race taught that the migrations of various peoples of remote antiquity were brought about by the gradual increase of cold in the northern regions, and the theory has received the support of some of the most eminent of modern philomaths.—Globe-Democrat.

Ancient Porphyry Quarries.

An Englishman has discovered the ancient prophyry quarries, where the Romans obtained the stones used in their famous buildings. The quarries are ninety-six miles from the Nile and 8,650 feet above the level of the sea.—New York Tribune.

Instances Where They Have Led to Grave and Important Issues.

It is stated that when Leopold van Ranke began to collect facts for his history, a singular accident occurred in his native town. A bridge gave way one morning, and some persons were swept away in the current beneath. Van Ranke, who was absent at the time, on his return inquired into the details of the catastrophe. "I saw the bridge fall," said one of the neighbors. "A heavy wain had just passed over it and weakened it. Two women were on it when it fell, and a soldier on a white horse." "I saw it fall," declared another; "but the wain had passed over it two hours previous. The foot passengers were children, and the rider was a civilian on a black horse." "Now," argued Von Ranke, "if it is impossible to learn the truth about an accident which happened at broad noonday only twenty-four hours ago, how can I declare any fact to be certain which is shrouded in the darkness of ten centuries." To this trivial incident, which to many persons would have borne no lesson, was due much of his caution and impartiality.

A few moments' consideration will convince any one that some of the most momentous crises in history have hinged upon very slight circumstances. A glass of wine, for instance, changed the history of France for nearly twenty years. Louis Philippe, king of the French, had a son, the Duke of Orleans, and heir to the throne, who always drank only a certain number of glasses of wine, because even one more made him tipsy. The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

It may be admitted that large reductions in the duties on imported manufactured goods would produce great distress in many parts of the United States. The free importation of iron, coal and wool would be a great boom to British producers. * * * If it were accompanied with reductions in the tariff upon cotton, woolen and other manufactures the artisans of this country would derive a marked benefit from it.—The Scotsman.

From Birth to the Grave

We carry with us certain physical traits, as we do certain mental characteristics. Insomuch that psychologists have striven to designate by generic titles certain temperaments—as the billious, the nervous, the lymphatic. The individual with a sallow complexion is set down as billious, often rightly so. If the saffron in the hue of his skin is traceable to bile in the blood, its presence in the wrong place instead of the liver, will also be evinced by fur on the tongue, pain beneath the right ribs and through the right shoulder-blade, sick headache, constipation, flatulence and indigestion. For the relief of this very common, but not essentially perilous complaint, there is no more genial and thorough remedy than Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, which is also a beneficent tonic and strength promoter, and a widely esteemed remedy for and preventive of fever and ague, rheumatism, kidney and bladder troubles.

Jesse D. Carr has been ordered by a government agent to remove a stone fence which he has built around 40,000 acres of government land in California.

It Won't Bake Bread.—In other words, Hood's Sarsaparilla will not do impossibilities. Its proprietors tell plainly what it has done, submit proofs from sources of unquestioned reliability, and ask you frankly if you are suffering from any disease or affection caused or promoted by impure blood or low state of the system, to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. The experience of others is sufficient assurance that you will not be disappointed in the result.

Five thousand miners in the Newcastle district, New South Wales, have given notice that they will stop work unless they are granted an advance in wages.

Don't fill the system with quinine, to prevent or cure fever and ague. Ayer's Ague Cure is the specific for this disease, and leaves no poisons to produce dizziness, deafness, headache, or other disorders.

To the Delicate and Malarious.

The most incredulous are convinced of the virtues of Aunt Rachael's Malarial Bitters upon a trial of them. Their base is Speer's port wine, with herbs and roots so favorably known to the medical profession and the community at large as the best cure for malaria. They are all that can be desired by the most feeble victims of malaria.

IF.

If, when her eyes meet mine, my eyes are sealed
By the last twilight that shall ever fall,
With life and hope forever past recall,
And all their longing by death's love kiss healed,
Perhaps forgiveness, like some lily fair,
May bloom for him who sleeps so soundly there.

If, under shadows that could never cease,
I was at rest, forevermore at rest—
A simple wildwood flower on my breast,
If placed there by her hand might send me peace—
A violet cluster taking from the skies
The summer depths of her sad, violet eyes.

If, in the silence of that last long sleep,
She could but read the mystery and see
That she alone was all life held for me,
Mayhap, across her heart one pang would sweep,
To think that even death could make no less
The soul's dim sense of utter loneliness.

And if at last we wandering shall meet
In heavenly fields of asphodel above,
Will the remembrance of our buried love
Make the white paths of Paradise less sweet—
If to the byways of that far off land
Our journey's cross, by some lone stream, and we together stand?

—Ernest McGaffey.

Dolls of Eastern Siberia.

Lieut. Hooper, writing of the people on the east coast of Siberia, says: "Few countries are there where dolls are not a great resource; the Tuski children have theirs; make and clothe them with the minutest attention to details; every article of dress is provided, and everything put on and off in the proper manner. The boys have miniature sledges, boats and bows and arrows; the girls their dolls, and also embroidery, which they early begin to practice as a pastime, and soon become expert in."—Youth's Companion.

New Kind of Gunpowder.

At the Royal Powder factory of Wetteren, in Belgium, a new gunpowder is being made. They call it poudre papier, or paper powder; and it is said that a charge of two and one-half grammes (thirty-nine grains) gives, in a rifle of small caliber, an initial velocity of 660 yards to the ball. This is equal to, if it does not beat, the Lebel powder. The additional advantages are attributed to it of not smearing the barrel, of producing no smoke, and of causing little recoil.—New York Post.

A Young Doctor's Shrewdness.

A young physician relates that, being called upon to attend a patient who, he knew, would expect to see an elderly and dignified gentleman instead of a person of almost boyish appearance, he took with him an assistant, having given him instructions always to address him as "Doctor," and to act toward him in the most deferential way. This plan to win his patient's trust and respect succeeded admirably, and was the means of increasing his field of practice.—New York Sun.

A Physician's Warning.

A physician thinks that a law should be made to prohibit the use of galvanized iron lemon squeezers. He says that every time a lemon is squeezed in one of these machines the acid of the lemon, coming in contact with the zinc, dissolves the same and forms a poisonous salt. Zinc is a metal which is easily attacked by the weakest acids, and no article of food or drink should ever be allowed to come in contact with it.—Scientific American.

Husband—What, in all this rain? You must be crazy!—The Epoch.

Fretting and Dyspepsia.

We all recognize the loss of appetite that follows anxiety or the sudden shock of grief; but we are not sufficiently alive to our own folly to trace the same inevitable connection between fretting and dyspepsia. Yet it is as certain that we tax our digestions every time we sit down to eat after an attack of worry, as it would be if we were forced to eat as usual after a heavy sorrow.—Demorest's Monthly.

Loss of Your Pencil.

To prevent the loss of your pencil through having it slip from your pocket, put a rubber band around one end. The rubber clings to the lining of the pocket with tenacity enough to prevent the pencil from falling or being jostled from the pocket, yet not enough to make its intentional removal at all inconvenient. The rubber also comes in handy sometimes as an eraser.—"C. L. B." in The Writer.

Woodpeckers of California.

Curious woodpeckers are those in California. They will dig out hundreds of holes in the bark of a pine tree, as round and smooth as if bored by an auger, and in every hole they will hammer an acorn, big end out, and hammer it so tightly you can scarcely pull it out. Why they do this no one knows. The woodpecker has not given his reasons and man cannot find out.—Prentice Mulford in New York Star.

Education in America.

Americans have the good habit of going to college. It is said, as to the learned nations, that in this country one man in every 200 takes a college education; in Germany one in every 213; in England one in every 500, and in Scotland one in every 600. The grade of general intelligence is higher in the United States than in any other country on the globe. —Chicago Herald.

"NERVOUS" MODERN CIVILIZATION.

The Subject as Viewed by a Writer in Far Cathay—No Rest.

It is a very significant aspect of modern civilization which is expressed in the word "nervous." Its original meaning is "possessing nerve; sinewy, strong, vigorous." One of its derivative meanings, and the one which we by far most frequently meet, is "having the nerves weak or diseased; subject to, or suffering from undue excitement of the nerves; easily excited; weakly." The varied and complex phraseology by which the peculiar phases of nervous diseases are expressed has become by this time familiar in our ears as household words.

There is no doubt that civilization, as exhibited in its modern form, tends to undue nervous excitement, and that nervous diseases are relatively more common than they were a century ago. But what we have now to say does not concern those who are specially subject to nervous diseases, but to the general mass of Occidentals, who, while not in any specific condition of ill health, are yet continually reminded, in a great variety of ways, that their nervous systems are a most conspicuous part of their organization. We allude, in short, to people who are nervous, and we understand this term to include all our readers, and, in general, all the people who live in the lands from which we have come. To the Anglo-Saxon race at least it seems a matter of course that those who live in an age of steam and of electricity must necessarily be in a different condition as to their nerves from those who lived in the old, slow days of sailing packets and of mail coaches.

Ours is an age of extreme activity. It is an age of rush. There is no leisure, so much as to eat, and the nerves are kept in a state of constant tension, with results which are sufficiently well known. Business men in our time have an eager, restless air—at least those who do their business in occidental lands—as if they were in momentary expectation of a telegram—as they often are—the contents of which may affect their destiny in some fateful way. We betray this unconscious state of mind in a multitude of acts. We cannot sit still, but we must fidget. We finger our pencils while we are talking, as if we ought, at this particular instant, to be rapidly inditing something ere it be forever too late. We rub our hands together, as if preparing for some serious task which is about to absorb all our energies. We twirl our thumbs, we turn our heads with the swift motion of the wild animal which seems to fear that something dangerous may have been left unseen. We have a sense that there is something which we ought to be doing now, and into which we shall proceed at once to plunge as soon as we shall have dispatched six other affairs of even more pressing importance.

The effect of overworking our nerves shows itself, not mainly in such affections as "fiddler's cramp," "telegrapher's cramp," "writer's cramp," and the like, but in a general tension. We do not sleep as we once did, either as regards length of time or soundness of rest. We are awakened by slight causes, and often by those which are exasperatingly trivial, such as the twitter of a bird in a tree, a chance ray of light straggling into our darkened rooms, the motion of a shutter in the breeze, the sound of a voice, and, when sleep is once interrupted, it is banished. We have taken our daily life to rest with us, and the result is that we have no real rest. In an age when it has become a kind of aphorism that a bank never succeeds until it has a president who takes it to bed with him, it is easy to understand that, while the shareholders reap the advantage, it is bad for the president.—North China News.

The Drying of Mosses.

The power of the mosses to endure repeated desiccation has recently been experimentally treated by G. Schroder, who obtained the interesting result that many of these plants cannot only resist months of dryness without any harm, but also that they do not perish even under the strongest desiccation carried on in a drier with the aid of sulphuric acid. Plants of Barbula muralis, which were exposed for eighteen months in the drier, after a few wettings resumed growth in all their parts. Other species of barbula behaved similarly.

A curious experiment was performed with Grimmia pulvinata, in which a stock which had been cultivated for some time in a moist atmosphere under a bell glass was suddenly exposed to a warm and perfectly dry current of air. It became so dry in a short time that it could be pulverized. Then it lay in a drier for ninety-five weeks. But the quickening moisture was still competent to awaken it to renewed life. The most rapid drying which could be performed in the laboratory could not destroy the plant. It even showed greater power of resistance than would correspond with its real necessities, for so speedy and complete a drying out as was effected in the experiments never counts in nature.—Popular Science Monthly.

Letters 4,000 Years Old.

A remarkable discovery has been made in Egypt of tablets or letters, which compose a literary correspondence of 3,500 to 4,000 years ago, carried on between Egyptians and Asiatics. The tablets now in Vienna represent letters and dispatches sent to Egypt by the governors and kings of Palestine, Syria, Babylonia and other countries of Western Asia. The find is remarkable every way, and opens the people of that age to us with freshness and familiarity. It is clear that the literary spirit is very ancient, and Professor Sayce surmises we shall yet find libraries of clay books. One town in Judah was called "Book Town," or "Library Town." The momentum of this discovery will be marked. Rich men should hesitate no longer to aid in unearthing the vast treasures of the Orient.—Globe-Democrat.

Hiring Wedding Outfits.

Among the oddest developments of New York's haberdashery is that shop where underlinen may be hired for trousseaux purposes, and where the finest of garments may be had for the honeymoon only, if the intending wearer will lay down cold cash sufficient to buy outright a moderate outfit.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

SWIFT'S SPECIFIC

Is entirely a vegetable preparation containing no Mercury, Potash, Arsenic, or other poisonous substances.

SWIFT'S SPECIFIC

Has cured hundreds of cases of Epithelioma or Cancer of the Skin, thousands of cases of Eczema, Blood Humors and Skin Diseases, and hundreds of thousands of cases of Scrofula, Blood Poison and Blood Taint.

SWIFT'S SPECIFIC

Has relieved thousands of cases of Mercurial Poisoning, Rheumatism and Stiffness of the Joints.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 27, 1888—Swift's Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: In the early part of the present year, a bad case of blood poison appeared upon me. I began taking S. S. S. under advice of another, and to-day I feel greatly improved. I am still taking the medicine and shall continue to do so until I am perfectly well. I believe it will effect a perfect cure. Yours truly,

DOC. E. HOWARD, 111 West Sixth St.

COLUMBIA, S. C., July 7, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: I was a great sufferer from muscular rheumatism for two years. I could get no permanent relief from any medicine prescribed by my physician. I took over a dozen bottles of your S. S. S., and now I am as well as I ever was in my life. I am sure your medicine cured me, and I would recommend it to any one suffering from any blood disease. Yours truly,

O. E. HUGHES, Conductor C. & S. E. R.

WACO, TEXAS, May 9, 1888—Gentlemen: The wife of one of my customers was terribly afflicted with a loathsome skin disease, that covered her whole body. She was confined to her bed for several years by this affliction, and could not help herself at all. She could not sleep from a violent itching and stinging of the skin. The disease baffled the skill of the physicians who treated it. Her husband began finally giving his wife Swift's Specific, and she commenced to improve almost immediately, and in a few weeks she was apparently well. She is now a hearty fine-looking lady, with no trace of the affliction left. Yours very truly,

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Generous Souls Are They.

The following interesting item is from the Iron Era, which disputes with the Iron Age the honor of being the recognized "organ" of the British iron-masters and iron and steel manufacturerers:

The Cobden club is trying to raise a large sum of money to be spent in furthering the free trade propaganda in the United States. Lord Brassey has given £1000, others less, and the hat is going round.

What a generous set of souls these British manufacturers are, to be sure! The prominent American journals owned by Englishmen, such as the New York Nation and Times, or conducted by men who know that everything not English is wrong, such as the New York Post and Harper's Weekly, do not cease telling us that if the Americans will only follow the instructions of the British Cobden club and the American President Cleveland, and vote for free trade, the American manufacturers will then be able to compete in foreign markets with the British manufacturers on most favorable terms—that the goods which the American artisan manufactures he will be able to buy at his own price, while his pay will jump up so high that the employer will have to use a telescope to see where it has gone, and that the only thing which stands in the way of the Americans taking the markets of the world from the British, is the retention of the American home market to the American people by means of the American protective tariff. And yet the great British capitalists and manufacturers are willing to aid in all this by subscribing liberally to the fund "for furthering the free trade propaganda in the United States." England has not always been so self-sacrificing in her dealings with other countries—not even with Ireland, which is covered by her own flag. Some people may be suspicious of her magnanimity now, but we are not; we have no suspicions in the matter at all; we know just what it all means—and so do a majority of the voters of the United States.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

Mr. Cleveland demands in effect that there shall be a tariff for revenue purposes only. No tickering with the tariff will suffice; no readjustment of duties will do. The only reform that common sense can accept of is one which unaffectedly substitutes the principle of unimpeded imports for that of tariff regulations.—London Standard.

Danger in Small Fruits.

Can people swallow seeds and the pits of fruit with impunity? It is a topic that may be more important than others of more apparent weight. The slightest amount of physiological knowledge might be supposed to bar the swallowing of cherry stones, yet a young woman died in this neighborhood the other day from peritonitis, caused by such indulgences. This violent form of seed swallowing, however, may be considered as a little apart from the real inquiry, since it is not exactly common, though doubtless much sickness and not a few casualties are caused by it. But what of smaller seed swallowing?

It is not the size of these foreign substances that is the consideration, but their bulk when swallowed in quantity. One would hesitate about swallowing the small handful of pits contained in a moderate bunch of grapes—they make quite a formidable showing—yet they are, all the same, swallowed in eating the grapes, and possibly pack in the stomach or bowels an entirely indigestible mass of woody fiber. As to yet smaller seeds the process is precisely similar, depending only on the quantity of such eaten. The seeds of blackberries are enormous in size and quantity compared with the pulp, and in eating a comfortably large saucerful of this fruit, one swallows the equivalent in seeds of those of a large portion of grapes, or of a number of cherry stones. But are we, then, to bar small fruits as a diet? Scarcely, but more prudence can be exercised. They should be eaten in moderation, early in the day rather than at night. The rejoinder may be made that this stony dissipation has been going on for ages; so it has, and much mischief has undoubtedly marched hand in hand with it. It is clear, at least, that persons with impaired alimentary organs should make the works of those parts as easy as possible, and not load them with quantities of indigestible matter.—Philadelphia Telegraph.

Road to Business Success.

As to the young men in business employments, their way to success—to rise in rank, to become managers and finally owners—is briefly but aptly described by Mr. O. W. Potter. The clerk or other employe who is always a little ahead of time, rather than behind time, at his desk or other post of duty—who lingers instead of hastening as the signal to "knock off" comes—who takes less instead of more than his time at lunch, during off hours and during vacations—who always gets his own allotted tasks done and volunteers to "job around" a little extra or to help others—who puts his mind and energies into his labor—the industrious, assiduous, prompt, willing and ambitious employe, is the one who gains his employers' confidence and affections, who is intrusted with responsibilities, who receives promotion, and who, at length, carries into business of his own the thrift and success which he had displayed in the business of others. Such men do not fail.

Do not run into debt. This is the warning which all who discuss the subject give to young men. The employe or man in business who lives within his income is a free and independent citizen. He who owes a debt is a slave. The debtor who cannot pay, or dislikes to pay, crawls; he is in bondage; he has a master; he may be insulted and cannot resent it, or kicked and cannot return it; he becomes a liar and a dodger; he feels mean, acts mean and is mean. The man who is out of debt walks upright; the light is on his forehead; he is as good as the best and better than the most of his kind. Keep out of debt!—Chicago Journal.

Mark Twain's Queer Methods.

Mark Twain was a queer writer in the days when he composed steadily, and although he calls himself a lazy man, and is certainly moderation of speed and manner personified, yet he was capable of prolonged sittings at his desk, in which the mental labor was intense and exhausting, though no evidence of it appeared in the composition. Sometimes an idea struck him that he thought worth developing, and he brooded it and clucked to it like a hen to a chick. He reveled in it and rolled it about for days like a sweet morsel under his tongue, and then with big sheets of blue paper he set it down in this way and that, writing it diagonally or across the sheet lengthwise, or with a pice of black crayon setting it down on a piece of cardboard. Thus some of the immortal treasures of Mark Twain were first nursed before they were put into cold type.—New York Evening Sun.

Casting Pipes of Glass.

Although glass pipes of large diameter have not as yet been successfully produced, the opinion has been expressed by those engaged in the manufacture of glass on a large scale that the time is not far distant when some method of casting such pipes satisfactorily and cheaply will be devised; and it is believed that made in similar form to the present cast iron pipes, with some suitable mechanism for a joint, and of malleable glass, a water pipe would thus be formed to which there could scarcely be an objection. Strong, tough, smooth and indestructible, and made of a material that is found almost anywhere, it is thought not improbable that, in time, whenever a large quantity of pipe is required in any one locality, a furnace will be erected and the pipes be there made.—Boston Transcript.

Objected to the Outburst.

A leading English judge is hard of hearing, and recently, it is said, there was frequent applause during the hearing of a case before him. He silenced it several times, but after a while came an outburst louder than ever, and in great indignation he exclaimed: "These demonstrations are most unseemly! If they continue I shall have the court cleared at once!" But the noise the judge had heard was a peal of thunder from a storm that had suddenly sprung up.—New York Sun.

For the Museums.

Three thousand little sand crabs from the New Jersey coast have been sent to Europe. They will be placed in museums of natural history connected with schools, where they will be studied as specimens of diminutive crustacea.—Chicago Herald.

Vagrant—I have no father or mother nor any relations at all to care for me.

Philanthropist—Poor man, are they all dead?

"No; they got rich."—Texas Siftings.

A Great Day.

The Burlington Free Press says it is a great day for garden beds when the rain comes down in sheets. Yes, and it is a great day for hay harvesters when the rain comes down in pitchforks.—New York Tribune.

He is most like the gods who wants nothing.—Seneca.

Another Ocean Horror.

The steamship Wieland, which arrived at New York on the 16th inst. from Hamburg, reported that on Aug. 14th, while thirty miles south of Sable island, at noon, she saw the Danish steamer Thingvalla, from Copenhagen for New York, flying signals of distress. The Thingvalla was in collision on the 14th at four A. M. with the steamer Geiser of the same line, from New York on Aug. 11th for Copenhagen. The Geiser sank in about five minutes. Fourteen passengers and seventeen of the crew, among them Captain Moller, were saved; seventy-two passengers and thirty-three of the crew were lost. The steamer Wieland brought 455 passengers from the Thipgvalla and those saved from steamer Geiser to New York. The steamer Thingvalla will endeavor to reach Halifax, Nova Scotia.

The Thingvalla struck the Geiser on the starboard side amidships, between the coal bunkers and the engine room, and tore a big hole in her side. The Thingvalla had her bows stove. A very heavy sea and a dense fog were experienced through the night and early morning of Aug. 14th. It is said that an object could not be distinguished fifty feet away by reason of the fog. Stories differ as to where the liability lies, if not due wholly to the fog and heavy sea. The steamers quickly recoiled, and within five minutes the Geiser sank. The crew of the Thingvalla did all they could to save the Geiser's crew and passengers, while still in doubt whether the Thingvalla was not dangerously disabled, but owing to the heavy sea only thirty-one persons in all were saved. No other vessel was near at the time. The Wieland, on her way to New York, was 100 miles away at the time.

At 11:30 o'clock on the morning of the 14th the Wieland was sighted. Signals of distress were made by the Thingvalla, and a transfer of the passengers began. The sea was then very heavy, but no mishaps occurred in the tranfer of the passengers.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

If once the United States finds herself on the road to free trade she will hardly know where to stop. For the principle which President Cleveland, as head of the democratic party, lays down is really that no import duties are justifiable which are not levied solely for purposes of revenue.—The Scotsman.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for foreign manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

Grover Cleveland has done more to advance the cause of free trade than any Prime Minister of England has done.—London Spectator.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

President Cleveland declines cautiously to dub himself a free trader, but he caters up a free trade position without disguise.—London Saturday Review.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

It is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any free trader could employ now.—London Times.

The London News, commenting on the Maxwell case, deprecates the long delays in criminal procedure in the United States. It thinks the system eminently honorable to the American people, arising as it does from a horror of judicial bloodshed; but it considers that in most cases it is questionable mercy to the condemned.

Note the difference in the figures of women who do and those who do not use modern labor-saving devices.

MORE BACKS are drawn out of shape by the old-fashioned see-saw, rubbing, twisting, wrecking way of washing clothes and cleaning house than by any other means. You ruin your health, form, clothes, paint, and don't get the best results.

Try the greatest invention of this Century in the way of soap—James Pyle's PEARLINE. It does away with the rubbing, hence there is no wear and tear on body or fabric. You don't have to bob up and down over a tub of soiled clothing and dirty water, inhaling poisonous odors and steam; hence you save your health. Its success is marvellous. Millions use it. Millions more will use it. Economical—Effective—Harmless. Every grocer sells Pyle's Pearline. Beware of peddled imitations, they're dangerous. JAMES PYLE, New York.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

Sick Headache

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." WARD ONE DELEGATE CAUCUS.

The republicans of ward one met in the headquarters on Congress street, Friday evening, and elected delegates as follows to the several conventions:

State—George W. Pendexter, Henry J. Eaton, Oliver J. Goldsmith, Joseph R. Curtis, James A. Waterhouse, Michael E. Long.

Congressional — Samuel C. Whittier, Robert King, Walter S. Gray, Charles A. Wendell, Frank L. Marks, A. Coburn Hoyt.

Councillor—Charles W. Shannon, Jesse N. Wilson, John H. Rose, John Milton, W. H. Smith, Charles E. Hatch.

County—Thomas Entwistle, George L. Parks, Winfield Lord, Willard Sears, Maurice Tobin, George B. Wallace.

Senatorial—John H. Locke, Edward S. Ryder, Edward B. Goodall, Henry M. Clark, Benjamin Powell, Henry M. Tucker.

The delegations were empowered to fill vacancies.

DIED IN JAIL.

George Livingstone, aged thirty-one years, belonging in Kingston, was found dead in his cell at the jail on Thursday morning at four o'clock. A physician was called and pronounced the cause heart disease. Livingstone, it will be remembered, was sentenced at the April term of the supreme court to six months imprisonment for adultery. He had been in apparent good health during his incarceration, eating his food regularly and with a relish.

Since the above was in type we learn from Sheriff Coffin that other prisoners in the cell heard Livingston making strange noises, and called Mr. Allen, who endeavored to relieve him, but without avail, as he died before the arrival of Dr. Berry, who quickly responded to a call. Prayer was offered in the jail by Rev. W. A. McGinley, before the removal of the remains.

Y. M. C. A.

We have received from the office of the state executive committee of the Y. M. C. A. at Concord, a note signed by Allen Folger, state secretary, which reads as follows:

"The twenty-first annual convention of Young Men's Christian Associations and Evangelical Churches of New Hampshire will be held at Portsmouth, September 20-23. Messrs. George C. Stebbins of Brooklyn and C. J. Jackson of New Hampshire will conduct the singing; if for any reason Mr. Stebbins should be prevented from coming, Mr. Ira D. Sankey has promised to take his place. Reduced rates on most of our state railroads can be obtained, provided delegates will inform the state secretary in season."

PERSONAL.

Mr. Joseph S. Odiorne of Lousville, Ky., is visiting his parents, Mr. Augustus W. Odiorne and wife, of State street.

Mrs. Edward Moses is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Joseph E. Adams, at Minneapolis, Minn.

Mrs. George T. Vaughan and daughter are passing a few weeks in Greenland.

Mrs. Daniel J. Vaughan and Miss Mabel Vaughan of Cambridge, Mass., are visiting at Mr. H. Fisher Eldredge's on Merrimac street.

Mr. Richard B. Beaumont of Brooklyn, N. Y., arrived in this city on Friday. Mrs. Beaumont has been here for several weeks on a visit to her parents, Mr. B. Whitcomb and wife of Fleet street.

RAILROAD ITEMS.

The Boston & Maine railroad has purchased land of the Swamscott stashing company, at South Newmarket, and is to immediately erect a freight depot thereon.

E. Albert Guppy of Rochester, a painter by trade, forty-five years old, while returning from a berrying expedion in Lebanon, Me., Aug. 16th, walking on the track of the Portland & Rochester railroad, was struck by a train, thrown fifty feet, and instantly killed. He was a brother of George Fox Guppy of Dover, and unmarried. He was very deaf, and evidently did not hear the engine whistle.

THE ELIOT FETE.

One of the attractions at the Midsummer Fete in Eliot on Tuesday and Wednesday of next week will be the issuing of a souvenir paper of eight pages entitled The Fete, and containing, besides the advertisements of the leading merchants and business men of Portsmouth, Dover and South Berwick, and much information in regard to the fair and the object for which it has been gotten up, original articles by Edmund C. Stedman, Edward Everett Hale, Mrs. James T. Fields, Miss Sarah Orne Jewett, John G. Whittier, Oliver Wendell Holmes, Prof. Moses G. Farmer and others, written expressly for this publication, which it is needless to say will in literary merit compare favorably with many of the leading magazines.

The treasurer of the Public Library acknowledges the receipt of $528.70 from Henry A. Yeaton, Esq., executor of the late Mrs. Joshua Brooks, for the permanent fund. Miss Louisa Pennallow started this permanent fund by a bequest of $1000; Miss Ellen T. Pickett added $100; and this of Mrs. Joshua Brooks raises the fund thus far to $1628.70.

William J. Mills of this city has been granted an increase of pension.

People owning fancy dogs should take care of them, and prevent them from destroying their neighbors' property. There have been instances in this city of late where valuable poultry has been destroyed, which the owners have taken much pains to raise. Owners of dogs are liable for the damage created by them.

Pears' Soap is an elegant toilet adjunct.

TO OUR PATRONS: Last season's experience taught us that the Public were surfeited with old fashioned Melo-Drama, and to preserve our hard earned reputation we must change with the Public taste, and present New, Bright, Domestic Comedies. To that end our Company has been specially engaged. All our Pieces are Replete with Mirth, New Music, Songs and Dances.

The Public's Obedient Servant,
JOHN S. MOULTON, Proprietor and Manager.

BASE BALL.

The game between the Lowells and Portsmouths, scheduled for Friday, the 17th, was prevented by rain.

Feen, a left-handed pitcher, has signed with the Portsmouth club. Householder, formerly of the Portlands and later of the Nashuas, has also signed with the Portsmouths.

The Manchester and Portsmouth clubs will play on the South street grounds this afternoon, weather permitting.

MARITIME NOTES.

Schooner Susan E. Nash, Stevens master, arrived at this port on the 17th inst. and went up river to load bricks for Boston at Lucas' yard, Dover point. She will carry 80,000 bricks, and will run between this port and Boston for the remainder of this season. She is owned at this port, and was bought for the brick-carrying trade two years ago, but this is her first trip in that business, she having been profitably employed elsewhere in the meantime.

The brick schooners Lillie, Hattie Lewis, Sadie A. Kimball and G. W. Raitt sailed from this port for Boston on the 17th inst.

The schooner Albert Woodbury, of this port, Ephraim Henry Downs master, took thirty-five barrels of large mackerel off Thatcher's island on the 16th inst. A barrel of large mackerel is worth something now.

The schooner Emily C. Dennison, Garland master, which put in here on the trip from Bangor to Boston to get a new mainboom and repair sails, having been roughly handled in a gale, sailed for her destination on the 17th inst.

The Oceanic will have a big crowd to the Shoals to-morrow, if the day is pleasant. The fare on Sunday is but fifty cents for the round trip.

A patent has been granted to Mr. John W. Hayes of this city for metallic packing.

All dealers sell the Preston Remedies.

A democratic official at the navy yard, in conversation with a democratic descendant of John Langdon on the Parade one day this week remarked, "I suppose you are ready to put on the harness again, and vote for the re-election of President Cleveland?" The answer was, "There is no harness for any one to ride over my back this season."

Four years ago in the presidential campaign there were two democratic flags flying at South Eliot; now there is not one flying. There is one flag, which flew then, in the possession of an old-line democrat who declares his intention of opposing the re-election of Mr. Cleveland, and refuses to allow its use against the election of Harrison to the presidency of the United States.

The American election is infinitely more important to Englishmen than their own internal politics just at this juncture. * * * The main question at issue is English free trade against the continental system of protection.—London Times.

Edwin C. Battey, ticket seller at the Boston Museum, dropped dead in the box office on the morning of Aug. 16th.

What a Time

People formerly had, trying to swallow the old-fashioned pill with its film of magnesia vainly disguising its bitterness; and what a contrast to Ayer's Pills, that have been well called "medicated sugar-plums"—the only fear being that patients may be tempted into taking too many at a dose. But the directions are plain and should be strictly followed.

J. T. Teller, M. D., of Chittenango, N. Y., expresses exactly what hundreds have written at greater length. He says: "Ayer's Cathartic Pills are highly appreciated. They are perfect in form and coating, and their effects are all that the most careful physician could desire. They have supplanted all the Pills formerly popular here, and I think it must be long before any other can be made that will at all compare with them. Those who buy your pills get full value for their money."

"Ayer's Pills outsell all similar preparations. The public having once used them, will have no others."—Berry, Vpnable & Collier, Atlanta, Ga.

EASTERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

To the Holders of Certificates of Indebtedness.

PERSONS desiring to have their names placed upon said Register in order to vote at the coming election must comply with the following regulations of the Trustees. "Every holder of Certificates of Indebtedness who desires to have them registered in his name shall present to the Trustees at their office, No. 10 Tremont St., Boston, a written statement signed by him and giving his address and the denomination and number of every certificate of indebtedness claimed to be held by him, and shall if required by said Trustees verify his title by exhibiting such certificates and the written order of the last registered holder or of the same, or other evidence of his title to the reasonable satisfaction of the Trustees; and said Trustees if satisfied with his title shall indorse their approval upon said written statement, and said certificate holder may thereupon be registered in conformity thereto. The approval of one of said Trustees shall be sufficient authority for such registration, and no registration after the 13th day of August, 1888, shall be valid without such approval, and no approval shall be granted after the time for closing the Register."

The Voting Register will close at the close of business on the 31st day of August, between which time and the special meeting on the 28th day of August, 1888, no registration will be allowed.

Three Summer Dangers.

Three summer dangers menace the household and traveller at every turn. They are climate, food and water. To guard against them requires judgment, abstinance, and SANFORD'S GINGER.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer complaints, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of cholera morbus,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

As a pure fruit stimulant for the aged, mentally and physically overworked, for delicate females, especially mothers, and as a means of reforming those addicted to an excessive use of alcoholic stimulates, it is invaluable.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists and dealers on those who call for and desire only

CITY OF PORTSMOUTH.

CITY MARSHAL'S OFFICE, July 14, 1888.

FREQUENT complaints having been brought to my notice that men and boys are in the habit of bathing in the waters exposed to the streets, highways and other public places, especially in Sagamore Creek near Lafayette road and Sagamore road, in violation of the city ordinances; notice is hereby given that all persons found offending in this particular will be prosecuted to the extent of the law.

JEFF. C. ROWE, City Marshal.

LICENSE YOUR DOGS.

SECTION 1. No dog shall be permitted to go at large or loose in this city until the owner or keeper of such dog, or the keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall have procured from the city marshal a license for such dog.

SECTION 5. It shall be the duty of the city marshal to cause all dogs to be killed which shall be found at large or loose with'n the city without a collar marked as required by law, and to cause all dogs so killed to be buried, and any person may lawfully kill any dog found within the limits of this city going at large contrary to the provisions of this chapter.

SECTION 6. In case any dog shall be found loose or going at large contrary to any of the foregoing provisions, or in case any dog not licensed shall be provided with a collar marked as required in this ordinance, the owner or keeper thereof or the head of the family or keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall upon conviction thereof be fined five dollars.

The above extracts from the city ordinances of the city will be strictly enforced.

JEFF. C. ROWE, City Marshal.

The Making of the Violin.

"Violins that are made as they should be," explained the dealer, "have fifty-eight different pieces. The wood of the belly, or sounding board, should be of soft red fir, a kind only growing on the Tyrolese mountains. It is light and strong, and being of loose grain gives free passage to the waves of sound. The trees are cut in the winter after the sap has ceased to flow, and the wood is thoroughly seasoned before called fit for use. The older the wood the better. For the neck, back and sides Swiss sycamore is regarded the only proper wood. It answers to a different note than the fir, a fact that has been found necessary to the highest harmony. The violins are shaped by exact rule, but the slightest variation in any of the curves gives a difference of tone, so that no two instruments sound exactly alike."

Several violins of the same make and in all respects apparently alike were tested to demonstrate this. They were all tuned in fifths, the lowest giving what is technically known as middle G, this being the correct way to tune a violin, but under the bow there was a marked difference in the quality of tone.

"Did it ever occur to you," was asked the reporter, "that the strain put on a violin by the strings is something tremendous? When tuned to concert pitch the tension of each string is about eighty pounds, making 320 pounds for the four. Yet the thin shell, so frail that a babe could splinter it, will resist that strain for centuries. Of course, the body is strengthened by little strips glued inside at different points; but it seems none the less marvelous to me."—Globe-Democrat.

Houses of the Hindus.

It is noteworthy that there is no word in the Hindustani language that signifies home. There are the house, the household, the dwelling; but no home! The son is always expected to bring his bride to his father's house. If there are several sons in a family, the household becomes a large one by the time they are all married. Every house, when practicable, is built around an open space, or court yard, the entrance to which is secured by a strong gate. A room is set apart for the special use of each family composing the household, although, as a rule, all the men eat together, and afterward the women do the same, but they store their own property in their private rooms.

The house, if that of a poor man, is built of mud or sundried bricks; if that of a rich man, it is built of kiln dried bricks in a substantial manner. There is usually one room, at least, set apart for the men, where they may receive visits from their friends without the privacy of the domestic circle being invaded. There is a well, or small tank, in the court yard, and perhaps a few flowers for idol worship. If there are cows, horses or goats belonging to the family, they are stabled in this inclosure. All the work of the family is performed in it, except, perhaps, the washing and sewing, which are done outside by persons of those castes. The women of the family never go outside except when properly accompanied, guarded and veiled.—Demorest's Monthly.

From a German Cyclopædia.

Here is the ridiculous way in which a German cyclopædia, recently published in Leipsic, describes the social life of a large city in eastern New York, possibly Albany: "After dinner the gentlemen at the reception followed the ladies to the salon and lighted their cigars. Those who did not smoke, chewed and spat quite recklessly on the floor. Many who did not use tobacco, took small knives from their pockets, for an American gentleman always carries some kind of a knife, and carved or cut slivers from the chairs; almost all of them put their feet on tables or chairs. This behavior, which would insult our German ladies, the many beautiful American ladies in the room regarded as a matter of course, much to the astonishment of the writer."—New York Tribune.

Thrift of Victoria's Servant.

John Brown, who probably received more presents than any other menial in the history of the English court, was shrewd enough to anticipate the embarrassment which would be caused to his friends if he died possessing the gifts themselves, so it was the prudent custom of that domestic to sell nearly everything that he received within a few weeks. John Brown was constantly being complimented with costly gifts, but he wisely preferred to possess their value in cash, and in several cases the Bond street jeweler who had sold the present to the royal donor bought it back within a short time from the recipient at very nearly the cost price.—London Truth.

The Cats of Burmah.

Burmese cats are curious looking animals. They have a joint in the middle of their tails, which appendage is in consequence crooked and sticks out in an angle. They are fine specimens of the cat race and very useful in a house. They will attack a venomous snake without hesitation, and show much dexterity in killing one, biting it on the back close to the head. If bitten, as one of my favorite Toms was once by a cobra, they will retire to the jungle, where they eat some herb nature points out to them, and, after the expiration of a few days, come back to the house very lean and hungry, but well and frisky as ever.—Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

Mormondom's "Old Folks' Day,"

Americans generally might well follow the example of the Mormons in one thing, namely, the observation of a holiday called Old Folks' Day. Holidays commemorating some national event are too apt to be seasons of noisy unrest. A day devoted to the old folks would be the occasion of delightful family reunions, and would be a distinct gain to the home life of the people. It would also promote that reverence for old people which is so often lacking in this country. We need more holidays of the right kind. Let us have an Old Folks' Day.—New York Tribune.

Beef Tea in Bulk.

The preparation of the huge quantity of beef tea is one of the sights of the London hospital. One hundred and seventy-two pints a day is a part of the patients' bill of fare.—Chicago Herald.

Wealthy Colored Men.

There are said to be more than 100 colored men in Washington who are worth $35,000 or over. Fred Douglass has a fortune of $300,000.

If your hat blows off in the street follow it with gentle dignity. Somebody will chase it for you.—Harper's Bazar.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of this government, the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

It is to the New World that the Cobden Club is chiefly looking as the most likely sphere for its vigorous foreign policy. It has done what it can in Europe, and is now turning its eye westward and bracing itself for the struggle which is to come. It cannot rest while the United States are unsubdued.—London Times, July 18th, 1880.

The only time England can use a Celt is when he emigrates to America, and votes for free trade. — London Times.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor!" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

A despatch from Bucharest says that M. Nitrovo, the Russian minister there, is organizing a plot to incite an unrising in Albania.

Hay fever sufferers ought to know of its efficacy. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me as a preventive to hay fever. Have been using it since the 9th of August and have found it a specific for that much dreaded disease. For ten years I have been a great sufferer from August 9th till frost, and have tried many alleged remedies, but Ely's Cream Balm is the only preventive I have ever found.—F. B. Ainsworth, publisher, Indianapolis, Ind.

Honest.

In these days of adulteration and fraud, in all branches of business and pursuits, it is pleasing to know that there is one medicine prepared which is strictly pure. Such a medicine is Sulphur Bitters in curing scrofula; you can depend on them every time.—W. B. Evarts, A. M., Charleston, S. C.

Young, old, and middle aged, all experience the wonderfully beneficial effects of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Young children, suffering from sore eyes, sore ears, scald head, or with any scrofulous taint, become healthy and strong by the use of this medicine. Six bottles, $5.

The late Kaiser William of Germany will have an equestrian statue in Stettin which will cost $60,000.

Seymour Thatcher, M. D., of Hermon, N. Y., says Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry cures a cough by loosening and clearing the lungs and allaying irritation, thus removing the cause instead of drying up the cough and leaving the cause behind.

A Sensible Man

Would use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs. It is curing more cases of Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Broychitis, Croup and all Throat and Lung troubles than any other medicine. The great interests of an agricultual, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

It may be admitted that large reductions in the duties on imported manufactured goods would produce great distress in many parts of the United States. The free importation of iron, coal and wool would be a great boom to British producers. * * * If it were accompanied with reductions in the tariff upon cotton, woolen, and other manufactures the artisans of this country would derive a marked benefit from it.—The Scotsman.

The Road Healthward Made Easier.

You have been ill, we will suppose, and are convalescing slowly. That is, you are trying to pick up a little flesh, to regain some of your wonted color, to accustom your stomach to more solid nutriment than its recently enfeebled condition permitted you to take. How can you accelerate your snail's pace healthward? We are warranted by concurrent testimony in affirming that if you will use twice or thrice a day Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an enabling medicine of long ascertained purity and tonic virtues, that you will be materially aided. It promotes a flow of the gastric juices, and helps the system to assimilate the nourishment of which it stands so much in need. It remedies a tendency to constipation without convulsing the bowels. The liver it stimulates to renewed activity, safely promotes the action of the kidneys and bladder, and annihilates malaria and rheumatism at the outset.

Archery increases in fashionable favor all along the country lines, and there are very few well kept lawns now without a target.

The best medical authorities acknowledge the value of Ayer's Pills, and prescribe them with the utmost confidence, as the most effectual remedy for diseases caused by derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Honest.

In these days of adulteration and fraud, in all branches of business and pursuits, it is pleasing to know that there is one medicine prepared which is strictly pure. Such a medicine is Sulphur Bitters in curing scrofula; you can depend on them every time.—W. B. Evarts, A. M., Charleston, S. C.

A Sensible Man

Would use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs. It is curing more cases of Coughs, Colds, Asthma, Bronychitis, Croup and all Throat and Lung troubles than any other medicine. CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper. W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y. eowly ans9

The Instinct of Evil Living.

Thousands of the "unemployed" earn no wages because they do not want to work. They do odd jobs, they loaf, they tramp, they pilfer, they steal, and so on through the whole gamut of laziness and vice. Why is this? We have already said. Human nature is far from perfect yet. Many rogues are born; many others are easily turned into rogues by circumstances. It is likely enough that the instinct of evil living is transmitted; it is certain that the contamination of vicious surroundings has its natural effect. Necessity holds the born felon in a pitiless grip. Birth gives the infant the fatal bent; home life develops it. The unwieldy bulk of modern society is traversed by hard lines of moral as well as of social cleavage.

Crime runs into pockets like ore in the mine. The Ishmaelites dwell alone and propagate among themselves. There is nothing to attenuate the vicious strain. We have on the fringe of the decent population a class of creatures who, at best, are worthless, and too often are pure pests. It is recruited, but it is not regenerated, from the outside; on the other hand, it feeds the ranks of the thriftless, the reckless, the ne'er-do-wells. What must be the result of such a state of things? With a rapidly increasing population, with a greater mass of poverty, a greater number of viciously disposed people crowding into "East ends" in all our great cities, what can we expect from a continuance of the present system of dealing with the criminal classes? Reason answers that we are to expect nothing but evil.—St. James' Gazette.

Dangers of Trapping the Grizzly.

I saw some remarks upon this subject the other day from an old trapper and hunter which evince a most thorough knowledge of the matter, and which coincide in every particular with my own personal experience.

He says: "I have hunted and trapped the grizzly bear scores of times, and if any one thinks there isn't peril as well as excitement in the sport, let him go out into the grizzly's country and try it. I know that the grizzly bear, next to the Indian, was the ugliest customer thirty years ago that the hunter had to deal with. In those days we used to think there was more danger in trapping the grizzly bear than there was in chasing him with the rifle.

"There have been times when trappers have come up with the bear at the very moment he has succeeded in tearing loose from the trap. I know one man, James Carver by name, who happened to reach his grizzly at such a time. The bear made one rush, and before the companion who was with Carver realized the situation the bear had torn Carver to pieces.

"I heard some one say once that when you have trapped a 1,000 pound grizzly you haven't caught a bear at all, but simply the devil incarnate, and I tell you that's pretty near the truth."—Gen. Marcy in Outing.

Working a Swiss Wine Press.

In the cafes and other public places there were placards advertising American wine presses, but I saw none of them in use. At a farm house near us we looked on at the use of one of the old fashioned Swiss presses. Under it lay a mighty cake of grapes, stems and skins, crushed into a common mass, and bulging further beyond the press with each turn of the screw, while the juice ran in a little rivulet into a tub below. When the press was lifted the grapes were seen only half crushed. Two peasants then mounted the cake and trimmed it into shape with long handled spades, piling the trimmings on top, and then bringing the press down again. They invited us with charming politeness to taste the juice, but their heavy boots bore evidence of too recent a visit to the cherished manure heap, and we thanked them with equal courtesy.

This grape cake, when it had yielded up its last drop, would be broken to pieces and scattered over the fields as a fertilizer. The juice would meanwhile have been placed to ferment in the tuns, twelve and thirteen feet deep, which lay in the adjoining cellar.—W. D. Howells in Harper's Magazine.

Oriental Peddlers in New York.

Turks and Arabs occasionally come through Castle Garden with designs on America as a dwelling place, and they generally stay and succeed right well. They pick up the language in no time, and are soon busy at small tobacco stands, or in Oriental bazars and Turkish bath houses, or selling Turkish confections and highly diluted attar of roses on the streets and in shops and offices. As peddlers they get on beautifully. Their handsome faces and Oriental manners draw nickels and quarters from those they approach with magical celerity. They always have a "God be with you," or a "Peace be yours," even for those who resist their blandishments. Their patience is something miraculous, and their persistence is without the irritating vulgarity which sometimes mars the otherwise perfect symmetry of the American born vender of small merchandise, who becomes in time a bulldozer of high degree. Only the male Turks and Arabs engage in the scuffle for bread. They usually discard their twistified names, and rechristen themselves by some easy and comfortable Christian name, such as "Charley," "George" or "William."—New York Press "Every Day Talk."

Paternal Reminiscences.

Col. Fred Grant and Robert Lincoln were conversing in low tones in the Fifth Avenue hotel corridor, Col. Grant pulled a cigar out of his pocket and stuck it in his mouth. From his trousers pocket he drew forth a solid gold match box, studded with diamonds. He touched the biggest stone with his thumb and the lid of the box flew open.

"Quite a match box," said Lincoln.

"Yes," said Col. Grant. "It was given to father by the sultan of Turkey. I would not part with for the world. It is very valuable. Father carried it for years. Do you carry anything that was precious to your father?"

"Yes," was the reply, and the speaker pulled out of his pocket an open face solid gold watch.

"It was given to father by mother," said the speaker. The inscription read: "To Abraham Lincoln, from his loving wife."—Foster Coates' Letter.

WHOLESALE BUFFALO HUNTING.

They heard strange noises, and looking toward the west beheld a great black surging mass, waving and rolling up across the prairie, half hidden by great clouds of dust, which were only occasionally blown away by the brisk autumn wind. It was the great herd of buffalo and they had been stampeded by the Indian hunters. The roar of the hoofs upon the dry earth was like the low and sullen thunder. The vanguard of the herd was yet more than a mile away, but the dark line stretched to right and left almost as far as the eye could reach, and our hunters saw that instant and precipitate flight was necessary in order to save their lives. They specially chose the northward as offering the shortest and best direction by which to escape the coming avalanche, and, sinking the spurs deep into their terror stricken beasts, they flew with the velocity of an arrow across the wild prairie. A mile was covered in a few seconds, and yet they were not past the herd, which was rapidly closing in upon them.

They turned their horses' heads partly in the direction the buffaloes were going, and, urging them to their utmost speed, finally passed the outer line of the herd just as the leaders passed by. Then, having reached a place of safety, they dismounted, and, throwing their bridle reins over their arms, commenced to load and fire into the herd with all possible rapidity, nearly every shot killing or disabling an animal. It took nearly half an hour for the rolling, surging, angry horde to pass the point where our hunters stood, and as the rear guard came in sight there came a new and still more terrible scene in the great tragedy.

More than 100 Indians were in hot pursuit of the savage beasts. They were mounted on wild and almost ungovernable bronchos, who were frothing at the mouth, charging and cavorting among the fleeing game. The white foam dropped in flakes and bubbles from all parts of their bodies. Their nostrils were distended, their eyes flashed fire, and they seemed as eager as their wild masters to deal death to their victims. The savage riders seemed beside themselves with mad, ungovernable passions. Their faces were painted in the most glaring colors, their bright and many colored blankets fluttered in the wind, secured to the saddle only by an end or a corner, their long black hair streaming back like the pennant at the mast head of a ship, and their deep, black eyes gleamed like diamonds in a dungeon. Arrow after arrow flew from deep strung bows and sunk to the feathered end in the quivering flesh of the shaggy monsters. Ponderous spears were hurled with the power and precision of giants and struck down the defenseless victims as a sturdy woodman strikes down the frail sapling in his path.

"Crack!" "crack!" came from rifles, and "ping!" "ping!" from carbines and revolvers. Hundreds of shots were fired by those who carried firearms, and before these murderous weapons the poor bison sank like ripened grain before the reaper's blade.

One young warrior, more ardent and fearless than the rest, had forced his high strung steed far into the middle of the solid phalanx, where the horse was finally impaled upon the horns of a monster bull. He and his rider were tossed like sheaves of wheat into the air; then both sank to earth, and were instantly trodden into the dust.

At last the great storm had passed, and our friends watched until it faded away into the distance and disappeared from their view. Then came the squaws, the boys and the old men, to dispatch the wounded and to skin and cut up the dead. These were strewn all over the prairie, and not a tithe of them were or could be saved by all the people, white and red, assembled there.—G. O. Shields in Outing.

Chinese Progress in Telegraphy.

The Chinese are fast extending their telegraph system, and it will not be many months before every town and hamlet of any size in the empire will have a telegraph office. In extending the lines a great deal of work has been necessary, and several large rivers had to be crossed. This was difficult work owing to the great floods that at different seasons of the year cause them to overflow their banks and sweep everything before them. Some of these rivers, when at the flood, are from five to eight miles in width. In extending the work across the rivers it was found necessary to use the heaviest kinds of cables, but at times these were torn away and the work was delayed. To offset this mishap a laid line was built to high points and the wires were run overhead. One of these overhead cables has a span of 1,690 yards. This aerial line is the second longest in the world. The offices are daily increasing, and the work of construction is being engineered by Americans and Englishmen. Much of the material used in the construction of the system is manufactured in this country.—Demorest's Monthly.

Lending Keys to Strangers.

The wiles of the criminal classes are often so ingenious that I can't help believing that if those who practice them were to turn their energies into other courses they would attain no small meed of honor and fame. Some little time ago, for example, a burglar was caught red handed in a strong room, opening a safe with a key that could not have been more perfect had it been supplied by the maker of the lock. The man, after having been convicted, was asked to say how he had obtained the key.

"Nothing easier," he replied. "We knew who carried the key and what it was like, so me and my pals got into the same railway carriage with your manager when he was going home one day. One of us had a bag which he couldn't open. 'Has my gentleman a key?' he asked. Your manager produced his bunch, and my pal, who had wax in his palm, while appearing to open his bag, took a likeness of the key of the safe. There's the secret for you."—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

FOR OLD PEOPLE!

In old people the nervous system is weakened, and that must be strengthened. One of the most prominent medical writers of the day, in speaking of the prevalence of rheumatic troubles among the aged, says: "The various pains, rheumatic or other, which old people often complain of, and which materially disturb their comfort, result from disordered nerves." There it is in a nut shell —the medicine for old people must be a nerve tonic.

Old people are beset with constipation, flatulency, drowsiness, diarrhœa, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia. These diseases are of nervous origin. Paine's Celery Compound, that great nerve tonic, is almost a specific in these disorders, and by its regulating influence on the liver, bowels, and kidneys, removes the disorders peculiar to old age. Old people find it stimulating to the vital powers, productive of appetite, and a promoter of digestion.

Sold by druggists. $1.00. Six for $5.00. Send for eight-page paper, with many testimonials from nervous, debilitated, and aged people, who bless Paine's Celery Compound.

SARATOGA FASHIONS.

VARIETY IN UNITY—THIN WAISTS—INDEPENDENT BASQUES—LONG CLOAKS—THE GOING OF THE BUSTLE.

The costume of to-day is often of not so much importance as what goes with it, the character being changed completely by its bows, sashes, combinations, and most of all, the various vests and plastrons that may be transferred from one dress to another. Never was economy so feasible by reason of adroit adaptation, and never has genteel poverty had such chances as to-day. Braidings go to swell the list of convenient additions, while fabrics are united so variously that old dresses can easily come out new, by putting two together. These reflections are presented, not so much that the reader may spend time in regret as to what might have been accomplished and has not been, as to stimulate ingenuity for the future. The stamp of extraordinary and really a piecemeal variety is on the world of dress, and will continue during the winter.

SUPREMELY EFFECTIVE

Are independent waists and basques, and the looker-on at Saratoga must indeed be unobservant not to notice the unique results produced by full waists of net over silk. Nothing was ever devised more becoming to the thin, and with diaphanous fabric plaited or shirred to a yoke, with fullness below, and full sleeves, no one need look scrawny. The favorite finish is a ribbon belt with flot of long loops and ends on one side, but in consequence of these full waists a demand for belts has arisen, and they appear in dressed or undressed kid in stylish shades of tan, gray or blue, or in Russian leather that comports well with the rage for red. Cotton point d'esprit in colors does not look shabby, and is inexpensively made up over Silesia. But all thin materials are pressed into service for independent waists. They are extremely pretty made of Surah, China silk, crepe de chine, etc., while

INDEPENDENT BASQUES

Of heavier goods are quite as fashionable, convenient, economical, and incomparably better suited to plump figures. Plain or figured silk, wool or thick cottons are used, but the handsomest are still of velvet, or "on the sly" doubtless, of Velutina, which grows in favor as a substitute, the more so as in addition to other strong points, it shows the crisp polish of velvet in place of the plush-like surface noticeable in imitations. Entire costumes of velvet or velutina afford a handsome change for cool days, and have the advantage of being suitable for any season. Independent basques require, however, special nicety of fit, and among dressmakers here, the Thompson Glove-fitting corsets are most in favor, not only because giving a long, slender waist and high bust, but because of individual adaptation, since they are manufactured in different styles, short, medium and long, to suit different figures. The elegant styles in pale pink, blue, gray or crimson satin are chiefly sold at Saratoga, but equally well fitting in jean or coutil, come at moderate prices.

LONG CLOAKS

For driving are thought very stylish, and of the Newmarket or Raglan order are made of solid colored silk with fine effect. Gay crimson silk cloaks are beautiful when worn by the right people; mahogany of course is in favor; dark blue is too handsome to be ignored, nor must an inevitable green be forgotten. The very latest cloak, however, is made with a yoke to which very full, straight breadths are plaited or gathered and shirred to a belt at the back, falling plain in front. This style is becoming to thin figures. Bustles remain a complicated question. The fashion books write them down. Good-bye has been said to them so often that they ought to go, but they stand on the order of their going and plainly show their outlines even at Saratoga.

LUCY CARTER.

NATIVES OF MARTINIQUE.

A Peculiar Type of Physical Beauty—A Blending of Races.

Then you begin to look about you at the black, brown and yellow faces that are studying you curiously from beneath the yellow striped Madras turbans, or from under the shadow of mushroom shaped straw hats large as umbrellas. Watching the bare backs, bare shoulders, bare legs and arms and feet, you find that the colors of flesh are more varied and surprising than the colors of fruits. And it is only with fruit colors that many of these skin tints can be compared at all, the only terms of comparison used by the colored people themselves being terms of this kind, such as peau-sapotille, "sapota skin." The sapota or sapotille is a juicy brown fruit, with a rind satiny like a human cuticle, and just the color, when fresh and ripe, of a fine mulatto skin. But among the brighter half breeds I think the colors are much more fruit like; there are gourd tints, banana tints, orange colors, with occasional flushes of pink showing through, like the first pink of the mango. Agreeable to the eye the darker tints certainly are, and often very remarkable, all tones of bronze being represented; but the brighter hues are absolutely beautiful in certain half breed types, coolie and quadroon. Standing perfectly naked at doorways, or playing naked in the sun, astonishing children may be seen—banana colored and mango colored babies. But there is one peculiar type, totally unlike all the rest; the skin is an exquisite metallic yellow, a perfect gold tone; the eyes are long and black; the intensely dark and lustrous hair falls over the neck in a heavy mass of thick, rich, glossy curls that show blue lights in the sun.

I cannot speak of this comely and extraordinary type without translating a passage from Dr. J. J. J. Corniliiac, an eminent Martinique physician, who recently published a most valuable series upon the ethnology, climatology and history of the Antilles. In these he writes:

"When, among the populations of the Antilles, we first notice those remarkable metis whose olive skins, elegant and slender figures, fine straight profiles, and regular features remind us of the inhabitants of Madras or Pondicherry, we ask ourselves in wonder—while looking at their long eyes, full of a strange and gentle melancholy (especially among the women), and at the black, rich, silky gleaming hair curling in abundance over the temples and falling in profusion over the neck—to what human race can belong this singular variety, in which there is a dominant characteristic that seems indelible, and always shows more and more strongly in proportion as the type is further removed from the African element. It is the Carib blood, blended with blood of Europeans and of blacks, which in spite of all subsequent crossings, and in spite of the fact that it has not been renewed for more than two hundred years, still conserves; as remarkedly as at the time of the first interblending, the race characteristic that invariably reveals its presence in the blood of every being through whose veins it flows."

All this population is vigorous, graceful, healthy; all you see passing by are well made; there are no sickly faces, no scrawny limbs. If by some rare chance you encounter a person who has lost an arm or a leg, you can be almost certain you are looking at a victim of the fer de lance—the serpent whose venom putrefies living tissue. Without fear of exaggerating facts, I can venture to say that the muscular development of the working men here is something which must be seen in order to be believed; to study fine displays of it, one should watch the blacks and half-breeds working naked to the waist—on the landings, in the gas houses and slaughter houses, or on the nearest plantations. They are not large men, perhaps not extraordinarily powerful; but they have the aspect of sculptural or even of anatomical models; they seem absolutely devoid of adipose tissue; their muscles stand out with a saliency that astonishes the eye. It is marvelous. At a tanning yard, while I was watching a dozen blacks at work, a young mulatto, with the mischievous face of a faun, walked by, wearing nothing but a clout about his loins; and never, not even in bronze, did I see so beautiful a play of muscles. A demonstrator of anatomy could have used him for a class model; a sculptor, wishing to shape a fine Mercury in bronze, would be satisfied to take a cast of such a body, without thinking of making one modification from neck to heel.—Lafacadio Hearn in Harper's Magazine.

The Climate of St. Petersburg.

If it is May or June do not come to Russia without the heaviest winter clothing and the heaviest of winter wraps, even though you may have left England all ablaze with hawthorne blossoms, Holland carpeted with tulips and Perlin at summer heat. Remember that the Russian calendar is twelve days later than ours. Remember that St. Petersbug is on the shores of the Baltic sea. Remember also that you are on the direct route to the North pole. Already I have seen two hard snow storms, and our teeth have been on a continual chatter since reaching here. In the country (May 28) the peasants are just plowing and sowing for their summer crops, and in the city heavy overcoats and furs seem quite at home.

There is one thing, however, that strikes an American very agreeably as well as strangely, and that is the suddenly increased length of the days. Even now the sun does not set until about 9 o'clock and rises no one knows how early; and soon the longest days will have reached here when the sun is only nominally below the horizon from one-quarter past 10 till one-quarter before 2, but really the twilight is so bright that one can read with ease all night. No doubt this has much to do in maturing the harvest so rapidly in the few months of summer.—Cor. Detroit Free Press.

Value of a Red Cent.

"Are any of the cents valuable?" Mr. Richard Cogan was asked. "The date that is usually considered most valuable," he replied, "is the 1799; but the highest price I ever knew to be paid for one was for an 1804. It was a fine specimen—a bright red. This, unless a coin has been scoured or treated with vinegar, shows that it is uncirculated, just as it came from the mint. An old dealer can tell in a moment when a coin has been 'doctored.' People sometimes speak of anything that is not worth much as 'not worth a red cent,' but if that cent happens to be of a rare date its redness is $50 in its owner's pocket. This coin brought $205. I think it was the highest price ever paid for a United States cent."—New York World.

A Youthful Epicure.

"Straining at a Gnat and Swallowing" Ect.

The president, notwithstanding his Jacksonian firmness, dared neither to sign nor to veto the river and harbor bill, which contained what seemed to him very objectionable appropriations. But he had the courage to veto a bill providing a pension of a few dollars per year for a poor widow. This resembles the conduct of the New York police officer who was afraid to attempt the arrest of a bully, but went into the next street and clubbed a small gamin.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

If once the United States finds herself on the road to free trade she will hardly know where to stop. For the principle which President Cleveland, as head of the democratic party, lays down is really that no import duties are justifiable which are not levied solely for purposes of revenue.—The Scotsman.

Naval Intelligence.

The sentence of dismissal pronounced against the naval cadets who were found guilty of hazing on board the practice-ship Constellation, has been commuted to six months confinement to the Santee, and deprivation of half their annual leave of absence.

Secretary Whitney has ordered Admiral Luce, commanding the North Atlantic squadron, to proceed in the Galena to Port au Prince, Hayti, as the presence of an American man-of-war is needed there on account of the state of martial law which exists. The request for a man-of-war came from Consul General Thompson, at Port au Prince, and Admiral Luce is directed to report to him and aid him, as far as possible, in protecting American interests in Haytian waters, and bringing about a solution of the trouble.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

In view of the fact that the naval cadets found guilty of hazing were able to bring to bear upon the president an appreciation of the political influence they were able to wield, Mr. Cleveland has virtually said "Go and sin no more; but if you are caught again, look out!"

Mr. Cleveland demands in effect that there shall be a tariff for revenue purposes only. No tinkering with the tariff will suffice; no readjustment of duties will do. The only reform that common sense can accept of is one which unaffectedly substitutes the principle of unimpeded imports for that of tariff regulations.—London Standard.

One little steal of reform officials at the Brooklyn navy yard, developed by the investigation now in progress, is as follows: It is the custom to order goods to be delivered at the storehouse; then the inspecting board is sent for, and certifies as to the quantity and quality. In the particular case referred to, one hundred chests of tea were ordered, and the merchant was privately instructed to send only eighty chests, accompanied by a bill for the entire hundred. Upon the arrival of the eighty chests, twenty were added from the storage rooms, and when the inspection officers arrived there were one hundred chests, as was called for by the requisition. Then the reformers quietly called upon the merchant for the value of the twenty chests paid for by the government, but not received.

BASE BALL.

In reference to the defeat of the Portsmouth club at Worcester on Wednesday of last week, the Manchester Mirror said: "Anybody well acquainted with Frank J. Leonard, manager of last season's Manchester ball team, knows that he is the last person in the world to 'rush into print' with a grievance; but at Worcester yesterday the Portsmouth club, of which he is the manager, was so deliberately robbed of a game by a Worcester player, who officiated as umpire, that he felt compelled to publish the following card in the Worcester Spy * * * Mr. Leonard was seen at the Hotel Windsor this afternoon by a Mirror reporter, and his explatation of the treatment his club received in the ninth inning, when the Worcesters won the game, leaves no doubt as to the fact that the Portsmouth team was deliberately robbed, a fact, too, that is generally conceded by the press and public of Worcester."

The game between the Portsmouth and Manchester clubs on the South street grounds, Saturday afternoon, was won by the visitors. The game was witnessed by about 500 persons, who saw some excellent playing. The score:

Among the recent visitors who have inscribed their names in the register kept by Capt. Grogan, keeper of White island light-station, are Miss M. A. Kelley, J. W. Kelley, Margaret E. Kelley, Grace A. Henderson, Cora W. Barnabee, Charles F. Richards, Samuel K. Batchelder, Portsmouth; John Albee, Newcastle; Oliver P. Haynes, Lynn; J. T. Cunning, ham, Stillman B. Allen, Willie B. Allen, Marion Allen, Mrs. Clara P. Boss, Master Ed. L. Boss, Boston.

ROUND-TRIP TICKETS.

Secretary Frank D. Currier, of the republican state committee of New Hampshire, requests us to give notice to delegates to the republican State and Congressional conventions that round-trip tickets will be sold to them at the uniform rate of two cents a mile over the Concord railroad and branches, the Boston & Maine and branches (including the Northern division,) the Boston, Concord & Montreal, the Cheshire and the Monad-the conductors will have the tickets for sale; on all the other roads the tickets must be purchased of the ticket agents at the several stations. The tickets will be for sale Sept. 3d, 4th and 5th, and will be good for return passage not later than Sept. 6th.

The State convention will be held in Concord on Tuesday, Sept. 4th, and the Congressional convention of the second district in the same city at the close of the State convention. The Congressional convention of the first district will be held in Smyth's opera house, Manchester, Sept. 5th, at 11:30 o'clock A. M.

POLICE COURT.

Albert Preston was before the court on Friday afternoon, charged with drunkenness and assault; for the latter offence he was fined $1, and $3 for being drunk, costs being taxed at $8.04, in each case, a total of $20.08, fines and costs.

MUSIC HALL.

This evening John S. Moulton's Comedy company will commence a week's engagement at Music hall, with the popular comedian Jay Hunt in the title role of "Uncle Ezra." Popular prices—10, 20 and 30 cents; reserved seats at Goodrich's. Change of programme each evening; see advertisement.

MARITIME NOTES.

The steamer Minnecola, with a large excursion party from Haverhill, Mass., came to this port on Sunday.

The steamer Oceanic took a large party to the Shoals on Sunday. No finer day for an excursion could be procured, though made to order.

The steamer Cocheco came down the river from Dover on Sunday forenoon with an excursion party of Sons of Veterans and their friends, and made a trip outside the harbor.

The alewive catch in the Exeter river during the season just closed was 350 barrels, not including the very considerable number of fish sold fresh at the time of catch. This is the best take for a number of years, although the time was when almost any kind of a weir would take one or two hundred barrels in a season.

The Danish steamer Thingvalla, which sank the Geiser on the morning of the 14th, arrived at Halifax on the 17th, with her bow stove in for fifteen feet back of the stem. It now appears that while there was a light rain prevailing at the time of the collision, there was no fog, and that both steamers' lights were burning brightly.

RAILROAD ITEMS.

Five cars loaded with dressed beef were derailed at North Boscawen on the Northern railroad, Aug. 17th, and the track was torn up for a long distance. No person was hurt.

The attorneys of the Manchester & Lawrence railroad on the 18th inst. served two writs on the Concord railroad, one being an action in trover to recover a large amount of rolling stock and personal property, valued at $300,000, which is claimed as the property of the Manchester & Lawrence railroad, but which the Concord railroad refuses to turn over. The remaining suit is an action of assumpsit for $800,000 of alleged money of the Manchester & Lawrence road, earned under an agreement under which the roads were operated for some years.

The grand officers of New Hampshire, I. O. O. F., will visit New Hampshire lodge of this city on Wednesday evening, Aug. 22d.

There are floating in the sultry air of dog days suggestions that in the making up of the committees the mayor has undertaken to clip the wings of his successor in office. That will not work. The major is not only irrepressible but he is as an official energetic, and that is what the people like.

Both the hotels at the Isles of Shoals are crowded with guests, cot beds and sofas being called into requisition for their accommodation.

The directors of the Portsmouth Athletic club have voted to have an athletic tournament Sept. 10th, on the South street base ball grounds if they can be secured.

Pears' Soap is an elegant toilet adjunct.

Every boat at the river landings, and every horse at the stables, were out on Sunday. It was a remarkably fine day, bright and sunny, yet not too warm for comfort. The roads were free from dust, and the waters calm and smooth, the wind blowing a gentle breeze from the westward.

There was a beautiful floral display at the residence of Mr. George A. Mudge on Marston's island, Sunday evening, when a cactus of some night-blooming variety exhibited six magnificent flowers at once, all very large and fragrant.

The great pine at Kingston, which for years has been a prominent landmark, especially to the fishermen of Hampton, Seabrook and South Hampton, fell on the evening of Aug. 6th. It was 120 feet high and thirteen feet in circumference three feet from the ground. It had twice been struck by lightning, and for years it has been a dead, skeleton tree.

Sweet's store at Kittery Foreside was gutted and his stock totally ruined by fire and water on Sunday morning, the 12th inst. By the middle of the week he had opened another store directly opposite with an entirely new stock, and on Saturday, the 18th, the insurance was satisfactorily adjusted.

A barn belonging to Mr. Samuel McIntire at Beech Ridge, York, was burned on Friday night of last week. This is the third barn that has been burned in that vicinity within a month—all supposed to be the work of an incendiary. No insurance. The loss is estimated at $500; the animals in the barn were saved, but the entire crop of hay from the farm was destroyed.

Sanguine hopes are entertained by the friends of Robert Garrett as to his ultimate recovery.

RAYMOND'S VACATION EXCURSIONS.

ALL TRAVELLING EXPENSES INCLUDED.

Parties will leave Boston, Monday, September 10, and Monday, October 8, for Two Grand Trips Direct to

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA.

These trips are intended for persons who desire to reach Southern California by a direct route and as expeditiously as may be consistent with perfect comfort. The halts by the way are intended for rest. The trips will be carried out upon the same plan that has made our winter excursions of the past few years so acceptable and popular, and ticket-holders will possess all the advantages given in connection with the later excursions in the season of 1888-89. The tickets supply every needed comfort during transits to and from California, including sleeping-car accommodations, meals, transfers, and board at hotels, but leave the holders to dispose of their time in California in accordance with their own preferences. All travel in Palace Sleeping Cars. The Return Tickets Good until July, 1889, with a Choice of Five Different Routes Eastward from San Francisco or Los Angeles.

In addition to the above, parties will leave September 10 for the Yellowstone National Park, the Pacific Northwest and California, and "Around the Circle" in Colorado; and October 8 for the Pacific Northwest and California and for Colorado. Also Eighteen Autumn Trips to popular Northern and Eastern resorts during the month of September.

EASTERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

To the Holders of Certificates of Indebtedness.

PERSONS desiring to have their names placed upon said Register in order to vote at the coming election must comply with the following regulations of the Trustees. "Every holder of Certificates of Indebtedness who desires to have them registered in his name shall present to the Trustees at their office, No. 10 Tremont St., Boston, a written statement signed by him and giving his address and the denomination and number of every certificate of indebtedness claimed to be held by him, and shall if required by said Trustees verify his title by exhibiting such certificates and the written order of the last registered holder of the same, or other evidence of his title to the reasonable satisfaction of the Trustees; and said Trustees if satisfied with his title shall indorse their approval upon said written statement, and said certificate holder may thereupon be registered in conformity thereto. The approval of one of said Trustees shall be sufficient authority for such registration, and no registration after the 13th day of August, 1888, shall be valid without such approval, and no approval shall be granted after the time for closing the Register."

The Voting Register will close at the close of business on the 21st day of August, between which time and the special meeting on the 28th day of August, 1888, no registration will be allowed.

EASTERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

A SPECIAL MEETING of the Holders of Certificates of Indebtedness issued under the act entitled, "An Act for the relief of the Eastern Railroad Company and the securing of its debts and liabilities," passed April 28th, 1876, will be held at the Eastern Railroad Station in Boston, Mass., on the 28th day of August, 1888, at eleven o'clock A. M., for the purpose of electing a new Trustee under said act in place of William C. Rogers, deceased.

WM. P. PHILLIPS, CHARLES R. CODMAN, } Surviving Trustees.

Want of Sleep

Is sending thousands annually to the insane asylum; and the doctors say this trouble is alarmingly on the increase. The usual remedies, while they may give temporary relief, are likely to do more harm than good. What is needed is an Alterative and Blood-purifier. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is incomparably the best. It corrects those disturbances in the circulation which cause sleeplessness, gives increased vitality, and restores the nervous system to a healthful condition.

Rev. T. G. A. Coté, agent of the Mass. Home Missionary Society, writes that his stomach was out of order, his sleep very often disturbed, and some impurity of the blood manifest; but that a perfect cure was obtained by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frederick W. Pratt, 424 Washington street, Boston, writes: "My daughter was prostrated with nervous debility. Ayer's Sarsaparilla restored her to health."

KNOW THYSELF.

Cut this out. You may never see it again.

Three Summer Dangers.

Three summer dangers menace the household and traveller at every turn. They are climate, food and water. To guard against them requires vigilance, abstinance, and SANFORD'S GINGER.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer complaints, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of cholera morbus,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

As a pure fruit stimulant for the aged, mentally and physically overworked, for delicate females, especially mothers, and as a means of reforming those addicted to an excessive use of alcoholic stimulates, it is invaluable.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists and dealers on those who call for and desire only

LICENSE YOUR DOGS.

SECTION 1. No dog shall be permitted to go at large or loose in the city until the owner or keeper of such dog, or the keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall have procured from the city marshal a license for such dog.

SECTION 5. It shall be the duty of the city marshal to cause all dogs to be killed which shall be found at large or loose within the city without a collar marked as required by law, and to cause all dogs so killed to be buried, and any person may lawfully kill any dog found within the limits of this city going at large contrary to the provisions of this chapter.

SECTION 6. In case any dog shall be found loose or going at large contrary to any of the foregoing provisions, or in case any dog not licensed shall be provided with a collar marked as required in this ordinance, the owner or keeper thereof or the head of the family or keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall upon conviction thereof be fined five dollars.

The above extracts from the city ordinances of the city will be strictly enforced.

Mormon Colony in Chihuahua.

The Mormons have within the past three years seen the advantages of cheap grazing and farming lands in this country and the opportunity to escape persecution in the United States. The results are seen in the flourishing colonies of Juarez and Diaz, the former adjoining us, the latter about seventy-five miles to the north.

Each colony comprises from 200 to 300 souls. They are recognized for their fair dealing, honesty and thriftiness. The country owes them a debt of gratitude for introducing high grade live stock of all descriptions, farming implements, seeds, trees, saw and flour mills and industries hitherto unknown to the Mexican but in its most primitive form. Though polygamy is against the law in this country, the Mormons are tolerated and encouraged, and up to the present time have been of immense benefit to the country in educating the natives to a more advanced class of work. Some proselyting has been done by their missionaries in the southern part of the republic, mostly in and about the City of Mexico.

They attempted to induce a number of the converts to form part of the Juarez colony, but after bringing about thirty families they were obliged to return them to their homes. The Mexican converts could not amalgamate with the Americans. The Mexican, though converted in belief, could not be converted to the manners and customs of the American. Besides, they are a great people for forming attachments to the place of their birth. They rarely leave the home they were born in. This is decidedly so among the lower, half Indian class that comprised the majority of the converts. To this fact the Latter Day Saints, as they prefer to be called, attribute their failure. The colony of Juarez is laid out in rectangular form, divided into streets and lots. In the latter their little wooden houses are erected, the only wooden houses in this portion of the country, surrounded by gardens and trees. In case of "plural wives," two or more houses are seen in the same lot. —Louis Ross in New York World.

Value of the Eucalyptus Tree.

The eucalyptus belongs to the myrtle tribe. It is said that there are as many as 150 varieties of the tree. They are native to Australia, but have already been introduced into most of the tropical and temperate countries of the world. Two kinds have been chiefly cultivated, the red gum (resinifera), and the blue gum (globulus), which is the better known. It is famous for its rapid growth, as it often makes an increase in height of from six to nine feet a year. The tree continues growing at this rate until it has reached an enormous size.

The products of this tree are numerous and varied. The wood is said to be valuable for the carpenter's and builder's uses. The gum, or rosin, is employed in the manufacture of "soaps, perfumes, lozenges, court plaster, liniments, syrups, pomades, toilet vinegars, as well as many preparations used for artistic purposes, such as varnishing oils, veneer and tracing paper." There has been for some years established in Paris a store for the sale of eucalyptus perfumery.

But by far the most valuable and important property of this tree is its power of correcting malaria. This quality is, perhaps, due to the aromatic oil which the tree contains, or more probably to the drainage effected by its roots. It has been proved in many countries in which the tree has been planted. In Algeria the cultivation of the tree has rendered many low lying or marshy districts inhabitable, where, in the early years of French occupation, foreigners could not live on account of deadly fevers.—Youth's Companion.

The World's Highest Mountains.

Every once in a while we discover that some mountain peak must give up the undeserved distinction conferred upon it of holding its head higher than all other summits. For a long time Mount Chimborazo was supposed to be the highest mountain in the world until in the progress of the Himalayan surveys Mount Everest was found to overtop it. Four years ago W. W. Graham, who has been higher above the sea than any other mountain climber, asserted that Everest must yield the palm of supremacy to an unnamed peak about seventy miles from it. We long supposed that Mount St. Elias was the loftiest mountain of North America, but we now know that that honor belongs to Mount Wrangel, which is about 500 feet higher than St. Elias. It was also supposed that Mount Kilimanjaro, 18,700 feet high, was the greatest elevation in Africa, but recent comes Count Teleki, the Hungarian traveler, with the assertion that this mountain must play second fiddle to Mount Kenia, about 200 miles north. He is the only man who has yet ascended Kenia.—New York Sun.

The Poison of Tobacco.

It is very unusual to find in a great smoker a healthy appetite for plain food, and medical opinions may be had in any number as to dyspepsia caused by smoking. To whatever degree the habit affects the nervous organization, it appears to be certain that the process which is regarded as soothing is really destructive. Sir Benjamin Brodie must have known what he was writing about when he declared that "the poison of tobacco acts by destroying the function of the brain." In a Russian hospital in 1866 a Dr. Chadnowski took the liberty of examining by means of a pump the digestive powers of six smoking and as many non-smoking soldiers, and he recorded that "in the former the time required for digestion averaged seven hours, while in the case of the non-smokers the mean period of digestion was only six hours." With the present enormous consumption of tobacco the social consequences, apart from those concerning the bodily and mental powers of the consumers, are important.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Crystals of Blood.

According to Dr. Pesetty Cevera, writing in a Spanish journal, if blood be mixed with a little bile, small crystals are formed which are of different shapes in different species of animals. In man they are right angled prisms, in the horse cubes, in pigs rhomboids, in sheep rhomboidal plates, in dogs right angled prisms very similar to those seen in human blood, and in chickens more or less regular cubes.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Muzzling Oysters.

A company has been formed in Maryland which devotes its energies to muzzling oysters. A patent wire contrivance known as an oyster lock is used. An oyster which is hermetically sealed will retain its flavor for months after leaving its briny bed.—New York World.

The Religious Portion.

"What is the most religious portion of the body?" asked Maudie the other day. And, no one guessing the answer, she told it: "The head, because it is between two temples."—Jewish Messenger.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of this government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

Hay fever sufferers ought to know of its efficacy. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me as a preventive to hay fever. Have been using it since the 9th of August and have found it a specific for that much dreaded disease. For ten years I have been a great sufferer from August 9th till frost, and have tried many alleged remedies, but Ely's Cream Balm is the only preventive I have ever found. —F. B. Ainsworth, publisher, Indianapolis, Ind.

Early news about the coming autumn bonnet is that it will be considerably larger.

A Peculiarity of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that while it purifies the blood, it imparts new vigor to every function of the body.

If you desire to possess a beautiful complexion take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It cleanses and purifies the blood, and removes blotches and pimples, making the skin smooth and clear, and giving it a bright and healthy appearance. Take it this month.

The Chicago mail robberies are probably the most collosal of modern times. More than $1,000,000 worth of property was secured at different times. It is not known how much more was obtained in cash by Von Oberkampf.

How Adamson's Balsam Does Such Good.

It expels the mucous from the throat and the air passages of the head, and lecanses the mucous membrane. It alleys inflammation, puts a stop to tickling in the throat and coughing, and enables the patient to rest.

Haytien revolutionists have succeeded in overthrowing the government. A new one was formed.

The favorite washing compound of the day is James Pyle's Pearline. It cleanses fabrics without injury and without the laborious scrubbing necessary with ordinary soap. For sale by grocers.

The directors of the Boston & Sandwich Glass company have voted to go out of business.

To the Delicate and Malarious.

The most incredulous are convinced of the virtues of Aunt Rachael's Malarial Bitters upon a trial of them. Their base is Speer's port wine, with herbs and roots so favorably known to the medical profession and the community at large as the best cure for malaria. They are all that can be desired by the most feeble victims of malaria.

It Is Useless

For young ladies who are troubled with freckles, pimples, moth and tan and a bad skin generally to use liquid paints or dry powders, for they only make the skin look well for the time being. To have a good complexion you must have pure blood. Use Sulphur Bitters and your skin will be fair and your complexion rosy.—Young Ladies' Magazine.

a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the ancient times was more painful than these twin diseases. But—oughtn't a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he won't use Ath-lo-pho-ros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. The first dose of Athlophoros gave me relief, and the third enabled me to sleep for four and a half hours without waking. I continued its use, and am now well."

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

It may be admitted that large reductions in the duties on imported manufactured goods would produce great distress in many parts of the United States. The free importation of iron, coal and wool would be a great boom to British producers. * * * If it were accompanied with reductions in the tariff upon cotton, woolen and other manufactures the artisans of this country would derive a marked benefit from it.—The Scotsman.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

The Road Healthward Made Easier.

You have been ill, we will suppose, and are convalescing slowly. That is, you are trying to pick up a little flesh, to regain some of your wonted color, to accustom your stomach to more solid nutriment than its recently enfeebled condition permitted you to take. How can you accelerate your snail's pace healthward? We are warranted by concurrent testimony in affirming that if you will use twice or thrice a day Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an enabling medicine of long ascertained purity and tonic virtues, that you will be materially aided. It promotes a flow of the gastric juices, and helps the system to assimilate the nourishment of which it stands so much in need. It remedies a tendency to constipation without convulsing the bowels. The liver it stimulates to renewed activity, safely promotes the action of the kidneys and bladder, and annihilates malaria and rheumatism at the outset.

The best medical authorities acknowledge the value of Ayer's Pills, and prescribe them with the utmost confidence, as the most effectual remedy for diseases caused by derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood; he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor!" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

Rossi, the Italian tragedian, is said to be about to retire permanently from the stage.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

WINTER LIFE IN DAKOTA.

Description of the Method of Constructing Sod Houses on the Prairie.

"I was at the house of an old Scotchman a year or two ago," said an old Dakotan. "Several of us young people were sitting at the table in the living room playing cards. Outside a blizzard was howling. The old man said:

"'I think I will go out to the sheds and see how the stock are.'

"'Don't you go,' I replied.

"'I guess I will.'

"I looked over my shoulder and said: 'See here, old man, don't you try that; you stay right here.' You may think this was considerable fuss to make, as the sheds were not over four rods from the house; but I had become acquainted with winter weather on the prairies. We went on with our game and nothing more was said. About ten minutes later I looked up and the old man was gone. 'Did your father go out?' I asked one of the girls. 'Yes,' she replied, 'and I don't see what keeps him. I wish you would go out and find him.'

"I wrapped up and started out, first taking the precaution to take one end of a rope, which I trailed after me. About half way between the sheds and the house I found the old man on his hands and knees in the snow, which was seven feet deep, crawling about, trying to find the house. He was then nearly dead, and ten minutes more would have finished him. I picked him up, and carried him to the house, where with snow, ice water, and whisky, supplemented with an hour or two of hard work, we managed to save his life."

"How do people manage to live in such a climate?"

"Live? Why, they prepare for it. The early comers generally put up sod houses, and there is nothing in the world so warm as a sod house. You can walk around barefoot on the floor of one, if properly constructed, in the coldest weather. After they have been there long enough settlers generally build log houses, hauling logs thirty or forty miles for the purpose. These houses are warm and comfortable. So long as you don't have to go out you don't know what winter is. But the sod house is not to be treated with disdain, I assure you."

"How are they built?"

"In the first place a frame of boards, the size the house is to be, is put up so as to give the house a nice appearance inside; the roof also is boarded over. Then the sod is cut with a plow, and a bank three or four feet thick is raised all around this frame. Every sod is laid as carefully as a mason lays a brick, the roots up, and all openings are filled in with fine dirt. Openings are made for the windows and doors, which have frames extending from inside to outside. These will contain sometimes three windows for winter—always two. When the sod rampart is raised to the height of the roof, poles are laid on and then sod put over those. The roots hold everything firm. You would be surprised to see the roots. Some of those grass roots are as thick as my finger, and extend down from from ten to fourteen feet."

"What?"

"It's a fact, I assure you. I have followed them down myself when digging wells in that blue joint grass land. Why, a man in plowing has to stop and sharpen his plow every eighty rods if he cares anything for his team. The blacksmith draws out the point, but that and the edge both have to be filed down as sharp as possible, and then, as I say, sharpened every eighty rods. But to return to the sod house. After the outside is completed the inside is finished up to suit the taste and pocket of the proprietor. Some have only the earthen floor, and others have a board floor, and are divided up into two or three rooms. And, I tell you, for winter comfort in Dakota a sod house beats them all. Besides these, there are dugouts on the side of a hill, and occasionally you will meet one on the prairie. The class of settlers that come in there as a rule have to put up with almost everything the first year or two."—Milwaukee Cor. Chicago Times.

The Contribution Boxes.

There need be no fear but that those who want to "pay for their religion," as some like to put it, will be given opportunity to do so. The man who wants to help pay for the preaching of the gospel doesn't need to have a pesky contribution box slid gracefully along under his nose every time he attends service. Nor is there any reason why the amount of money—usually so small—which is taken every Sabbath, in the morning and evening collections, may not be contributed in some other and less awkwardly conspicuous manner. There are many ways in which people can be led to understand that if they wish to contribute they can do so in a quiet and unostentatious way, and there is no doubt whatever but that those who want to give will find a way.—American Magazine.

Electric Light Buoys.

The lighthouse board is about to undertake experiments which will have an important bearing on the lighting of dangerous points in our rivers and harbors. It is nothing less than the lighting of buoys by electricity. The method at present in use for illuminating buoys consists in supplying them with oil or gas. With both of these it is necessary to replenish the source of illumination periodically, and this means additional trouble and expense. Besides, in most cases, the buoy is allowed to remain constantly lighted, as it is not visited daily. Hence it appears that the electric light is especially adapted to this purpose, as it requires no attention whatever and is under control at all times.—New Orleans Picayune.

Endurance of an Eskimo.

A medicine man of the tribe, in order to prepare for himself a drum or drumhead to accompany his peculiar religious rites, has been known to take a reindeer skin, soak it in the water until the hair was loose, and when it was frozen as stiff as a board place the pleasant thing against the bare skin of his body until it was thawed out and then hold it there an hour or two until it was dry as a bone. There is little wonder that such people need no seal or walrus oil to warm their habitations of snow. The only singular thing is that they do not sleep out of doors all winter to prevent being overcome by the heat in the snow houses.—Frederick Schwatka.

At the Wharves of Havana.

Along the low, crowded, quaint wharves on the Havana side, by the Catalina warehouses, skirting the Regla docks and storehouses, or severed at various points in the bay by these picturesque lighters and their noisy lancheros, are barks and barkentines, brigs and brigantines, two, three and four masted schooners and full rigged ships, discharging and receiving cargoes. Here are Dutch barks and brigs discharging coal from Cardiff. They will receive sugar or molasses for Philadelphia or New York, and there load with general cargoes for some European port. Norwegian barks, brigs and brigantines have brought coal from the Baltic and tiles from France and Spain. French brigs and barks are discharging cargoes of tiles from Marseilles. Here are Spanish vessels with linen and wines from Barcelona. All manner of queer Portuguese craft are here with onions and garlic and flour. From Halifax have come vessels with general cargoes of onions, cabbage, potatoes, apples and salt fish. From South America have come brigs and brigantines, with the general air and build of Spanish craft, and these have brought wheat, fruit and tassajo or jerked beef, olives, sweet oil, bacon, butter, lard, figs and brandy. From Vera Cruz and Mexico have come what our American sea folk are pleased to term "tramp" steamers, with hundreds of bulls for the bull fights and for meat; and American and Canadian vessels bring hither three-fourths of the entire food staples consumed by the people of Cuba.—Edgar L. Wakeman's Letter.

Try Not to Cough.

A physician who is connected with an institution which contains many children says: "There is nothing more irritating to a cough than to cough. For some time I had been so fully assured of this that I recently determined if possible, for one minute, at least, to lessen the number of coughs heard in a certain ward in the hospital of the institution. By the promise of rewards and punishments I succeeded in inducing them simply to hold their breath when tempted to cough, and in a little while I was myself surprised to see how some of the children recovered entirely from their disease.

"Constant coughing is precisely like scratching a wound on the outside of the body; so long as it is done the wound will not heal. Let a person when tempted to cough draw a long breath and hold it until it warms and soothes every air cell, and some benefit will soon be received from the process. The nitrogen which is thus retained acts as an anodyne to the irritated mucus membrane, allaying the desire to cough and giving the throat and lungs a chance to heal. At the same time a suitable medicine will aid nature in her effort to recuperate."—Baltimore News.

Behavior in the Sick Room.

The etiquette of the sick room should be better understood. Many a patient, nervous and excited, has literally had the life forced out and gone to the grave through uneasiness or fright over his mysterious surroundings. There is no time when a man or woman more needs to have natural and cheerful people about them than when tossing on a sick bed. Talking in the room should always be done in a natural tone of voice, and never in whispers. There should be no tiptoeing and no long faces, or discussions over this or that grave symptom. The doctor that don't bring a breeze of cheerfulness with him to the sick room had better quit business and go to the undertaker's trade. There are many forms of disease where the patient is killed or cured, not by any remedies, but by the indiscretion or discretion of the physician and attendants.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Artists' Home Decorations.

Artists' ideas of decorating their own quarters differ from their ideas of decorating rich men's houses, and for reasons sufficient to themselves. They beautify the house of wealth expensively, but for their studios and apartments they much prefer such trappings as a lot of sail or tent cloth, fish nets, turkey red chintz, old swords, the rough bark of trees, dried flowers, old straw hats and various other things at which the junk shop man would turn up his nose in contempt. The value of all this debris is greatly enhanced in the artist's opinion if everything is hickly covered with dust. Then it is unmistakably artistic. Some of the studios in this city are fearfully and wonderfully filled.—New York Press "Every Day Talk."

Mad Over Vegetarianism.

A man made mad over vegetarianism was a curious inmate of a Pennsylvania hospital. The sight of any animal, bird, insect or reptile, slain at the hand of man, would send him into paroxysms of hysteric rage. He would wear no shoes, in order to kill the fewer animalcules as he walked. Every shoe or woolen article of clothing that came in his reach he would destroy; a funeral would fill him with frenzy, for he held that the dead should be carried into the woods and covered with leaves; while his vegetarian ideas as to food were equally pronounced. On every occasion possible he would slip off to eat grass, each blade of which he would carefully wipe in order to preclude the destruction of an insect.—Good Housekeeping.

Keep It to Yourself.

"Take my advice," said an elderly man about town, "and don't 'swear off' doing this or that thing. If you have a habit which you think is hurting you either physically or morally, just determine to yourself to stop it, but don't spread it broadcast among your friends. You will be exposed to less temptation, have more chances of keeping your good resolution, and, in the event of a failure, no one but yourself will be the wiser. There's nothing like holding the respect of other people, and if they know you can't do a thing that is wholly for your own good they'll never think well of you." It's good advice, too.—Philadelphia Call.

FOR OLD PEOPLE!

In old people the nervous system is weakened, and that must be strengthened. One of the most prominent medical writers of the day, in speaking of the prevalence of rheumatic troubles among the aged, says: "The various pains, rheumatic or other, which old people often complain of, and which materially disturb their comfort, result from disordered nerves." There it is in a nut shell—the medicine for old people must be a nerve tonic. Old people are beset with constipation, flatulency, drowsiness, diarrhœa, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia. These diseases are of nervous origin. Paine's Celery Compound, that great nerve tonic, is almost a specific in these disorders, and by its regulating influence on the liver, bowels, and kidneys, removes the disorders peculiar to old age. Old people find it stimulating to the vital powers, productive of appetite, and a promoter of digestion.

Sold by druggists, $1.00. Six for $5.00. Send for eight-page paper, with many testimonials from nervous, debilitated, and aged people, who bless Paine's Celery Compound.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

The Reason.

The Times cites the noticeable instance of John Stephenson, the great car builder, who intends to vote for Cleveland, because he believes Cleveland is right on the tariff question. Why does not the Times give the whole of Mr. Stephenson's truthful statement? He said: "I am a car builder. I build street cars for export, but with the present price of labor I cannot build cars to ship abroad in competition with England. The stock is cheaper here, but the labor is higher. The Mills bill will put the price of labor where we can afford to compete with England and other foreign countries where the price paid for a day's work is so much less than in the United States."

In the remarkably few cases which vigilant democratic hunters have been able to discover, where a republican announces his intention to vote for Cleveland, a close examination of the reasons for this anomalous course will be seen is the fact that the republican has the honesty to say that he intends to take advantage of the low price of labor which the democratic tariff reformers know will result from the enactment of the Mills bill.

A Pension Veto Well Stated.

The Brooklyn Standard-Union states the case of President Cleveland's discrimination against a Union soldier in the following brief but forcible manner;

"John Herbst was a Union soldier who, when captured by the rebels, joined their ranks to escape imprisonment. At the first opportunity he got back and served in the Union army till the close of the war, when he was honorably discharged. The president vetoed a bill to give his widow a pension of $12 a month. F. C. Armstrong joined the Union army, but deserted it at once and joined the rebels, with whom he served till the close of the war. The president appointed him to an Indian inspectorship with an income of about $800 a month. If Herbst had stayed with the rebels to the end of the war, his widow would doubtless have received the reward of patriotism bestowed on Armstrong; but his going back to the Union ranks and his desertion of the 'Lost Cause' was more than the president could stand."

THE USUAL STYLE.

At Abbeville, New Iberia parish, Louisiana, last week, a fight took place between the whites and blacks, in which twenty or thirty negroes were killed, and one white man slightly wounded. The "fight," according to the reports sent north, "involved no race issue" and had no political bearing, but was caused solely by the attempt of a number of young men, mostly clerks in the stores of Abbeville, to reform certain bad characters among the colored people, men and women, by whipping them at night with cowhides. There are two features of this little incident which make it seem strangely alike many similar ones which have taken place in Louisiana in years past; one is, that it occurred shortly before an important election; the other, that in the desperate fight only negroes were killed. We shall not be surprised should it turn out in this case as in the former ones, that the bad negroes who got themselves killed by the good people of a steamer in the Merrimac fight when a shell had exploded covering the deck with fragments of human bodies, literally tearing to pieces the men on the small vessel as she lay alongside the Minnesota, but never before had I experienced such a sickening sensation of horror as on this occasion, when the bow of the Sassacus lay for thirteen minutes on the roof of the Albemarle. An officer of the Wyalusing says that when the dense smoke and steam enveloped us they thought we had sunk, till the flash of our guns burst through the clouds, followed by flash after flash in quick succession, as our men recovered from the shock of the explosion.

In Commander Febiger's report the time of our contact was said to be "some few minutes." To us, at least, there seemed time enough for the other ships to close in on the ram and sink her or sink beside her, and it was thirteen minutes as timed by an officer, who told me, but the other ships were silent, and with stopped engines looked on as the clouds closed over us in the grim and final struggle.—E. Holden, M. D., late U. S. N., in The Century.

How Big Bells Are Rung.

The twelve bells of St. Paul's cathedral in London are said to be the grandest ringing peal in the world. It is a matter of pride with the English that they always swing their bells instead of merely swinging the clappers after the fashion prevailing in Russia and other parts of continental Europe. The Briton swings even his largest bells in the good, old fashioned way, and it is quite an undertaking to swing the sixteen ton "Great Paul," which, with its five-ton brother, supplements the noble peal on the grandest Protestant cathedral in the world. On the day Gen. Garfield's body was carried to the grave, the writer stood in the square in front of St. Paul's, and heard these chimes peal in honor of the dead president. Dense crowds filled the neighboring streets, and the adjacent windows and housetops were black with humanity. All London was there to listen to the mournful requiem of the bells. It was a solemn spectacle when, as a stranger in a strange land, one saw those tens of thousands of Englishmen thus doing honor to the noble dead. It was an evidence of international sympathy, affection and brotherhood which one who saw it can never forget.—Boston Herald.

Growth of City Children.

Quetelet, in his well known treatise "On Man," pointed out that the growth of town children is quicker than that of country children. The demands upon the nutritive powers are larger; and, consequently, we can understand how it comes about that the educational burden is felt more by town children than their country cousins. He showed that the growth is more rapid in girls than boys, and probably the effects of the labor of acquiring education are felt more by the girls.—Good Housekeeping.

Tea and Coffee.

Tea and coffee are not foods. If this pair of moderate stimulants were lost from off the face of the earth today and forever they would not take away an ounce of physical prosperity. They do no good—are simply cumberers of the table that add to nothing save expense.—Iowa Democrat.

A Great Day.

The Burlington Free Press says it is a great day for garden beds when the rain comes down in sheets. Yes, and it is a great day for hay harvesters when the

ALL HANDS LIE DOWN!

The Fearful Sea Fight Between the Albemarle and the Sassacus.

Now came the decisive moment, for by this action, which was in reality a maneuver of our commander, we had acquired a distance from the ram of about 400 yards, and the latter, to evade the Mattabesett, had sheered off a little and lay broadside to us. The Union ships were now on both sides of the ram, with engines stopped. Commander Roe saw the opportunity, which an instant's delay would forfeit, and boldly met the crisis of the engagement. To the engineer he cried, "Crowd waste and oil in the fires and back slowly! Give her all the steam she can carry!" To Acting Master Boutelle he said, "Lay her course for the junction of the casemate and the hull!" Then came four bells, and, with full steam and open throttle, the ship sprang forward like a living thing. It was a moment of intense strain and anxiety. The guns ceased firing, the smoke lifted from the ram, and we saw the every effort was being made to evade the shock. Straight as an arrow we shot forward to the designated spot. Then came the order, "All hands lie down!" and, with a crash that shook the ship like an earthquake, we struck full and square on the iron hull.

Our ship quivered for an instant, but held fast, and the swift plash of the paddles showed that the engines were uninjured. My own station was in the bow, on the main deck, on a line with the enemy's guns. Through the starboard shutter, which had been partly jarred off by the concussion, I saw the port of the ram not ten feet away. It opened, and like a flash of lightning I saw the grim muzzle of a cannon, the straining gun's crew naked to the waist and blackened with powder; then a blaze, a roar and a rush of the shell as it crashed through, whirling me round and dashing me to the deck.

Both ships were under headway, and, as the ram advanced, our shattered bows clinging to the iron casement were twisted round and a solid shot from a Brooke gun almost touching our side crashed through, followed immediately by a cloud of steam and boiling water that filled the forward decks as our overcharged boilers, pierced by the shot, emptied their contents with a shrill scream that drowned for an instant the roar of the guns. The shouts of command and the cries of the scalded, wounded and blinded men mingled with the rattle of small arms that told of a hand to hand conflict above. The ship surged heavily to port as the great weight of water in the boiler was expended, and over the cry, "The ship is sinking!" came the shout, "All hands repel boarders on starboard bow!"

The horrid tumult, always characteristic of battle, was intensified by the cries of agony from the scalded and frantic men. Wounds may rend, and blood may flow, and grim heroism keep the teeth set firm in silence; but to be boiled alive—to have the flesh drop from the face and hands, to strip off in sodden mass from the body as the clothing is torn away in savage eagerness for relief, will bring screams from the stoutest lips. In the midst of all this, when every man had left the engine room, our chief engineer, Mr. Hobby, although badly scalded, stood with heroism at his post; nor did he leave it till after the action, when he was brought up, blinded and helpless, to the deck. I had often before been in battle; had stepped over the

MARITIME NOTES.

The revised list of persons lost by the sinking of the steamer Geiser makes the total 117, instead of 105 as first reported. Capt. Moller says his crew numbered fifty-five instead of forty-three, and as only seventeen were saved, the lost numbered thirty-eight.

The Norwegian steamer Liberta, from New York for Stettin, was totally wrecked in a fog on the night of the 18th inst. on White Island, a long, narrow ledge of rocks off the coast of Nova Scotia, east of Halifax. The crew escaped in their boats.

Four of the largest and fastest steamships in the world, namely, the Umbria, of the Cunard line, the City of New York, of the Inman line, the Ems, of the German Lloyds line, and La Bourgogne, of the French line, left New York for Europe very nearly together on Saturday afternoon, the 18th inst., the French steamer being the first to start, at two o'clock, and the City of New York, the last of the four to start, leaving her dock at 3:25. The Umbria and City of New York being bound to the same port, Liverpool, many stories as to an ocean race between them for heavy stakes were current in New York, but the officers of both ships flatly denied that there would be any race; it is not likely, however, that economy of coal will be especially considered on board either of them, this passage.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

Mr. Cleveland demands in effect that there shall be a tariff for revenue purposes only. No tickering with the tariff will suffice; no readjustment of duties will do. The only reform that common sense can accept of is one which unaffectedly substitutes the principle of unimpeded imports for that of tariff regulations.—London Standard.

The Brooklyn Eagle, stalwart democratic, on Saturday last contained a column editorial attacking Governor Hill, and making some very damaging charges of official corruption against him. The local democratic politicians are undecided as to whether this onslaught is a genuine Cleveland attack, or a shrewd move of Hill himself, to enable him to throw the odium of the transactions thus exposed on the shoulders of a former friend.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

If once the United States finds herself on the road to free trade she will hardly know where to stop. For the principle which President Cleveland, as head of the democratic party, lays down is really that no import duties are justifiable which are not levied solely for purposes of revenue.—The Scotsman.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state comunication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

The American election is infinitely more important to Englishmen than their own internal politics just at this juncture. * * * The main question at issue is English free trade against the continental system of protection.—London Times.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

It is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any free trader could employ now.—London Times.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

Grover Cleveland has done more to advance the cause of free trade than any Prime Minister of England has done.—London Spectator.

The president of the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad passed through this city last week in a gorgeous (palatial we belive is the proper designation) private car, on his way from the White mountain region to Boston. These presidential coaches are designed ostensibly for inspection of roadbeds. They do not begin to give the occupants the means of actual observation of the condition of track acquired by the section man who turns his handcar up a steep grade in August temperature.

Charles E. Batchelder, Esq., who arrived in this city by the nine o'clock train from Boston on Sunday evening, after a trip to Europe, opened court in due and ancient form Monday morning, and assessed an erring fair one $9.90 for making an error of judgement as to the amount of whiskey she could carry.

HOME AGAIN.

The Cunard steamer Pavonia arrived at Boston from Europe early Sunday morning, having among her passengers Judge Batchelder, James P. Bartlett, Esq., and Capt. John G. Moses of this city, and Col. Charles H. Roberts and wife of Concord. Col. Roberts and wife have been passing a year or so in Europe on a wedding tour. The Portsmouth men arrived home by the nine o'clock Pullman train Sunday evening. Judge Batchelder, who looked (and acknowledged that he felt) mighty shaky in health when he went away about two months ago, we are glad to say has returned looking like a new man, and evidently having taken a new lease of health and vigor.

THE ELIOT FETE.

The Midsummer Fete at the Farmer place in Eliot, in aid of the building fund of the Eliot Library Association, will open this afternoon in a mammoth tent capable of accommodating 4,000 people, and continue two days. The following is a brief recital of some of the attractions:

Tuesday afternoon, addresses by Rev. Dr. A. P. Peabody, Prof. E. S. Morse, Edwin D. Meade, Rev. W. A. McGinley and others; music by the Hungarian Gypsey band. Evening, music by the South Berwick Cadet band.

Wednesday, special programme of singing and recitations; music by the Salem Brass band, afternoon and evening.

Both days, bazars with fancy articles for sale, including many sent from Russia, Norway, Brittany and England, by friends of the cause, and cafes of many lands, attended by eighty young ladies in the costumes of the countries represented; ices and creams in variety, the cream from Oak Grove Farm.

Half-rate tickets to Eliot over the Boston & Maine road, both days, all express trains stopping at Eliot after noon; barges will run between the station and the grounds.

MUSIC HALL.

John S. Moulton's new star, Jay Hunt, made his first appearance in this city on Monday evening in his musical comedy "Uncle Ezra," before a crowded audience. The piece is a new one, and we understand this was its first public presentation. Mr. Hunt's "Uncle Ezra" took well, his songs being marked for especial tokens of appreciation. Miss Daisy Chaplin is a very pleasing little soubrette, and her banjo solo, song and dance were heartily applauded, Misses Binkburst and Uarda, and Messrs. Wall, Harold, Binkburst and Lovering, took their several parts well, and were well received; and Mr. Moulton with his new venture fully expects to rival the success of the popular Bennett & Moulton Opera Co.

To-night they will present the new Irish comedy-drama "Killarney." Tickets at Goodrich's.

BIG BULLETS, SMALL GAME.

On Sunday night between twelve and at a dog lying upon the piazza of the house on Islington street occupied by Mr. Daniel Francis, and finally killed the animal. The dog was sixteen years old, of the King Charles spaniel breed, weighed three and one-half pounds, and had six teeth. The weapon used to destroy this terrible creature was of 42-calber, as was evidenced by one of the bullets which passed through two doors and landed on the dining room table. There are twelve persons living in the house, and they were glad to be all still living there after the fusilade was ended. It is said the shots were fired by a man named Carpenter, the alleged cause being that the dog had bitten him.

DR. WEED'S CASE.

A despatch of Aug. 19th from Bangor, Me., says; "It is understood that Dr. Weed has been indicted, and that the jury will report to Judge Emery on Tuesday. One good authority, who has heard or seen all the evidence, says: 'Nothing can save Weed unless some juryman shall be tampered with. All that is to be feared is the Peter Bennett money itself.'"

Mr. E. E. Nowell, telegraph operator at the Boston & Maine railroad station in Exeter, it is announced has been summoned to Bangor to testify in the Newport robbery case. It is alleged that the two professional thieves who are under conviction for robbing the old miser, on their way from Boston to Newport went over the western division of the Boston & Maine, and at the Exeter station telegraphed ahead to Dr. Weed; and that to this act Mr. Nowell's testimony will relate.

BASE BALL.

The Portsmouth club went to Manchester on Monday, and came within one of winning a game, the score being six for Manchester to five for Portsmouth.

The Times, which ought to know, in its issue of Monday announced the signing of several very strong players with the Portsmouth club, and that the nine put in the field at the next game here (with Worcester on Wednesday, the 22d) will be "second to move in the New England league." This will revive the interest here, which was beginning to wane.

Michael Murray, short stop for the Ontario club, an amateur club of Buffalo, N. Y., was hit Sunday afternoon by a pitched ball in a game with the Actives, another amateur club, and instantly killed. His neck was broken from the force of the ball.

PERSONAL.

Mr. William Hodgdon, supervisior of music in the public schools of St. Louis, Mo., who was last week visiting Mr. Josiah F. Adams of this city, left on Saturday for Concord and Pittsfield, this state, to visit relatives there before returning to his duties at St. Louis.

Miss Sarah R. Bowles of Malden, Mass., is visiting her sister, Mrs. John H. Bowles of Dennett street.

Mrs. Joseph E. Fernald, Mrs. Milton R. Gardiner and Mrs. G. A. Cobbett are guests of Mrs. Shapleigh of Eliot, Mrs. Fernald's sister, during the present week.

Ralph S. Sweetser of Cabot street is visiting his uncle, Mr. Alfred S. Sweetser at Saccarappa, Me. He went across the country on his bicycle.

Horace E. Scudder has returned from his trip to California, and is at his former quarters at Little Boar's Head.

Dr. F. E. Potter and wife have been enjoying the attractions at Newport, R. I., while sojourning at the Ocean house.

Rev. William A. Patten of Kingston, N. H., who thirty years ago was pastor of the Congregational church at York, preached in his old pulpit last Sunday, and among the large congregation were quite a number of his former parishioners.

Rev Dr. Briggs of Salem, Mass., preached in the Union chapel at Little Boar's Head on Sunday last.

A stage from Rye, carrying a trumpeter and load of passengers, and drawn by six horses, comes up daily and drives through our principal streets. The coach bears the inscription "Quod Hoc Sibi Vult," a liberal Yankee translation of which would be, "This is just what you want."

Gen. B. F. Butler, in his yacht Amerlora, arrived at the Isles of Shoals on Saturday, and remained over Sunday.

Daily as trains over the Portsmouth & Dover railroad are approaching Noble's island from Dover, the engines emit the most appalling shrieks. These alarms are said to be to stir up the gate keepers at the bridge, and are certainly shocking enough to effect that purpose if noise will do it. The howls would justify a sawhorse withing hearin in kicking up and throwing off its load, and would be likely to make any flesh and blood horse within half a mile run away. The whistling approaches very nearly the magnitude of a nuisance.

The democrats of Kittery Foreside hoisted their Cleveland and Thurman campaign flag on Saturday evening. The Portsmouth flute and drum band went over to make music for the occasion.

The annual ball of the help at the Appledore house takes place on Wednesday evening of this week. The help at the Wentworth house, Newcastle, have chartered the steamer Uudine to take them to the island that evening.

As Mr. Frank Jones, upon the broad verandah of his summer residence on Sunday perused attentively the leading editorial in the Times of Saturday, he suddenly arose, slapped the publisher on the knee, and remarked, "Charley, that is the best thing you have had in the paper yet. Let us go down to the Wentworth and take a rest for half an hour." The toilers went to the seaside and had the extreme gratification to note that the manager's cash book made an excellent showing.

Appledore island will soon be as noted for the number of its private cottages as it long has been for the homelike life led by the myriad patrons of its popular hotel, so different from (and impossible at) most great summer resorts. Mrs. Richter, wife of Dr. Emil Richter of this city, is to have erected on the island a beautiful cottage, on which work will be commenced at once; it will be located near the Anderson cottage, and will command charming views of the landing and of Duck island.

The First Symptoms

Of all Lung diseases are much the same: feverishness, loss of appetite, sore throat, pains in the chest and back, headache, etc. In a few days you may be well, or, on the other hand, you may be down with Pneumonia or "galloping Consumption." You run no risks, but begin immediately to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Several years ago, James Birchard, of Darien, Conn., was severely ill. The doctors said he was in Consumption, and that they could do nothing for him, but advised him, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine, two or three months, he was pronounced a well man. His health remains good to the present day.

J. S. Bradley, Malden, Mass., writes: "Three winters ago I took a severe cold, which rapidly developed into Bronchitis and Consumption. I was so weak that I could not sit up, was much emaciated, and coughed incessantly. I consulted several doctors, but they were powerless, and all agreed that I was in Consumption. At last, a friend brought me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. From the first dose, I found relief. Two bottles cured me, and my health has since been perfect."

Three Summer Dangers.

Three summer dangers menace the household and traveller at every turn. They are climate, food and water. To guard against them requires vigilance, abstinance, and SANFORD'S GINGER.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer complaints, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of cholera morbus,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

As a pure fruit stimulant for the aged, mentally and physically overworked, for delicate females, especially mothers, and as a means of reforming those addicted to an excessive use of alcoholic stimulates, it is invaluable.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists and dealers on those who call for and desire only

CALIFORNIA'S "GLORIOUS CLIMATE."

Very Fine, Indeed, During Certain Months of the Year.

And first of all I will try and tell something about this "glorious" climate (which could be much more appropriately called "slippery"), of which so much has been said and written. The fact is that the climate of California is a climate differing almost with every county, and to speak of the climate of California as a whole is greatly to mislead people, for you cannot say it is perfectly fine or detestably mean, although both could be said with truth by any one interested in saying the one or the other.

The climate, for example, of San Francisco during certain months of the year is beyond measure fine. Our eastern friends, leaving the frosty air and dying vegetation ushering in their long cold winters, ride right into our mild Indian summer, filled with full ripened fruits, luxurious flowers and perfect vegetation; or, leaving the frost and snows of Christmas, find here a bright, warm Italian winter, flowers in full bloom, fruits in plenty, etc., and tourists taking their trip at that time of the year are apt to return home and convey the idea of some wonderfully glorious, warm, delightful climate. But what about the cold fogs, that lie nearly half of the year like a heavy pall over the city, commencing early in the afternoon and disappearing only late in the mornings? What about the clouds of dust swept down by the cold winds from the ocean? What about the long, dry, dusty summer months, when everything is withered and parched, and all are fairly choked with dust and want of rain, and sickness and death are on every hand from unflushed sewers, etc.? What about the long, wearisome rains, although the rains are really the least disagreeable feature of all the ills of the San Francisco climate?

While all this is true of San Francisco, yet, right across the bay, in what might be called the suburbs (yet really San Francisco has no suburbs, an objectionable feature for commerce), the climate is milder—less fogs, less chilling winds, less dust, etc.; and, still again, as you leave San Francisco and travel southward the change in climate is more noticeable.

One can write most truthfully of the climate of California and yet contradict one's self at every other line. From all this the conclusion can justly be drawn that each one can find the climate they most like by a proper selection of county.

The climate of San Diego is written of as mild and equable and delightful, and many poor consumptives are enticed here, only to meet with disappointment, like one poor man (an example of many) who, arriving in San Diego, expecting to find in its mild and salubrious air a length of life, if not a permanent cure, was met, on descending from the cars, by such clouds of dust, such cold and piercing fog and wind, that, overcome by weakness and disappointment, he dropped on to the first seat, shivering and crying. Yet a few miles from San Diego, had he but known it, is a good, fine climate for consumptives. A friend of ours, a young man, for whose life no hope was felt and who was carried to this part of the state, is now happy in the enjoyment of almost perfect health.—California Cor. Boston Transcript.

Silver and Gold Work.

The Russian authorities allow the merchants to cheat their customers in everything but furs, silver and gold plate, and adulterated food. The latter is prohibited from sale under penalty of imprisonment. Imitation furs must be marked so that the customer may tell what he is buying, and all silver and gold must bear the government brand to attest its fineness. There is no plated silver to be had, but the shops are full of the genuine solid article, in every possible form, and for every possible use, and it is generally all gilded. You see little silver in the natural state. Spoons, knives, watches, chains, articles of personal adornment in every possible variety, plates, platters, cups, goblets, all sorts of tableware is made of silver and then gilded to look like gold, and gratify the Russian taste for display. The solid silver dinner service for the winter palace, which will serve 3,000 people, is gilded, and the shops along the Nevski Prospect and other fine streets are blazing with the same sort of stuff. But the merchant must inform the customer of the character of his wares. If he sells gilded silver for gold he goes to prison. The ladies of the country load themselves with ornaments of gilded silver, bracelets, chains, brooches, pins, and every other form of decoration. Even marble and wood is gilded. Everything is for display.—William Eleroy Curtis in Chicago News.

Fish That Give Shocks.

At San Pedro and the various watering places from San Diego north the ray family makes itself disagreeably conspicuous. The smaller ones have a habit of hiding in the sand and presenting their spines for bathers' feet, while others are provided with electric batteries, which not rarely give the fishermen powerful shocks. I have known a man to be disabled for several days by harpooning one.

The Chinese monopolize the fishing in these waters, and are often victims of the practical jokes of the Mexican and American fishermen. An able bodied torpedo will be brought ashore at San Pedro or Monterey, and the whites will wager a green Chinaman that he cannot lift it. The fish appears to weigh about six or eight pounds, and John, after putting up his money, with a laugh at the simplicity of the American devils, takes hold with both hands and is stiffened out so quickly that often he can do nothing but hold the fish and roar with anguish until he is released. The shock given by these fishes has been compared to that of a single Leyden jar, and can be plainly felt by fifty persons in a circle.—Stockton Mail.

The Size of Rain Drops.

Variations in the size of rain drops are dependent upon the differences in the height from which they have fallen and to the amount of atmospheric disturbance present at the time. If fallen from a great height, the drops suffer gradual division into smaller and smaller parts, until they are converted into a mist. In calm weather, with the clouds near the earth's surface, the drops are large and heavy.—Globe-Democrat.

Muzzling Oysters.

A company has been formed in Maryland which devotes its energies to muzzling oysters. A patent wire contrivance known as an oyster lock is used. An oyster which is hermetically sealed will retain its flavor for months after leaving its briny bed.—New York World.

The Religious Portion.

"What is the most religious portion of the body?" asked Maudie the other day. And, no one guessing the answer, she told it: "The head, because it is between two temples."—Jewish Messenger.

its efficacy." Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me as a preventive to hay fever. Have been using it since the 9th of August and have found it a specific for that much dreaded disease. For ten years I have been a great sufferer from August 9th till frost, and have tried many alleged remedies, but Ely's Cream Balm is the only preventive I have ever found.—F. B. Ainsworth, publisher, Indianapolis, Ind.

A Peculiarity of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that while it purifies the blood, it imparts new vigor to every function of the body.

If you desire to possess a beautiful complexion take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It cleanses and purifies the blood, and removes blotches and pimples, making the skin smooth and clear, and giving it a bright and healthy appearance. Take it this month.

The Chicago mail robberies are probably the most collosal of modern times. More than $1,000,000 worth of property was secured at different times. It is not known how much more was obtained in cash by Von Oberkampf.

How Adamson's Balsam Does Such Good.

It expels the mucous from the throat and the air passages of the head, and lacanses the mucous membrane. It alleys inflammation, puts a stop to tickling in the throat and coughing, and enables the patient to rest.

To the Delicate and Malarious.

The most incredulous are convinced of the virtues of Aunt Rachael's Malarial Bitters upon a trial of them. Their base is Speer's port wine, with herbs and roots so favorably known to the medical profession and the community at large as the best cure for malaria. They are all that can be desired by the most feeble victims of malaria.

It Is Useless

For young ladies who are troubled with freckles, pimples, moth and tan and a bad skin generally to use liquid paints or dry powders, for they only make the skin look well for the time being. To have a good complexion you must have pure blood. Use Sulphur Bitters and your skin will be fair and your complexion rosy.—Young Ladies' Magazine.

A Great Surprise

Is in store for all who use Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs, the great guaranteed remedy. a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the ancient times was more painful than these twin diseases. But—oughtn't a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he won't use Ath-lo-pho-ros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. The first dose of Athlophoros gave me relief, and the third enabled me to sleep for four and a half hours without waking. I continued its use, and am now well."

OH! MY HEAD.

The pain from Neuralgia and its companion disease Rheumatism is excruciating. Thousands who could be quickly cured are needlessly suffering. Ath-lo-pho-ros will do for others what it did for the following parties:

Williamsport, Ind., Oct. 3, 1887.

Having been afflicted with neuralgia for the past four years, and trying almost everything, but in vain, I finally heard of Athlophoros. After taking one bottle I found it to be helping me, and after taking four bottles of Athlophoros and one of Pills, I found that I was entirely well. I think the medicine is positively a sure cure.

CHAUNCEY B. RENDICK.

Mt. Carmel, Ill., Dec. 26, 1887.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. It may be admitted that large reductions in the duties on imported manufactured goods would produce great distress in many parts of the United States. The free importation of iron, coal and wool would be a great boom to British producers. * * * If it were accompanied with reductions in the tariff upon cotton, woolen and other manufactures the artisans of this country would derive a marked benefit from it.—The Scotsman.

Congress have repeatedly, and not without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

The Road Healthward Made Easier.

You have been ill, we will suppose, and are convalescing slowly. That is, you are trying to pick up a little flesh, to regain some of your wonted color, to accustom your stomach to more solid nutriment than its recently enfeebled condition permitted you to take. How can you accelerate your snail's pace healthward? We are warranted by concurrent testimony in affirming that if you will use twice or thrice a day Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an enabling medicine of long ascertained purity and tonic virtues, that you will be materially aided. It promotes a flow of the gastric juices, and helps the system to assimilate the nourishment of which it stands so much in need. It remedies a tendency to constipation without convulsing the bowels. The liver it stimulates to renewed activity, safely promotes the action of the kidneys and bladder, and annihilates malaria and rheumatism at the outset.

I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do?—and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor?" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

Two thousand persons have left St. Augustine, Fla., from fear of yellow fever.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

WHAT SHALL I GIVE HER?

What shall I give my love—
This gray haired woman—
What shall I give her?
Since by fate brought together
We two have wrought together
Helping each other
In deed, in thought.
Each has made the other stronger,
Made this life worth living longer,
Which else were naught.
What shall I give her?

What shall I give my love—
This gray haired woman—
What shall I give her?
The morn should sing it to me,
The night should bring it to me—
The thought I seek.
So close as we
Subtle instinct of affection
Should make easy the selection.
What shall it be?
What shall I give her?

Our beings have a single sum,
Our thoughts in the same channels flow—
This happiness to us has come—
No more we seek or care to know.
Wound through the fiber of each heart,
Like wire of gold through potter's clay
This knowledge is the richest part,
Love's handiwork—love's choicone.

What shall I give my love?
This gray haired woman
It matters not!
I could but ponder o'er it,
She could but wonder o'er it
Why! She has got
All I can give!
In one our lives are blended,
As one they will be ended;
So do we live.
What could I give her?

The World's Famous Trees.

Gen. Brisbin has a chapter on famous trees of the world which is full of curious information. The African baobab is known to reach the age of over 5,000 years. At Chapultepec, Mexico, is a large cypress under which Cortez and his troops rested. In the garden of Semiramis, at Babylon, is a willow supposed to have been there when the queen was alive. The Neustadt linden was 800 years old when it was wrecked in 1832. England has oaks 3,000 years old. A walnut tree at Balaklava, 1,200 years old, is owned by five families who gather from it annually about 100,000 nuts. The Wadsworth oak, at Genesee, N. Y., is 500 years old and twenty-seven feet in circumference at the base.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Canada's Northwestern Provinces.

For many years the Canadian Pacific railway has been trying to lure colonists into the northwestern provinces of Canada, but with little success. A large percentage of those who have gone out to these provinces have come over to the United States. Englishmen who have been deluded into settling in the northwest territory frequently write indignant letters to the English papers. "When," says one of these colonists, "they advise people to go up to the northwest, Manitoba or Hudson Bay district, they are simply sending people to their doom unless they have money to help themselves with."—New York Tribune.

Horace Greeley and the Colic.

In the spring of 1861 I called, at his request, at his house. The servant told me he was sick in bed. I went to his room. A bureau, with a looking glass, stood in the middle. Two or three chairs, a table and a bed furnished the apartment. Greeley, the very picture of despair, groaned with the colic. I had recently returned from Washington, and it was on the subject of my trip he desired to talk. He suffered intensely, and two or three times he he jumped from the bed, and in a kind of dog trot moved about the room, stamping and groaning, but never forgetting the point of his talk.—Joe Howard in Once a Week.

Early Settlers' Curious Tales.

Some of the early settlers of New England sent home curious accounts of the strange land to their friends, whom they evidently enjoyed hoaxing. "Hereabouts," says one of them, "if you sow barley it comes up oats." Another tells of the "lions that prowl about Cape Ann." A third, in 1668, says that the frogs of Massachusetts "sit up on their breeches a foot high, and some are as big as a child that is a year old." The present frogs of that state are degenerate, but the babies of Massachusetts are now certainly bigger than frogs.—Globe-Democrat.

He Quickly Comforted Her.

"It is with unfeigned sorrow and a bleeding heart, Mr. Sampson," said the girl gently, "that I am compelled to say thee nay; but I love another," and tears of sympathy welled into her eyes.

"Now don't be so overcome, Miss Clara," he said earnestly. "It is really of no great consequence; I'll be as chipper as a bird in a day or two, and it pains me to see you thus distressed."

Then she dried her eyes and became quite herself again.—The Epoch.

Secret of Conversation.

The secret of good talking is to have something to say, say it well, cut it short, and be ready to listen. The best talker who will not listen is a bore and a nuisance, and so the verdict is given against him every time. To know how to be silent in many languages is a great accomplishment possessed by few.—Wheeling Intelligencer.

A Professional's Advice.

Whatever you do don't try to be an elocutionist, for if you do you can never act. Elocution and acting are two entirely distinct and separate branches and have nothing to do with each other. This reciting business is the death of acting.—New York World.

The Panama canal, according to the best and most impartial authority in France, The Economiste Francais, has not gained enough from its last loan, after paying usury and expenses, to enable it to continue work six months longer.—Frank Leslie's.

It is often more necessary to conceal contempt than resentment; the former being never forgiven, but the latter sometimes forgot.—Lord Chesterfield.

CONCERNING CLOVER LORE.

The Charming Fancies That Have Sprung from the Trefoil.

It is generally known that the three leaved clover is an emblem of the Trinity, the legend being that St. Patrick first used it to illustrate how three separate objects, such as its leaves, could yet form one. But, according to J. B. Friedreich, it was a very ancient symbol, expressing religion among the ancient Germans as setting forth the three grades of Druids, Bards and Neophytes. And as one legend or myth or superstition begets many, so there grew from this a number; which, however, all refer to the clover with four leaves, the rarity of which gave rise to the belief that it would bring good luck to the one who carried it.

It is believed in the Tyrol that if any one has "a turn" for magic he can acquire the art of working wonders easily enough if he only searches for and finds the four leaved clover on St. John's Eve. In the Passerthal the peasants believe that if a traveler should at this time fall asleep lying on his back, by a certain brook, there will come flying a white dove bearing a four leaved clover, which it lets fall on the sleeper's breast. Should he awake before it fades and at once put it into his mouth, he will acquire the power of becoming invisible at will.

A strange superstition related in Wolf's "Zeitschrift fur Deutsche Mythologie" is to the effect that if, while a priest is reading the service, any one can, unknown to him, lay a four leafed clover on his mass book, the unfortunate clergyman will not be able to utter a word; he will stand stock still and bewildered until the person who has played the trick pulls his robe. Then he can proceed. When all is over the man who regains his "four leaf" will always have luck at all kinds of gambling. If he has a tendency to tenpins in America, or to ninepins, if it be in Germany, he makes a "ten strike" or alle neune every time he rolls a ball.

It would seem by this that, though the trifolium is a religious symbol, the four leaf smacks of a darker influence. If the bearer or wearer of a four leafed clover should come across witch work or any uncanny performance, he can detect and spoil it all unharmed.

If a man loves a woman (or vice versa), and can obtain two four leaved clovers, and induce her to eat one while he himself swallows the other, mutual love is sure to result. Nay, according to very good Gypsy authority, even a trin patrini kas, or three leaved clover, will have this effect. Moreover, it is advisable on all occasions when you make a gift to anybody, no matter what it is, to conceal in it a clover, since it will render the gift doubly acceptable.

Also: Take a four or three leaved clover, and, making a hollow in the end or top of your alpenstock or cane, put the leaf therein, taking care not to injure it, and close the opening carefully. Then, so long as you walk with it, you will be less weary than if it were wanting, and will enjoy luck in many ways.

A German proverb says of a lucky man, "Er hat ein vierblattriges Kleeblatt gefunden"—"He has found a four leaved clover." On this text Dr. William Kurte, in his "Sprichworter der Deutschen," preaches the following homily: "This is,' you say, 'a stupid superstition.' Did you ever know a man who was ganz und gar, utterly and entirely, devoid of superstition? For if you did, be sure there was nothing in him."—St. James' Gazette.

A Cure for Sleeplessness.

The terrible evil of insomnia has so many different sources that the utmost we can hope from any single artifice is to afford relief from it under one special form. I venture to think I have hit upon a plan which thus remedies a very common (not aggravated) kind of sleeplessness, and, with your permission, will endeavor to make your readers who may be fellow sufferers, sharers in my little discovery. It is now, I believe, generally accepted that our conscious, daylight thinking processes are carried on in the sinister half of our brains—i. e., in the lobe which controls the action of the right arm and leg. Pondering on the use of the dexter half of the brain—possible in all unconscious cerebration, and in whatsoever may be genuine of the mysteries of planchette and spirit rapping—I came to the conclusion (shared, no doubt, by many other better qualified inquirers) that we dream with this lobe, and that the fantastic, immoral, sprite like character of dreams is, in some way, traceable to that fact.

The practical inference then struck me; to bring back sleep when lost, we must quiet the conscious, thinking, sinister side of our brains, and bring into activity only the dream side, the dexterlope. To do this, the only plan I could devise was to compel myself to put aside every waking thought, even soothing and pleasant ones, and every effort of daylight memory, such as counting numbers or the repetition of easy flowing verses, the latter having been my not wholly unsuccessful practice for many years. Instead of all this, I saw I must think of a dream, the more recent the better, and go over and over the scene it presented. Armed with this idea, the next time I found myself awakening at 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning, instead of merely trying to banish painful thoughts, and repeating, as was my habit, that recommendable soporific, "Paradise and the Peri," I reverted at once to the dream from which I had awakened, and tried to go on with it. In a moment I was asleep! And from that time the experiment, often repeated, has scarcely ever failed. Not seldom the result is sudden as the fall of a curtain, and seems like a charm. A friend to whom I have confided my little discovery tells me that, without any preliminary theorizing about the lobes of the brain, she had hit upon the same plan to produce sleep, and had found it wonderfully efficacious.—Cor. London Spectator.

Anchovies and Porpoises.

Anchovies are so plenty at Trebizond that they are sold for 27 cents a hundred weight for food for paupers and for fertilizing purposes, and during the first part of the season each year so many are thrown away that the whole city is pervaded with the smell of their rottenness. Porpoises are also very plentiful, about 40,000 hundred weight a year being caught, according to the

FOR OLD PEOPLE!

In old people the nervous system is weakened, and that must be strengthened. One of the most prominent medical writers of the day, in speaking of the prevalence of rheumatic troubles among the aged, says: "The various pains, rheumatic or other, which old people often complain of, and which materially disturb their comfort, result from disordered nerves." There it is in a nut shell—the medicine for old people must be a nerve tonic. Old people are beset with constipation, flatulency, drowsiness, diarrhœa, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia. These diseases are of nervous origin. Paine's Celery Compound, that great nerve tonic, is almost a specific in these disorders, and by its regulating influence on the liver, bowels, and kidneys, removes the disorders peculiar to old age. Old people find it stimulating to the vital powers, productive of appetite, and a promoter of digestion.

Sold by druggists. $1.00 six for $5.00. Send for eight-page paper, with many testimonials from nervous, debilitated, and aged people, who bless Paine's Celery Compound.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

The Fishery Treaty Rejected.

The vote on the ratification of the treaty to surrender to Canada the rights of American fishermen was taken in the national senate on Tuesday. Fortunately a republican senate stood between the administration and the surrender, and the treaty was rejected by a vote of thirty-one to twenty-nine—a strict party vote. A two-thirds vote in the affirmative is required for the ratification of a treaty.

IN CENTRAL AFRICA

An Explorer Who Found Himself in a Desperate Situation.

The cable announced some time ago that Mr. Deane, one of the agents of the Congo Free State, had been killed in an elephant charge while out hunting. This gentleman was in command of the Stanley Falls station when it was attacked two years ago by the Arabs. On his retreat from that station he had one of the most thrilling experiences that ever befell a white man in Africa.

Before the station fell his ammunition had been almost entirely exhausted, and the greater part of his force had skurried down the river, leaving him to his fate. In the darkness of the night Deane and his comrade, Dubois, with three or four Haussa soldiers, stole away from Stanley Falls and noiselessly made their way westward along the river bank. It was not long before Dubois, slipping upon a stone at the water's edge, fell into the rapid current and was drowned. Deane was left alone with his few black comrades, and the prospect that they would escape was very slight.

They pushed on all night, but in the intense darkness they were able to make their way only a few miles through the thick undergrowth. Thoroughly tired out, they stopped at daylight for a short rest. The rain which had been falling all night ceased, and Deane took off his drenched garments to partially dry them. While his clothes were hanging on the bushes, shouts were suddenly heard a few hundred feet behind the little party. The Arabs had discovered their retreat and were in hot pursuit. They were so near that Deane could hear the grass rattle as the enemy sprang through it, rapidly following the muddy tracks of the fugitives. Deane had just time to throw his clothes over his arm and start at full speed through the bush, followed by his Haussa attendants. They could hear the shouts of the Arabs who were on their trail for hours, and every nerve was strained to distance the pursuers. At last the noises behind them grew fainter, and by noon it was evident that the enemy had grown weary of the chase. Then the hunted little party stopped for a breathing spell.

It was a woebegone and almost hopeless band of fugitives. In the mad race for life every Haussa had lost his gun, and not a weapon of any sort was left in the party. One by one Deane had dropped his garments, and he had nothing left except a small military cape, which he threw over his shoulders. In the midst of an African jungle he had not the slightest protection for his bleeding feet, and even if he had saved his boots he would not have dared to put them on, for the tracks would have instantly revealed to any prowling Arab or hostile native that a white man was in the neighborhood. A cannibal tribe, with whom Deane himself had had a serious fight, lined the river below, and he dared not appeal to them for succor. He was about 300 miles from the nearest white station at Bengala. All that could be done was to struggle down the river, through the dense bush and forests, several miles inland, avoiding all the tribes, except one or two that were known to be friendly, and living on whatever they could pick up that would afford nutriment.

For four weeks this white castaway in Central Africa, almost naked, and weak with hunger and fatigue, wandered through the solitudes of the country. The nights were cold, but the only covering the fugitives had was dried leaves, which they heaped over themselves as they lay down on the bare earth under the trees. They found many wild grapes and some other fruits of the forest, but these alone would not give them strength to keep up the hard march. An occasional monkey or a bird would have been a delighted addition to their food supplies, but without guns they could not obtain game of any sort. They did what any one else would do when fighting against starvation. Many African tribes esteemed fried ants as a great delicacy. Whenever our fugitives came to a prosperous colony of ants they laid in a supply. Then many caterpillars crossed their path, and these treasures were carefully stowed away in a cartridge box. At dinner time the party would build a fire, roast their ants and caterpillars, and disguise these solid viands as much as possible with mouthfuls of grapes and other fruit. It was anything but palatable food, but it kept life in their bodies, though the poor fellows became so weak that they could travel only three or four miles a day.

At last they came to the Bakumu tribe, who live along the river, and the fugitives thought they might safely reveal themselves to these people. Their confidence was not betrayed, and the fugitives were supplied with provisions which very agreeably varied their caterpillar diet. Meanwhile the Bangala who deserted Deane at Stanley Falls had reached home in canoes, and informed Capt. Coquilhat of the unhappy plight of his brother officer. The captain at once started to the rescue on a little steamer. He found Stanley Falls station burned to the ground, and as he lay in the river he had a hot exchange of compliments with the Arabs in a rattling fire of musketry. It was evident that Deane had either been killed or was making his way down stream.

Then began a search along the river banks for the unfortunate white man, but no trace was found until Coquilhat reached the Bakumu, who told him that two days before they had released the necessities of the fugitives. A few miles inland in a deserted but the rescuers found the naked white man. It was time. Deane was absolutely worn out. His face was badly swollen, his eyes were sunken, and he could hardly crawl. He had no disease, but famine had nearly used him up.

This bitter experience did not wean Deane from his love of African adventure. He remained in the service of the Congo Free State, and he is one of the very few white men who have ever perished in a charge of enraged elephants, though Baker and several writers have given vivid descriptions of this danger which hunters sometimes encounter. — New York Sun.

Good old Dr. C——, on leaving a patient one evening, gave his opinion of her case in the following words, spoken in the slow, stately manner for which he was noted: "Madam, in the morning you will be better, or you will be worse, or you will remain as you are."—Harper's Magazine.

FLAG RAISING AT YORK CORNER.

The republicans of York, Me., on Friday evening of last week raised a Harrison and Morton flag at "the Corner," and Dr. John C. Stewart delivered an address of which the following is a synopsis:

The democratic party is the party of free trade. Mills on April 15th, 1884, declared that he was "in favor of free men, free labor and free trade." A member of the British parliament declared that "Cobden founded free trade; Cleveland saved it." The entire British press recognizes the issue between the two parties as the issue between free trade and protection.

Democrats argue for free food. Of $68,000,000 revenue collected on articles of food, $60,000,000 came from sugar, rice and molasses, and yet the party voted solid in Congress not to reduce the tariff on sugar. The Mills bill strikes at all our northern industries, but protects every one of the southern.

Democrats declare protection to be a Chinese wall preventing foreign goods coming in and domestic goods going out, yet in three years German imports and exports increased $360,000,000 under protection. France increased hers in eleven years, $500,000,000; Canada in four years, $108,000,000; the United States in twenty years, $800,000,000; and last year we exported $450,000,000 worth of articles of food.

Under the free trade tariff of 1850-53, in four years our foreign trade increased $1,558,000,000, or $17 for each inhabitant per year. From 1880-83, in four years it increased $6,070,000,000, or $30 per year for each inhabitant.

Free trade reduces wages. Protection increases them. Free importation brings more goods in, and we do not manufacture as much to supply the demand; hence laborers are discharged. The man who obtains employment has to work for less pay when five men are looking for four places. In fifteen years in England competition has decreased the number of those employed in gainful occupations by 3,200,000. The Registrar General in his 42d annual report says "One of about every seven of our population end their days as paupers." In England the linen industry has declined in twenty years; in Germany it has increased 300 per cent. In Germany the increase in the number of men employed in manufacture of iron and steel under protection is forty per cent, and their wages increased 17.5 per cent.

Our home market for shoes amounts to $240,000,000 annually. The entire foreign markets which we are unable to reach amounts to $20,000,000. In twenty years the manufactures of Great Britain increased 100 per cent; in the United States 600 per cent. In 1859 we produced 60,000,000 pounds of wool, Great Britain 140,000,000; in 1883 we produced 300,000,000 pounds, Great Britain 132,000,000.

In 1860 our manufactures amounted to $1,800,000,000; in 1886, to $7,000,000,000. In 1868 no steel rails were made in this country and we paid Great Britain $120 per ton; $460,000,000 of American money went to British iron manufacturers. Now we produce 1,764,000 tons, and rails sell at $30 per ton.

May 14th, 1882, Bismark, in a speech before the German Reichstag said: "It is my deliberate judgment that the prosperity of America is mainly due to its system of protective laws."

We know, and other nations see, what protection has done for this country; we see what free trade has done and is doing for other nations, and decline to accept it in lieu of what we have tested and found to be good—Protection to American Labor.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

Grover Cleveland has done more to advance the cause of free trade than any Prime Minister of England has done.—London Spectator.

WE, the undersigned, Committee of the Trustees of the Portsmouth Savings Bank, do severally solemnly swear that we have made a thorough examination of its affairs, and that the foregoing statement by us made is true, according to our best knowledge and belief. SO HELP US GOD.

JOHN S. PRAY, JOHN KNOWLTON, } Committee of the Trustees.

Personally appearing, the above-named John S. Pray and John Knowlton made oath to the foregoing statements. Before me,

MARCELLUS BUFFORD, Justice of the Peace.

New Hampshire Items.

The body of an unknown woman was found in the river at Dover on Monday afternoon. On the bank near by was a red shawl, and a black satchel containing an apron, pair of gold-bowed spectacles, and a purse containing two ten-dollar bills and two silver dollars. Deceased was about sixty years old, five and a half feet high, and weighed 171 pounds; had gray hair, and upper front teeth were gone. She was seen by several persons about an hour before her body was found.

The Wayside Inn at Newbury, this state, was raided Sunday, and on Monday in the police court at Concord the two managers were fined $18.17 each.

Two Polish boys, brothers, aged respectively twelve and fifteen years, quarrelled in Exeter on the night of the 19th inst., and the elder stabbed the other near the heart, inflicting a probably fatal wound. The assailant is under arrest.

John George of Farmington has been held in $1000 for the supreme court on a charge of breaking into and stealing from the house of Rupert Emerson of that town.

The democrats of Meredith village will have a big flag-raising next Friday evening with music by a band, and speeches by four or five prominent members of the party.

Col. Greenleaf Clark of Atkinson died very suddenly of heart disease Aug. 19th, aged seventy-two years. He was one of the best-known men in the state, and was a brother of Col. John B. Clarke of the Manchester Mirror.

The American election is infinitely more important to Englishmen than their own internal politics just at this juncture. * * * The main question at issue is English free trade against the continental system of protection.—London Times.

MUSIC HALL.

Notwithstanding the rain on Tuesday evening there was a large audience at Music hall, when John S. Moulton's Comedy Co. performed, for the first time in this city, the Irish melo-drama "Killarney," which was received with quite as much favor as was the entertainment of the previous night. The company seems to have taken a good hold on the theatre-going public, and the success of the week's engagement is assured.

This evening the attraction will be the farcical comedy "My Best Girl." Tickets at Goodrich's; popular prices; see advertisement.

POLICE COURT---BATCHELDER J.

TUESDAY, Aug. 21st.

William E. Randall of Seabrook was before the court on two charges of assault, one on Dr. Fred F. Gage, dentist, of Boston, the other on the doctor's son, Mayor Hodgdon and Samuel Goodall, Esq., appeared for the prosecution, and Hon. Calvin Page for the defence. It appeared in evidence that the complainants, while stopping at Seabrook beach, went in bathing without proper dress, were arrested by Randall, who is a police officer of the town, and next day were fined by a justice, from whose decision they appealed. The assaults complained of were alleged to have been committed at the time of the arrest. After a patient hearing Judge Batchelder dedided that the officer had acted wholly within his authority, resistance having been offered to the arrest, and ordered his discharge.

HAMPTON CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

Supplementary to the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the settlement of the town of Hampton, which was most successfully carried out on Wednesday of last week, services were held on Sunday, the 19th inst., commemorative of the 250th anniversary of the establishing of the Congregational church in that town on September 16th, 1638.

The church was packed, morning, afternoon and evening, hundreds of people coming in teams from neighboring towns. At the morning service the pastor, Rev. John A. Ross, preached a historical sermon, taking as his text Deut. 32:78; the historical data were found by Mr. Ross in the records of the church and the town, and the very interesting discourse included brief mention of every pastor of the church from the first one, Rev. Steven Bachiler, down to the present time.

At the afternoon service addresses were made by four ex-pastors of the church, Rev. Solomon P. Fay, Rev. John Colby, Rev. John W. Dodge and Rev. W. W. Fay; and at the evening service reminiscences were given and exhortations made by Deacons Hobbs, Dow, Perkins, and others of the older members of the church. There was excellent music at all three services, and the exercises throughout were greatly enjoyed by all present.

THE ELIOT FETE.

Tuesday, the opening day of the Midsummer Fete at Eliot on which the Eliot Library Association and their friends have expended so much time, labor and money, was not the bright and pleasant day hoped for, and the threatening look of the skies kept at home in this city scores of persons who had planned to attend the fair. A large number went over, however, by train, in single teams and barges, and many attended from the Rye and Newcastle hotels, and those at York beach, while from points between Boston and Portland the trains brought many hundreds; yet with all, the attendance was not nearly what it would have been on a bright day. We have no report as to what effect the downpour of rain had which commenced in the evening, but it must have made getting home very unpleasant for those who were there. All will regret the unfavorable weather at this time.

PERSONAL.

Miss Lulu McCaffery of this city is passing a few weeks with friends in Massachusetts.

Mr. William P. Gardner and wife are passing several weeks in the White mountain region.

Miss Flora E. Packard of Lynn, Mass., and Miss Cora E. Libbey, are visiting their grandmother, Mrs. Asa Libbey of Eliot.

Mr. T. C. Cole and wife, of Troy, N. Y., formerly of this city, are visiting friends here.

Mrs. H. H. Cobbett and son, Master Arthur Cobbett, left this city on Tuesday for an extended visit to relatives in Belfast, Me.

BASE BALL.

The Worcesters and Portsmouths will play on the South street grounds this afternoon at 3:30 o'clock. Bryan will empire the game, and the Portsmouth management will present several new players.

MARITIME NOTES.

The barges John Watt, from Philadelphia with 1756 tons of coal, Sunrise, from Rondout with 1825 tons, and R. A. Fisher, from Hoboken with 1464 tons, arrived at this port on the 21st inst., all to J. Albert Walker. In passing Pollock Rip early in the morning on the 20th, the John Watt, in tow of tug B. W. Morse, touched on the shoal near the buoy east of the lightship, but was hauled off at high water unharmed.

The tug Knickerbocker arrived at this port on the 21st inst. from Vineyard Haven with coal barges in tow, and about six o'clock in the evening towed down the river another barge which had just finished discarging at Concord railroad wharf.

The tides were very high on Tuesday, and some of the wharves were partially submerged.

The yacht race off Newport, R. I., for the Newport cups, was sailed on the 20th inst., and was a complete fiasco so far as racing was concerned, light winds alternating with dead calms all through the day. The Volunteer, the first to complete the course, was two hours ahead of the next boat, the Fanny. The flyers Puritan, Mayflower and Bedouin, and several others, did not pass the home stakeboat till after midnight, and hence were not timed. The course was fifteen miles out toward Block island and return, and it took the Volunteer six hours, forty-two minutes and forty-one seconds to sail over it.

Mr. J. A. Farrington, for some time past manager of the Portsmouth machine shop, has resigned that position to go on the road for the company. A gentleman named Hubbell has been appointed superintendent of the works.

The wine clerks of Water street will go on an excursion to Boon island in a few days.

Attempts are being made here to placate the dissatisfied democrats of the rank and file by promises of places of emolument in case of the election of the democratic National Electoral College. But there is no confidence among the masses that any such ticket will ever again be elected.

The Nonpareil club will have an excursion to Chauncy's creek in a twelve-oared boat next Sunday, and have a clambake there.

The Mutual Life Ins. Co. of New York, last week in twenty-four endowments paid $81,875.77; in death claims in the same time it paid $65,030.42, making the total payments for the week $146,906.19, an average of $24,484.36 in daily payments.

The democrats of South Newmarket had a flag raising on Friday evening of last week. A large number of persons were present, a salute of thirty-eight guns was fired, and several speeches were made.

Hon. James G. Blaine will address the republicans of South Berwick and Old Orchard next week; the dates are not yet named, but he will be at South Berwick the latter part of the week.

Charles McLaughlin of Brunswick, Me., was arrested at Old Orchard on the 19th inst. for violating the internal revenue law by being a dealer in liquors without paying the special United States tax.

Col. Scott of Des Moines, Iowa, has bought land on Gerrish's island south of Chauncy's creek, and will build a cottage there for his occupancy next year.

The issue of Protection is incalculably stronger and greater than any man, as it concerns the prosperity of the present and of the generations yet to come.—James G. Blaine.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

We must now place our manufacures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

Mr. Cleveland demands in effect that there shall be a tariff for revenue purposes only. No tinkering with the tariff will suffice; no readjustment of duties will do. The only reform that common sense can accept of is one which unaffectedly substitutes the principle of unimpeded imports for that of tariff regulations.—London Standard.

OBITUARY.

In the usual place in our columns will be found a notice of the death of Mrs. Nellie E. Kent, which occurred in Montreal, Dominion of Canada, on Monday, the 20th inst.

Mrs. Kent left this city early in July to pass several weeks with her husband, Mr. Horace B. Kent, who has for several years filled a responsible position in the general office of the Pullman Car Co. in Montreal. On the 2d inst. she was attacked by typhoid fever, and was taken to a private hospital where she received the most skillful treatment and careful nursing, to no avail, however, as she died on the 20th; Mrs. J. Horace Kent arrived in Montreal about two days previous to her death. She was the daughter of Mr. Frank P. Ackerman, formerly of this city, and grand-daughter of the late Joseph D. Ackerman. She was a true friend, and a devoted wife.

The democrats of Berwick will raise a large campaign flag next Friday evening, with music and speeches.

The First Symptoms

Of all Lung diseases are much the same: feverishness, loss of appetite, sore throat, pains in the chest and back, headache, etc. In a few days you may be well, or, on the other hand, you may be down with Pneumonia or "galloping Consumption." Run no risks, but begin immediately to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Several years ago, James Birchard, of Darien, Conn., was severely ill. The doctors said he was in Consumption, and that they could do nothing for him, but advised him, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine, two or three months, he was pronounced a well man. His health remains good to the present day.

J. S. Bradley, Malden, Mass., writes: "Three winters ago I took a severe cold, which rapidly developed into Bronchitis and Consumption. I was so weak that I could not sit up, was much emaciated, and coughed incessantly. I consulted several doctors, but they were powerless, and all agreed that I was in Consumption. At last, a friend brought me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. From the first dose, I found relief. Two bottles cured me, and my health has since been perfect."

EASTERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

To the Holders of Certificates of Indebtedness.

PERSONS desiring to have their names placed upon said Register in order to vote at the coming election must comply with the following regulations of the Trustees. "Every holder of Certificates of Indebtedness who desires to have them registered in his name shall present to the Trustees at their office, No. 10 Tremont St., Boston, a written statement signed by him and giving his address and the denomination and number of every certificate of indebtedness claimed to be held by him, and shall if required by said Trustees verify his title by exhibiting such certificates and the written order of the last registered holder of the same, or other evidence of his title to the reasonable satisfaction of the Trustees; and said Trustees if satisfied with his title shall indorse their approval upon said written statement, and said certificate holder may thereupon be registered in conformity therewith. The approval of one of said Trustees shall be sufficient authority for such registration, and no registration after the 13th day of August, 1888, shall be valid without such approval, and no approval shall be granted after the time for closing the Register."

The Voting Register will close at the close of business on the 21st day of August, between which time and the special meeting on the 28th day of August, 1888, no registration will be allowed.

Three Summer Dangers.

Three summer dangers menace the household and traveller at every turn. They are climate, food and water. To guard against them requires judgment, abstinance, and SANFORD'S GINGER.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer complaints, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of cholera morbus,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

As a pure fruit stimulant for the aged, mentally and physically overworked, for delicate females, especially mothers, and as a means of reforming those addicted to an excessive use of alcoholic stimulates, it is invaluable.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists and dealers on those who call for and desire only

LICENSE YOUR DOGS.

SECTION 1. No dog shall be permitted to go at large or loose in this city until the owner or keeper of such dog, or the keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall have procured from the city marshal a license for such dog.

SECTION 5. It shall be the duty of the city marshal to cause all dogs to be killed which shall be found at large or loose within the city without a collar marked as required by law, and to cause all dogs so killed to be buried, and any person may lawfully kill any dog found within the limits of this city going at large contrary to the provision of this chapter.

SECTION 6. In case any dog shall be found loose or going at large contrary to any of the foregoing provisions, or in case any dog not licensed shall be provided with a collar marked as required in this ordinance, the owner or keeper thereof or the head of the family or keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall upon conviction thereof be fined five dollars.

The above extracts from the city ordinances of the city will be strictly enforced.

The Cockroach of India.

"I should like to make your flesh creep" is the involuntary thought of one who essays to describe the Indian cockroach. Who that has been in India does not know the flat, shining, ill savored, coffee colored thing seen only in dimly lighted places, the eyes starting out of the head, the long, ever moving feelers, the swift, uncertain movements, the sudden, uncontrolled flight when he dashes, perhaps, into your face, and for a brief and horrible moment his clammy legs cling to your skin? What a life he must lead! Ever in cowardly terror of his life, his perpetual instinct is to hide himself. From some dark corner he glars at you with guilty eye. As he darts from place to place he knows you will kill him if you can, and he knows he deserves to be killed. Even in the houses of the highest in the land the cockroach is not unknown. Boots, gloves and books bear witness to his ravages, and a pungent smell betrays his presence in your wardrobe.

But the paradise of the cockroach is a ship. It is in the depths of the ship's hold, where he may hide among the cargo undisturbed and feed on all rank things, that he is in his glory. Happily he seems unable to live except in tropical heat, so that in the great passenger steamers constantly returning to Europe he is seldom seen. The home of his heart is the hold of the ship whose course is limited to the tropical seas. There, among bales of rice and kegs of oil, where darkness reigns and the air is hot and foul and where human foot rarely intrudes, he roams at will from post to post. Thence the more venturesome spirits ascend to the upper decks, and haunt saloons and cabins, and especially pantries and storerooms, where corners and crevices shelter them and there are endless chances of "loot." Hence comes the chief ingredient of that sickly atmosphere which strikes the sense on descending from the outer air and often makes a voyage in such a vessel a penance indeed.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Russian Priests and Monks.

Although the people are forever in need of the services of the priest, they pay him but poorly. For the highest ceremonies he receives one or two roubles, and for the smallest and most frequent a few kopecks. The priest and the monk being both poor, it is no uncommon sight to see them bargaining for a marriage or a burial, and disputing the price as they dispute only in Russia. From that all sorts of anecdotes have sprung. On one occasion it was a priest, who, to be revenged on a father for his avarice, gave the child a ridiculous name at baptism.

On another, a peasant asked his minister for permission to get married in another parish. "Very good," said the priest, "but have you calculated what your doing so will cost me? Now, in the first place I would have married you. Well, that is so many roubles. Then, you will have children, say seven; that would be seven baptisms. Next, several of those children would die, say three; that would be three burials in my pocket. After that you would have sons or daughters to marry, say four; that would be four marriages I should lose." "Yes, that's very well counted up," replied the moujik; "but you are already an old man, and you might be dead long before all that could happen." "That's true," returned the priest; "we are all mortal, and for that reason I forbid you to leave the parish, and I shall only ask you ten roubles for your marriage."—Stanley McKenna in The Cosmopolitan.

Work of a Drug Clerk.

People have no idea what a much abused class of workers are the drug clerks. They have to spend years studying chemistry and other branches connected with the pharmaceutical profession, and after they go to work what do they get? The answer is—precious little. Aside from the small compensation allowed us for our services, there are the long hours and Sunday work. I rarely work less than thirteen hours a day, and am required to work even harder on the seventh day of the week than the first. Besides filling prescriptions and serving customers with other articles in the line carried by the trade, I am kept on the run to the soda fountain. The drug clerks generally have but really little time to enjoy the good things of this life, and, after serving many years in the business, I can truthfully say that there is little in it. The salaries paid years ago were better than now, but even then it was not a lucrative profession. The cause of the present low salaries is the large accessions to the ranks of the medicine mixers year after year. They are being turned out of the colleges of pharmacy in droves every year, and when beginning do not object to working for low wages. The consequence of this is that the salaries of the old timers have to come down, as the owners of the drug stores do not care about paying more than they can avoid.—Drug clerk in Globe-Democrat.

The Egyptian Heaven.

Earth was not to the Egyptians what it is to us—a globe carried safely through space by the laws of gravitation. Everybody in Egypt knew that it was a flat, oblong, quadrangular slab, more like the upper board of a table than anything they could imagine. It was surmounted by a flat, iron roof stretching at some distance from it and supported by four strong pillars, which prevented it from falling and crushing what was underneath. Thus the world was like a two storied house, the various parts of which might be connected, as they are in our houses, by a staircase or by a ladder. The Egyptians supposed that there was somewhere in the west a tall ladder which went up straight from earth to heaven. Gods and goddesses watched it day and night. Nobody was allowed to climb it unless he had the password, and, even after giving it, those poor souls were in danger of never reaching the top who were not helped by the hand of some piteous divinity. Once on the solid floor of the firmanent they traveled northward until they came to the brink of the boreal ocean; there they found the ferry boat or the ibis of Thot, the judge Osiris and his assessors, the island of the happy, where they settled forever and ever among the indestructible stars, as indestructible as any of them.—Professo. Maspero.

Will Get Used to It.

"Why that sad expression, dear," said a bride on the first day of her wedding trip, as she raised her head from her husband's shoulder, "do you regret?"

"Ah, no, darling," he replied fervently," it was but a fleeting expression. You dropped asleep for a moment and I thought I heard just the faintest suspicion of a snore."—The Epoch.

Hay fever sufferers ought to know of its efficacy. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me as a preventive to hay fever. Have been using it since the 9th of August and have found it a specific for that much dreaded disease. For ten years I have been a great sufferer from August 9th till frost, and have tried many alleged remedies, but Ely's Cream Balm is the only preventive I have ever found. —F. B. To the Delicate and Malarious.

The most incredulous are convinced of the virtues of Aunt Rachael's Malarial Bitters upon a trial of them. Their base is Speer's port wine, with herbs and roots so favorably known to the medical profession and the community at large as the best cure for malaria. They are all that can be desired by the most feeble victims of malaria.

Archery increases in fashionable favor all along the country lines, and there are very few well kept lawns now without a target.

It Is Useless

For young ladies who are troubled with freckles, pimples, moth and tan and a bad skin generally to use liquid paints or dry powders, for they only make the skin look well for the time being. To have a good complexion you must have pure blood. Use Sulphur Bitters and your skin will be fair and your complexion rosy.—Young Ladies' Magazine.

CURIOUS NERVOUS DISORDERS.

An Interesting Class of Affections—Strange Contagious Mania

A curious incident is reported from Wilkesbarre, Pa. One of the young women employed in a silk mill at that place was seized with an epileptic fit. The other girls crowded round her, alarmed and excited. "Suddenly," says the account, "one of them gave a wild shriek and fell over in violent hysterics. The excitement increased, and in a minute or so another young woman was seized with hysteria. The girls were now almost wild with nervous excitement, and one after another were seized with hysteric convulsions." Eighteen of them were affected in this strange way, and they all had to be sent home after medical aid had been summoned. The case belongs to a by no means uncommon but very interesting class of nervous affections. Neuro mimesis, or nervous mimicry, has been at the base of a great number of puzzling outbreaks, many of which were at the time of their occurrence attributed to supernatural causes.

In the Fifteenth century a nun in a German convent suddenly began to mew like a cat. In a short time the infection had spread until all the other nuns were mewing in rivalry with her. The mewing epidemic was carried to other convents, and for a time the religious authorities were in consternation. In the same century a strange biting mania developed in a convent, and soon all the nuns were biting one another and all who approached them. This outbreak was cured by terrorism. A regiment of soldiers was drawn up in the court of the convent and the biting nuns were informed that if they did not come to their senses they would be flogged with rods by the troops. The fear of this punishment had the desired effect. With other epidemics of the same general character, however, all remedies failed. Of these was the so called dancing mania, when tens of thousands of people went leaping, dancing and singing through the streets in procession, abandoning business, domestic duties, everything, to indulge in this singular eccentricity.

The history of the Flagellants, who walked in procession, each rank flogging the one in front and being flogged by the one behind, is of the same order. This epidemic spread until it had covered all Germany and Italy and had invaded France. Both the dancing and the Flagellant manias affected children as well as grown people. Numbers of the victims perished miserably, for processions were arranged to traverse the country, and this they did, wandering about without any commissariat, trusting to charity, until the nuisance grew so formidable that cities closed their gates against the pilgrims and drove them into the waste, where thousands died of exposure and privation.

Hecker, the historian of the epidemics of the middle ages, had a curious theory to account for them. They occurred in the period of the Black Death, when pestilence stalked over Europe and swept away millions. Hecker held that the plague was caused by certain changes in the earth's magnetism, and to support this he cited many reports of strange atmospheric phenomena, foul odors arising from the ocean and saturating whole continents, and other indications of abnormality in the telluric conditions. Hecker's hypothesis has not been accepted by modern science, but his facts are trustworthy. The extensive epidemics of nervous mimicry which he chronicles have certainly not been paralleled since the middle ages, and perhaps we should look for the explanation of this to the magnitude of the advance in the standards of living and in the average of health. The most striking recent instance of nervous mimicry is the case of the Convulsionnaires of St. Madard, many of whom were unquestionably cataleptics. With the spread of education and a better regimen of diet the tendency to nervous epidemics has plainly diminished. It is, however, by no means outgrowing, as the Wilkesbarre episode, cited at the beginning of this article, shows, and as was proved by the occurrence of a similar outbreak among the girls in a Brooklyn factory not long ago. Today these strange affections are recognized as neurotic, but the precise mode of their dissemination is still an unsolved problem.—New York Tribune.

How to Learn a Language.

The Volapuk craze seems to have run its course and died, and everybody has made up his mind that we have not yet got the world's language. If people only knew how easy it is to learn French or German or Italian there would be less of these foolish attempts to force an unknown tongue upon the world. To get along as well as there is any necessity in a foreign country you do not need more than 1,000 or 1,500 words. Think how easy it is to get these words in your memory. That means less than the number of words in an average newspaper column, and it is really the fact that you can get enough of French, say, to get along with as easily as you can memorize a column in the daily newspaper. It is so with German and with Italian. You get the grammatical construction and then all you have to do is to make yourself a vocabulary.

The trouble is that people imagine learning a strange tongue is so hard that they will not attempt it in a common sense way, but they shrink from the difficulties which only exist in their own imaginations. Cardinal Mezzofanti could take a grammar and a dictionary of a strange language and hear a confession from it in three days. I hold that the average man can do partly as well as that, anyhow, if he applies himself in the right way. There is no reason why every educated man should not be equipped with at least three modern languages, and six months of his spare time —of the hours wasted on novels and trifles—would do the work.—C. H. De Ligne in Chicago News.

French Custom at Baptisms.

A modern French custom at baptisms is that of presenting all the guests with a donation of sugar almonds in a bonbonniere, which has the appearance of a roll of parchment. On this roll are inscribed the names of the child, of the parents, god parents, the date of the birth and christening, and the name of the church where the ceremony was performed.—Chicago Herald.

A Change in Facial Type.

Frederick Barnard, the illustrator, surprised me a little the other day when he said: "You Americans are not a bit like the English in your appearance. In the course of a century or so you've changed from the English type altogether. The voices of your women have grown loud and shrill and the men have got darker faces and keener eyes. I've got so now that I can tell the New Yorker pretty well by his eyes wherever I find him. They are sharp eyes and are set near together, as though their owner had brought them close to his nose by poking that organ into very narrow places where it was necessary to see at the same time. You look like a lot of ferrets. Then the eyebrows, instead of going right straight across the face, slope downward at the outer edge and come rather close together above the nose. That not only makes you look shrewd, but it makes you look bored and tired and dragged out, as I suspect most of you are. A great many of you look like actors. Boston people look somewhat different from New Yorkers, as they ought to, for they live in a more Christian town than this. Your eternal jumping and rushing in this city make me tired, as the boys say."

This change in facial type must have struck all who have studied old portraits and given any thought to the matter. The revolutionary fathers were not the haggard, lean featured men who tear up and down Wall street and Broadway; they had stability of person, large clear eyes and rosy jowls, looked as if they ate and slept enough and had not invented malaria. They had that calm of good health and ostrich digestion that makes the English admirable to the eyes of the pining dude, who, although he can't quite imitate their appearance, can wear their quizzing glasses, pot hats and checks. As modes of life change there is no doubt that people make some facial conformity to them.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Brief Chapter on Relishes.

The relishes are of two classes. First, those which depend mainly on one or more piquant substances, such as pepper, mustard, ginger, horseradish, vinegar, cinnamon and the various spices. These are combined with some one or more—generally with several—of the following vegetables as a base: tomatoes, usually green; onions, cabbage, cucumbers, pears, peaches, currants, berries, grapes.

Secondly, those which depend mainly on sugar, combined with the juices of various fruits, or with the pulp, as in the case of marmalade.

Now the question arises, are these and similar relishes conducive to health?

A normal, vigorous appetite needs no such aid. It is sufficient of itself. The lower animals need nothing of the kind. The cow's green grass, the horse's dry hay, and the dog's bone with a little meat on it, are doubtless eaten with a relish that our pampered stomachs know little of.

Unfortunately, all people have not high health. Some are in a feeble condition, with little or no appetite, and yet their recovery depends mainly on the food they take. In such cases some simple relish is not merely greatly desirable, it is necessary.

Many persons, in this driving age, come to their meals with little appetite. A sensible appetite quickens and increases the gastric secretions. In such cases, therefore, some piquant relish is really helpful. Probably even the strongest is not injurious, if used with moderation; but relishes are greatly pernicious if used to encourage overeating, or to cause one to eat when the stomach is already exhausted from previous repletion.—Youth's Companion.

A Land of Cigarettes.

I have not yet seen a single cigar except my own. All smoke cigarettes. The result is, I am forced when talking to any one to avoid his breath as much as possible. The smoke from the cigarette is inhaled and makes the lungs fetid and must injure health. May not this to some extent increase the dread disease consumption, which I am told is rather common in this land? At the hotels meals are served in the rooms with no addition to the cost, and judging from the tea trays being carried along the corridors of this hotel I would think that all of its large population take their morning meals and late suppers in the private rooms. Indeed, the manager, to whom I complained that I could not find anything ready in the restaurant until nearly 9, informed me he would rather I would take the early meal in my room, and that it could be had as early as 7. The people here are very late risers. Twilight lasts till nearly 10. The people retire very late and shops are all closed till after 9 in the morning.

To nibble at something seems to be a human characteristic; every country has its particular nibble. In America the boys eat peanuts and the girls chew gum. In Japan they eat a small seed, I now forget what. In China and India they chew sugarcane. In Siam, Burmah and southern India and Ceylon, betel nuts. In Egypt and Turkey, pumpkin seeds. In Greece, watermelon seeds. Here every one cracks sunflower seed. In the street cars, at the gardens, and along the streets people are seen eating this seed, and at every corner women and boys are selling them.—Carter Harrison's Moscow Letter in Chicago Mail.

The Beggars of Russia.

An illustration of the results of indiscriminate charity is furnished by facts reported from Russia. It seems that whole villages have resolved themselves into orders of mendicants. They stay at home until they have reaped their harvests, and then all start out on a begging tour. They are divided systematically into guides of ten to twenty persons each. These scatter here and there, begging through the towns, and gather at stated intervals to divide their gains and consult further operations. The women take along their children to excite pity, and the old draw attention to their decrepitude. The cash returns are said to be exceedingly large, and from the bread gathered they not only feed themselves, but fatten their horses. In this manner several months of each year are spent. The moral results of this sort of life are, of course, lamentable. Every trace of self respect goes, and a degeneracy of sentiment is created that obliterates character, ambition and honor. This is true of all mendicancy, under all circumstances.—Globe-Democrat.

FOR OLD PEOPLE!

In old people the nervous system is weakened, and that must be strengthened. One of the most prominent medical writers of the day, in speaking of the prevalence of rheumatic troubles among the aged, says: "The various pains, rheumatic or other, which old people often complain of, and which materially disturb their comfort, result from disordered nerves." There it is in a nut shell —the medicine for old people must be a nerve tonic. Old people are beset with constipation, flatulency, drowsiness, diarrhœa, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia. These diseases are of nervous origin. Paine's Celery Compound, that great nerve tonic, is almost a specific in these disorders, and by its regulating influence on the liver, bowels, and kidneys, removes the disorders peculiar to old age. Old people find it stimulating to the vital powers, productive of appetite, and a promoter of digestion.

Sold by druggists. $1.00. Six for $5.00. Send for eight-page paper, with many testimonials from nervous, debilitated, and aged people, who bless Paine's Celery Compound.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform. 1888.

Destruction by Storm and Flood.

Immense damage was done at New Orleans and on the river, Aug. 19th and 20th, by a great gale, particulars of which were very late in coming in, owing to the prostration of the telegraph wires. Many steamers were destroyed, and over 200 coal barges were totally lost, with their cargoes; the loss on coal boats alone is over $600,000. It was a continuation of this same storm, with less wind but quite as much rain, which swept over the middle states and New England on the 21st.

In Delaware, on the afternoon of the 21st, a cyclone cut a path several hundred feet wide across the state from southwest to northeast, six miles below Wilmington. At least four lives were lost, many persons injured, and property damaged to the amount of many hundred thousand dollars.

On the Connecticut, New York and New Jersey coasts, on the 21st, much damage was done by the high tide, and serious floods occurred in the interior of the states named and in Pennsylvania. At Wheeling, W. Va., the Wheeling creek valley was transformed into a raging torrent, and wooden, stone and iron bridges melted away like sugar, not less than six new bridges of the Baltimore & Ohio railroad, built since the great flood of July 19th last, having been destroyed; it is not known that any lives were lost, but the property loss is immense.

The heavy rain on the night of the 21st did much damage in Boston by flooding cellars, and the tracks of all the railroads leading out of the city were more or less flooded. The gale did immense damage to small boats and pleasure crafts at Nahant, Cohasset, Scituate and other places, the number not sunk or driven ashore being very small. At Marblehead a number of landing-floats were broken to pieces, small boats and dories were smashed, and the sloop yacht Ione was driven on the rocks in a bad position.

Officers Appointed.

Governor Sawyer and council, at an adjourned meeting held on the 21st inst. in Concord, made the following appointments:

Trustees of the industrial school at Manchester, John W. Peppard of Rumney, Daniel W. Bill of Gilsum, Oliver Rand Clark of Manchester.

Auditor of printer's accounts, Horace A. Brown of Concord.

Members of the state board of agriculture, Moses Humphrey of Concord, Geo. S. Philbrick of Tilton, W. H. H. Mason of Moultonboro.

Trustees of New Hampshire college of agriculture and the mechanic arts, Lyman D. Stevens of Concord, Charles McDaniel of Springfield.

Officials of the state prison, warden, George W. Colbath of Dover; chaplain, Rev. E. R. Wilkins of Concord; physician, Dr. A. E. Emery of Penacook.

One of the largest salmon caught in Lake Sunapee this season, was landed recently by Arthur Stedman of New York.

E. L. Darling of Lebanon recently found fifty-two sheep dead under one tree in his pasture. They were undoubtedly killed by lightning.

At St. John, N. B., Aug. 20th, a large number of firms were burned out; loss $40,000.

A CIRCUS MAN'S START.

John Robinson's Force of Character. Training the Baggage Horses.

Finally, in the winter of 1816, the gypsy caravan, for the Buckley & Wicks circus was but little more, brought up at Boston, seeking shelter from the bitter blasts of a fierce New England winter, in a rather comfortable, if not commodious barn, just at the outskirts of the city. John, now some 15 years of age, was employed as a night watchman at a salary of $10 per month, with grave doubts of ever seeing the half of it. It was a most fortunate engagement for him, however, as the sequel will show. His ambition, as we have said, was prodigious, and having discovered that the star of any circus organization at that day must necessarily be a rider, he determined to become a master of the pad saddle before the winter closed. Horses, of course, he had not, especially those trained to the purpose, as these were usually the individual property of the riders, and kept away from the common circus sheds. A boy of John Robinson's wonderful force of character was not to be deterred from a purpose by a difficulty such as this, however, and the resolve of becoming an equestrian having been made, he began looking about for means of its accomplishment.

There were the baggage horses—why not try them? They had never "run the ring," it was true, but they could be broke, and that they should be was at once determined upon. At last the long coveted opportunity came. One dark night, when every one had left the barn or shed, John slipped from his bed of straw, lighted a few tallow dips about the practice ring and then brought out the lead horse of the baggage team. Round and round the twain kept moving until nearly morn, when both rider and steed were so thoroughly exhausted that to move further was a matter almost impossible. The next night, or rather morning, the young Hercules was at it again, and rested not until daylight. When the first horse had been thoroughly broken a second was brought out, and then a third, and finally a fourth, John bestriding them all at once, and handling them in such a manner as eventually to win the greatest renown. Thus, under the cover of darkness, unassisted, discouraged frequently by the fear of discovery and instant discharge, did he labor on, until in the end he was the greatest four horse rider in the world. Not until the show was ready to take the road in the spring, however, did the audacious stripling present himself to Buckley & Wicks to make known his desire to appear before the public as an equestrian.

However, when he had mustered courage for the task he proposed that he be given a position as a performer, and when asked what he could do, told them of his achievements. When laughed at for his seemingly audacious assertion, he brought out the four horses and surprised the entire circus caravan by the boldness of his riding.

From this on he was the star of the Buckley & Wicks arena, and frequently related with pride the startling poster gotten out by the managers announcing his daring act. It was a sheet of common paper, about 28x42 inches in extent, printed in plain black with a rough wood cut representing four horses in a string, with the rider on the back of the "wheel horse." "They looked more like rats than horses," Uncle John used to say. The startling announcement appeared underneath that "the world famous equestrian, John Robinson, Jr., would actually ride three times around the ring while standing on one foot," and as he would frequently add, "I kept a pretty tight grip on the foot while I was doing it." This, as he frequently declared, and his statement is borne out by the testimony of others, was the first piece of pictorial show printing ever gotten out in America, and some thirty years afterward, as manager of his own show, he used to carry a bundle or two of almost the same paper in a pair of saddlebags going ahead to bill the coming of the circus. Uncle John's salary at the time of his connection with Buckley & Wicks was $5 a month and board, with $5 extra allowed for carrying the center pole up hill and steep grades and building and leveling the ring.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Thought from Young Men.

Professor Henry Drummond, whose "Natural Law in the Spiritual World" made so much stir in the world, is described to be a "tall, slim, fair young man, with a trim mustache and a well fitting frock coat, and resembling an officer of the guards rather than a lecturer at a university." It seems to be surprising to many that he should not be elderly, spectacled, shabby and cranky, but the reasonable mind will admit that the present is just the era to expect sound judgment and profound thought from young men. In other ages young men gave their youth to folly exclusively, and were not in a state of health at the age of 30 to see clearly or moralize effectively. Seventy years or so gave a man authority as a philosopher, but the modern system of college athletics keeps a man's physical health strong while his mind develops, so that, unless our collegians are wilfully vicious, the coming century should produce a finer set of minds and bodies than did ancient Greece.—Pittsburg Bulletin.

Saving Thousands of Years.

It is interesting to try and figure the actual extent of the advantages reaped from modern improvements—advantages which some people are bold enough to call in question. Does rapid transit, for instance, really save any great amount of valuable time?

Take a city like New York, where there are perhaps 350,000 people who go each day to and from their work. Remembering the distances traveled by some, it will surely be within limits to suppose that five minutes, on the average, is saved on each journey by the various means of rapid transit of which most avail themselves. This would make an hour on the twelve weekly journeys, and fifty-two hours, or say five working days, in a year.

For 350,000 people this means a yearly saving of 1,250,000 working days, or, reckoning 300 working days to the year, an annual economy of 4,166 years.

Longest Piece of Ordnance.

A correspondent of The Army and Navy Journal asks: "What is the longest piece of ordnance that has ever been successfully fired?" and receives the following answer: "If you include in the term ordnance everything that carries a projectile, we should answer fourteen miles. This is the straight tube conveying natural gas from Murrayville to Pittsburg. To clear this tube out, a projectile known as the 'gum ball' was inserted in the end at the gas well, closely fitting the interior. The gas was then turned on full force and the gum ball fired through its full length, coming out at the further end in a few minutes."—Scientific American.

HAMPTON JOTTINGS.

HAMPTON, Aug. 20th.

A brilliant entertainment was given on a recent evening at Wallitier's hall by a number of celebrated elocutionists from cities in other states, and Mrs. Norman Marston of this town. Readings were interspersed with fine music, and merrily passed the hours.

Two horses belonging to Mr. John Robinson, near the depot, got out of their stable one night recently into a field fenced with barbed wire, by which their flesh was shockingly lacerated.

Mr. Henry Wingate is to have a fine dwelling erected on the Exeter road, by Boston carpenters.

All the living ex-ministers of the Congregational church in this town were present last Sunday, and listened to a sermon prepared for the occasion by Rev. J. A. Ross, the present pastor. They also took active part in the afternoon service.

A young man from Portsmouth selling note paper in this town recently espied in a lady's kitchen a picture of Poresident and Mrs. Cleveland in their car on their trip to St. Louis. The young man said, "I suppose you are democrats here?" The lady answered in the negative. He replied, "Then I would not have that picture in the house." She told him she fancied the looks of Mrs. Cleveland, and had no other picture of her. The lady was pleased with the fervor of the young man.

The very disquieting circumstance has come to light in the New York investigation of immigration that bogus naturalization papers have been granted to foreigners on perjured certificates. One witness admitted receiving $2.50 for swearing that a man, to whom he was introduced for the first time on the day of the transaction, had been here five years and was of good moral character.

A thunder storm on the 21st inst. destroyed 100 houses in a village near Vienna, killed fifteen persons and seriously injured fifty others.

Eighteen houses were recently burned at Wadena, Minn.; loss $75,000.

Chemistry a Delightful Recreation.

"When a youngster," says Mr. Matthieu Williams, "I amused myself by making saturated solutions of alum in hot water, placing cinders, etc., in these, and setting them aside to cool. The cinders became coated with beautiful crystals, and appeared like choice mineral specimens. Baskets and other devices in covered wire were similarly coated. Sugar was crystallized, beautiful crystals of sulphur, made by slowly evaporating a solution of sulphur in bisulphide of carbon, and another form of sulphur crystals by fusing sulphur in a crucible or gallipot, breaking the crust which first forms on cooling and then pitching out the liquid. A nest of beautiful crystals remains.

"I refer to these crudities in order to suggest that crystal making should be reinstated as a popular scientific recreation. The alums, which are so numerous and so varied in color, would alone afford material for a little museum; but the amateur availing himself of the achievements of modern chemistry would find the field of recreation to be practically boundless and the pursuit both elegant and instructive. Among novelties are the isomorphous double chlorides of alkalies, iron, and of the alkaline earth metals, such as chromium, aluminum, magnesium, beryllium, etc. Their colors are magnificent; some of them are described by Dr. Neumann as crystallizing in splendid octahedrons, resembling large diamonds and reflecting light with similar brilliancy. They are chemical first cousins to the alums referred to above. From these the ambitious amateur might proceed to artificial gems, some of which, now within the reach of chemical skill, are quite equal to the natural specimens."—Arkansaw Traveler.

Shrewdness of a Boarder.

A gentleman came to me some months ago and, showing good references, said that he had just come to the city, was in reduced circumstances, but had a good situation with a large concern here and wanted a few weeks' credit. This was readily granted, and he has ever since boarded with me, but notwithstanding he has borne himself in every way as a gentleman, he has never yet quite paid me up. When his pay day comes he always pays me a portion of his indebtedness, but though he has money over for which he has no apparent use, he insists on leaving a balance due until next time. I asked him the other day what he meant by this and why he did not square up. His answer was that he kept behind in his payments on principle—that he did it to insure proper courtesy and consideration in the hotel's treatment of him. He said the little debt he owed me was a constant lever which commanded good attention and further indulgence, on the principle probably that people will "send good money after bad," and that he never intended to square accounts until he was ready to leave. I wonder if the rule of selfishness is at the bottom of all our social and business intercourse, as this man's theory would seem to indicate?—Hotelkeeper in Globe-Democrat

No Drug to Cure Insomnia.

I have recently met with several cases of insomnia due to over taxation of the American nervous system, and have been requested to prescribe some drug that would be effective to produce sleep and be at the same time harmless.

No such drug exists!

There is not one medicine capable of quieting to sleep voluntary life that has been working ten hours at high pressure, except it be more or less poisonous. Consumption of chloral, bromide in some form, or opium, has increased in this country to an incredible extent, is still growing, and a large number of Americans go to bed every night more or less under the influence of poison. Sleep thus obtained is not restful nor restorative, and nature sternly exacts her penalties for violated law, more severe in these cases than in most others.

Digestion suffers first—one is rarely hungry for breakfast, and loss of morning appetite is a certain sign of ill health. Increasing nervousness follows, until days become burdens and poisoned nights the only comfortable parts of life.—Dr. William F. Hutchinson in The American Magazine.

"Another Crime."

Boston, Aug. 23d.—Among the most successful series of novels during the past two years have been those written by Julia Hawthorne and Inspector Byrnes. Their last story, "Another's Crime," has been secured by the enterprising Boston Globe, and will be begun in that paper to-morrow (Saturday), Aug. 25th. It is an exciting detective story, woven in with a love romance. Long instalments of this story will be given each day by the Globe, and it will be completed in three weeks. Orders for the Globe containg this story should be placed with newsdealers at once.

Mr. George Kennan will contribute to the September Century an article on "Exile by Administrative Process," in which he gives a great number of instances of the banishment of persons to Siberia, without the observance of any of the legal formalities that in most countries precede or attend a deprivation of rights. Mr. Kennan will also discuss, in an open letter in this number of the Century, the question, "Is the Siberian Exile System to be at Once Abolished?" stating his reason for believing that the plan of reform now being discussed in Russia, and which is said by the London "Spectator" to invole the entire abolition of exile to Siberia as a method of punishment, will not be put into operation.

The testimony taken by the immigration committee in New York, which tends to show that a number of our coastwise vessels are owned or commanded by aliens, is attracting attention in Washington. Congressman Dingley in the house on the 20th inst. introduced a resolution which was referred to the committee on marine, calling upon the secretary of the treasury for information upon the subject. The effort will be made to ascertain how it has been posible for these aliens to deceive the treasury officials and to violate existing laws.

John Stephenson, the car builder who is announced as a convert to Cleveland, was not a republican after all the flourish of trumpets as to his alleged conversion. He has been a free trader for years. In the last presidential election he voted for St. John, the prohibition candidate. Mr. Stephenson makes no pretence of conversion. It is not much of a stride from prohibition to democracy when a man is an out-and-out free trader.

The grand democratic meeting in Boston to ratify Cleveland's renomination has been "indefinitely postponed," on account of Free Trader Mills not being able to be present. Time was when the democrats of Massachusetts could get up a good meeting without having to depend on orators from Texas to furnish the enthusiasm.

As to Activity.

Our democratic friends are in pretty full possession of the national offices of the country at present. We have yet to find evidence that their prospects of carrying the coming election are improved by that fact.—Boston Herald.

Perhaps it would be well to wait until the pernicious activity sets in.—New York World.

The are no indications of any activity—pernicious or otherwise—in this quarter. Paralysis would be a better word for it.—Boston Herald.

HOOD'S COMPOUND EXTRACT SARSAPARILLA TRADE MARK

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and we ask you to try Hood's Peculiar Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of the vegetable remedies used give to Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar curative powers. No To Itself other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other instead. It is a Peculiar Medicine, and is worthy your confidence.

Hood's Sarsaparilla is sold by all druggists. Prepared by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.

POLICE COURT—BATCHELDER J.

WEDNESDAY, Aug. 22d.

Henry Smith, a seaman, pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness, but was allowed to depart on the request of the city marshal.

Edward Carpenter, watchman at the Jones brewery, was charged with firing a pistol in the compact part of the city. He admitted the charge, but said the first shot was fired in the brewery yard, at a dog which had bitten him, and that having wounded the dog at the first shot, the subsequent ones were fired to finish him. He also said the dog was an unlicensed one, or at least wore no collar. Carpenter was dismissed.

MUSIC HALL.

There was another good audience at Music hall on Wednesday evening, when John S. Moulton's Comedy Co. performed "My Best Girl," which was provocative of much laughter. To-night the attraction will be "Hunt's Remedy."

Roland Reed, now playing an engagement at the Boston Museum, will appear at Music hall next Wednesday evening in "Humbug."

BASE BALL.

About 500 persons witnessed the game between the Worcester and Portsmouth clubs on the South street grounds Wednesday afternoon, the 22d inst., which was won by the home club by a score of fifteen to three. Bryan, otherwise known as "the band," was umpire, and the base ball cranks had lots of fun.

THE ELIOT FETE.

Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather, the Midsummer Fete was successful in every way beyond the anticipations of its promoters. The big tent was filled the first day, Tuesday, afternoon and evening, and the receipts were fully up to what had been expected for both days. The pouring rain of Tuesday night and the lowering unpleasantness of Wednesday forenoon did not deter another large crowd from attending in the afternoon and evening, the tent being again filled, and the sales of refreshments and fancy articles as brisk as on the first day. The fete will add an unexpectedly large sum to the building fund of the Eliot Library Association.

SCHOONER WRECKED.

The schooner Hattie J. Averill, Matthews master, dragged her anchors and went ashore on the rocks at Cape Neddick shortly after midnight on the night of the 21st inst., and went to pieces, becoming a total loss. The crew, consisting of the master and two men, got ashore safely. The schooner, of which Capt. Matthews was sole owner, was built in 1863, and registered about thirty-five tons; her loss is a heavy one for her owner, as there was no insurance on the vessel. The Hattie J. Averill has been engaged as a "bricker" between this port and Boston, at times, for a number of years past.

SUICIDE RECOGNIZED.

The unknown woman whose body was found floating in the river at Dover on Monday evening of this week, was recognized on Tuesday night as that of Mrs. Agnes Brown Martin, wife of a man employed at Sawyer's Mills. She was a native of Scotland, was aged sixty-one years, and was married to Mr. Martin about forty years ago. They have always lived happily, and enjoyed the respect of their neighbors at Sawyer's Mills. The reason that Mr. Martin did not sooner suspect that the person found drowned was his wife, was that on the Friday previous to her death he accompanied her to Lawrence, Mass., where she wished to go to visit some friends, and left her there, giving her $20 to pay her expenses. Her absence from home being thus accounted for, her husband did not suspect the truth until his two grandchildren, who live with him, came home crying on Tuesday evening, and said they thought their grandmother was drowned, which on investigation he found to be so. She had been slightly affected in her mind for two years, at times, and no doubt returned home from Lawrence in one of these spells, and drowned herself.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Whiton-Stone of Independence square, South Boston, is visiting at the residence of Capt. John G. Moses on Maplewood avenue.

Mrs. E. P. Seavey of Lincoln Hill cottage, and Mrs. John G. Tompson, are at South Berwick.

Thomas Neil, Esq., has been passing part of his vacation in the region of Tamworth. Mr. J. S. Pfeiffer has been in attendance at the Rockingham national bank in Mr. Neil's absence.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

The training-ship Portsmouth was taken into the dry dock at the navy yard on Wednesday, the 22d inst., and the dock pumped out ready to be hauled into the basin this morning.

It was reported on the 22d inst. that eight men have just been "called" on the navy yard,—four from this city, two from Kittery and two from Eliot. As the exigences of the navy department require the immediate repairing of the training-ships Portsmouth and Saratoga, the law prohibiting the employment of new men on navy yards within sixty days of an election will be suspended.

The training-ship Saratoga, from Newport for this naval station, arrived off the harbor on the 22d inst., but was unable to beat in to an anchorage with the light head wind prevailing, and at a late hour in the afternoon was off Rye beach.

His honor the mayor, and the collector of internal revenue, were among the prominent personages attending a reception held by Judge Batchelder at the police court room on Tuesday of this week. The judge seems to have been greatly benefitted in health by his ocean trip.

The Times of Tuesday, the 21st, has a cut said to be made from an instantaneous view of the publisher entertaining a member from Wayback, at Jack Adams' refectory in Concord last summer. The artist chose the opportune moment when reference was made to their pending railroad measures.

The Dover Democrat, which has on several occasions more than intimated that all is not going smoothly with the party in Dover, in its issue of Aug. 21st says: "The democrats down on the Landing in ward five are so disgusted with the present party management that they refuse to hang out the old democratic flag, or allow it to be hung out. It is therefore stored carefully away to be used when the democrats will not try to take the bread out of the workmen's mouths by giving England the advantage of free trade at the expense of our working people."

Hon. Thomas B. Reed, present and next member of Congress from the first Maine district, on the evening of the 21st inst. spoke an hour and a quarter to a crowded audience in Biddeford. He devoted his discussion to the tariff, condemning the Mills bill, and criticising President Cleveland's pension vetoes. An informal reception was tendered him by the York club before the lecture.

At Eastport, Me., on Sunday, the 19th inst., the church bells were rung at noon and the whole town roused to search for the lost child of D. P. McQuirk, of Boston. The child was finally found drowned in a well.

John H. Conant of Newburyport was fined $50 for violation of the law which requires a vessel's name and the name of her home port to be painted on the stern. He is owner of the brig Home, formerly of Newburyport; when the vessel was sold to Boston parties the name of the former port was not erassed, but covered by a piece of board nailed over it, on which was painted "Boston." The court holds teat this does not meet the requirements of the law.

Two boys, named Graftmiller and Appleman, were instantly killed and several others were bruised by the fall of a partially inflated balloon at Sturgis, Mich.

Thomas Minor, a colored porter on the Pacific railway, fatally shot John Humble at Montreal.

Want of Sleep

Is sending thousands annually to the insane asylum; and the doctors say this trouble is alarmingly on the increase. The usual remedies, while they may give temporary relief, are likely to do more harm than good. What is needed is an Alterative and Blood-purifier. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is incomparably the best. It corrects those disturbances in the circulation which cause sleeplessness, gives increased vitality, and restores the nervous system to a healthful condition.

Rev. T. G. A. Coté, agent of the Mass. Home Missionary Society, writes that his stomach was out of order, his sleep very often disturbed, and some impurity of the blood manifest; but that a perfect cure was obtained by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frederick W. Pratt, 424 Washington street, Boston, writes: "My daughter was prostrated with nervous debility. Ayer's Sarsaparilla restored her to health."

William F. Bowker, Erie, Pa., was cured of nervousness and sleeplessness by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for about two months, during which time his weight increased over twenty pounds.

Three Summer Dangers.

Three summer dangers menace the household and traveller at every turn. They are climate, food and water. To guard against them requires vigorous health, abstinence, and SANFORD'S GINGER.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer complaints, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of cholera morbus,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial contagions, and epidemic influences.

As a pure fruit stimulant for the aged, mentally and physically overworked, for delicate females, especially mothers, and as a means of reforming those addicted to an excessive use of alcoholic stimulates, it is invaluable.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists and dealers on those who call for and desire only

ADIEU.

With what sad heart, O love, I say
The words that cause me bitter pain
With what sad heart I go away—
Who knows, shall I return again?
And yet, O love, they must be spoken,
Tho' lives are wrecked and hearts are broken.

And so, adieu, my love, adieu,
Believe me, I can say no more;
My life is full of love for you—
It holds within no other love.
And yet, O love, I say adieu
To keep the world and give up you.

And many a day and many a night,
The heart will ache and tears will blind,
For all my life and its delight
Are in the world I leave behind;
And so, adieu, my love, my own—
I face the bitter world alone!

But you will miss me, will you not?
Mayhap as much as I will you;
'Tis not so easy as you thought
To say "Adieu, my love, adieu!"
For if we stop to count the cost—
Without the one the other's lost!
—George Wilmot Harris in Woman.

The Number of the Stars.

The total number of stars one can see will depend very largely upon the clearness of the atmosphere and the keenness of the eye. There are in the whole celestial sphere about 6,000 stars visible to an ordinarily good eye. Of these, however, we can never see more than a fraction at any one time, because a half of the sphere is always below the horizon. If we could see a star in the horizon as easily as in the zenith, a half of the whole number, or 3,000, would be visible on any clear night. But stars near the horizon are seen through so great a thickness of atmosphere as greatly to obscure their light, and only the brightest ones can there be seen. As a result of this obscuration, it is not likely that more than 3,000 stars can be taken in at a single view by any ordinary eye. About 2,000 other stars are so near the South pole that they never rise in our latitude. Hence, out of 6,000 supposed to be visible, only 4,000 ever come within range of our vision, unless we make a journey towards the equator.—Professor E. S. Holden in The Century.

The Vineyards of France.

The prize of $60,000 offered some years ago by the French government to any one who should invent a remedy for that destructive disease of the vine, phylloxera, has not yet been awarded, although experiments with some of the remedies proposed have yielded encouraging results. The losses caused by this disease are enormous. About one-half of the vineyards of France have been totally destroyed by it. Mr. Roosevelt, our consul at Bordeaux, reports that the loss caused directly by the destruction of vines is thus far $1,440,000,000, to which should be added more than $760,000,000 expended for wine and dried grapes imported to make good the shortage, raising the total loss $2,000,000,000. The value of wine imported into France, to be "doctored" in various ways for use at home and sale abroad as the product of French vineyards, has risen from $1,670,848 in 1875 to $109,000,000 in 1887.—New York Times.

Old Women in Canada.

Another point that has often been impressed upon me is that all the old dowagers in Canada look precisely like Queen Victoria, and this resemblance is augmented by the ugly fashion in which they dress their hair out of compliment to her majesty. There is much more deference in the manner of those in humble walks of life toward their superiors than with us. Polite and civil shop girls are not an effete institution in Canada, nor are respectful servants unknown. The street car conductor, who touches his hat respectfully when you signify your stop to him, was such a surprise to me that I did not recover from the shock for days.—Edith Sessions Tupper.

The Turkish Sultan's Laundry.

The laundry where all the linen from the Dolma Bagtche palace is washed is under the direction of a man, but the work is all done by women. They have no washboards and rub the garments in their hands. They do not boil the clothes at all, and they are white as snow. They wash the clothes through two waters and then pack them tightly in baskets, covering them with towels, which they strew thickly with wood ashes and sliced lemons. Boiling water is then poured over them, and the clothes remain thus all night and in the morning are rinsed and hung out.—New York Herald.

Poison from Lead Pipes.

It is claimed to be proven, beyond all doubt, that water which circulates or stands in leaden pipes or vessels, not only takes up particles of lead through mechanical action due to friction, but attack the metal, the result of this being generally lead carbonate. According to the most eminent authorities in this line, minute quantities of lead thus introduced into and accumulating in the system, must rank among the causes of anæmia and defective nutrition in large towns.—New York Sun.

The Delusion of "Malaria."

Another delusion is malaria, so called. The word malaria means bad air. The diseases that are attributed to this cause are frequently common in districts where there is no stagnant water or anything else to taint the atmosphere. It will be remembered that during the autumn of 1881 there was an unusual number of people who were attacked by these diseases in southwestern and west-central Missouri and also eastern Kansas, when there had been no rains of any consequence for months, and that, too, in districts far removed from decomposing water or any other substance. The cause or causes of these diseases were surely not in the air, consequently should not be attributed to malaria. It is more probable that during the dry, hot weather of summer that the heat that is radiated and the electricity that is generated by the sun have an enervating influence on the system—that from the nerve centers this influence reaches the muscular system, principally through the pneumogastric nerve, and the stomach being the most delicate and intricate of almost any of the involuntary muscles, is the principal sufferer from such enervating influence. Indigestion follows as a symptom, and an increase of bile brings what is called biliousness and malaria.

I hope my medical friends, and I claim many as such, will pardon the presumption on my part of the discussion of a subject that comes more within their province than that of mine. But this conclusion has been forced from observations that reach over a period of many years as a surveyor in the west. I have observed that there were more cases of sickness of this kind during, or immediately after, the season in which there were the greatest number of electric showers or electric disturbances as shown by the surveyor's instruments. I conclude, then, that heat and electricity are the prime causes of "malaria," and that they weaken the stomach and, in a large majority of cases, produce the diseases usually attributed to this cause.

When we consider the patronage of this great office, [the presidency,] the allurements of power, the temptation to retain place once gained, and more than all, the availability a party finds in an incumbent who a horde of office holders, with a zeal born of benefits and fostered by the hope of favors yet to come, stand ready to aid with money and trained political service, we recognize in the eligibility of the president for re-election a most serious danger to that calm, deliberate and intelligent political action, which must characterize a government by the people.—Grover Cleveland.

The Road Healthward Made Easier.

You have been ill, we will suppose, and are convalescing slowly. That is, you are trying to pick up a little flesh, to regain some of your wonted color, to accustom your stomach to more solid nutriment than its recently enfeebled condition permitted you to take. How can you accelerate your snail's pace healthward? We are warranted by concurrent testimony in affirming that if you will use twice or thrice a day Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an enabling medicine of long ascertained purity and tonic virtues, that you will be materially aided. It promotes a flow of the gastric juices, and helps the system to assimilate the nourishment of which it stands so much in need. It remedies a tendency to constipation without convulsing the bowels. The liver it stimulates to renewed activity, safely promotes the action of the kidneys and bladder, and annihilates malaria and rheumatism at the outset.

Hay fever sufferers ought to know of its efficacy. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me as a preventive to hay fever. Have been using it since the 9th of August and have found it a specific for the much dreaded disease. For ten years I have been a great sufferer from August 9th till frost, and have tried many alleged remedies, but Ely's Cream Balm is the only preventive I have ever found. —F. B. Ainsworth, publisher, Indianapolis, Ind.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

To the Delicate and Malarious.

The most incredulous are convinced of the virtues of Aunt Rachael's Malarial Bitters upon a trial of them. Their base is Speer's port wine, with herbs and roots so favorably known to the medical profession and the community at large as the best cure for malaria. They are all that can be desired by the most feeble victims of malaria.

JEWISH FUNERAL CUSTOMS.

Many of Their Most Ancient Rites Still Observed—Peculiar Ceremonies.

In their funeral rites and observances the Jews have preserved many of the most ancient customs of their race. They still rend the upper garments in token of bereavement, as Jacob did when informed of the death of his favorite son; they still seat themselves for seven days on the ground in sign of mourning, as Job and his friends are represented in the Scripture to have done. They still eat the mourners' meal, as their ancestors did in Palestine; they kindle the memorial light to comfort the departed soul, as they did, in all likelihood, ages before Judaism was known; and they still recite in public the mourners' prayer, every repetition of which—according to rabbinical notions—helps the deceased a step further out of purgatory. In the west as in the east these customs are practically the same—we mean among the great bulk of observant Jews. The very wealthy and the more highly cultured members of the synagogue are in these things, as in many others, a law unto themselves.

The Jews rigidly exclude all relatives from the chamber of a dying co-religionist. Only strangers should be present when the soul leaves the body. As soon as death occurs all the vessels in the house containing water are emptied. On the continent, in places where Jews reside, the emptying of the water vessels in the public roadway is the usual mode of notifying that a death has occurred. The practice had its origin, we gather from the rabbinical books, in an Old World superstition that standing water in such circumstances became the abiding place of certain evil spirits whose presence in the house was prejudicial both to the dead and to the living. In the interval between death and interment the Jews lay the corpse upon the bare ground with the feet toward the door. The body is covered, but nothing —saving occasionally a little straw—may be placed under it. Then the two big toes are tied together. On Sabbaths it is not, however, permitted to remove a body on to the floor; it would be work. But as it is sometimes necessary that this should nevertheless be done, rabbinical ingenuity has contrived a means of accomplishing it without violating the sanctity of the day. A loaf of bread is placed upon the corpse, and the two together are lifted to the ground. It is held that only the bread has been moved, and this is permitted on the Sabbath.

Two or three hours before the interment takes place the ceremonial purification of the body known as the tahara takes place. It consists merely in pouring seven definite measures of warm water over the body, while repeating the words: "I will pour upon you cleansing waters, and ye shall be cleansed of your uncleanliness; for of all your iniquities I will purify you." The body is then placed in the coffin attired in a white cotton gown known as a kittel. This kittel is, in northern Europe, presented to a bridegroom by his bride on the day of their wedding, and is worn by him on certain occasions, such as the Day of Atonement and the Passover Eve celebration. It is made by the female relatives of the bride, but she herself must not take part in the sewing of it. In Poland, Galicia, and in Russia the bridegroom always wears the death garment under the wedding canopy during the performance of the marriage ceremony. Besides the kittel, the body is enveloped in the praying scarf or talith used by the deceased during life. When this is done the relatives are summoned. One by one they draw near and bend over the coffin; a friend takes a sharp knife and makes a slit in one of the outer garments of the mourner—on the right side if the deceased be a parent, on the left if a child. The mourner himself then rends the garment, according to the custom of the country. In the east the Jew tears the vestment clean across; in England it is only torn a couple of fingers' breadth. The rent must not be sewn up for a month and the mourning garment must be worn for a parent fully eleven months. The Spanish and Portuguese Jews rend their undergarments as well. Except among the German Jews—as they are called—in this country, the last offices of the dead are performed by the members of what are termed "Chevrah Kadishaw" or "Holy Brotherhood," an organization formed in every orthodox congregation only for this purpose.

Just as near relatives are excluded from the death chamber, so are females prohibited from attending a funeral or interment. Why this should be so it is difficult to say. The custom of excluding women on such occasion is certainly not an ancient one, since we know from the Talmud and later rabbinical books that, of old, women joined in the funeral processions of their people, chanting dirges appropriate to the ceremony. However, nowadays they are not permitted to join, and the obsequies are attended by males only. In Northern Europe and in parts of Russia, a father is not allowed to be present at the interment of the first child he is unfortunate enough to lose. It is believed he will lose a second if he does, though this will not in itself suffice to explain the existence of so strange a custom. The Polish Jews are, however, peculiar in more than this. It is the universal belief of orthodox Hebrews that the resurrection of the dead will take place in the Holy Land, and therefore all bodies will have to make their way underground to Palestine before the day of judgment. So, to facilitate this task, the "Chassidim," or ultra pious of Russia and Poland, put a fork in the hands of the deceased when he is placed in the ground—for coffins are only used in the case of a b'chor (first born) or a kohen (one of priestly family)—in order that he may dig his way through the ground with it and thus reach the Holy Land, where the resurrection takes place.

On leaving a cemetery—which is known as the bethclam, "house of eternity," or beth haim, "house of life"—it is customary to pluck some of the grass growing there and throw it over the shoulder without looking back, repeating the words, "Lila' moveth l' netzach" (he will destroy death forever). Primarily the plucking of the grass had no connection with the formula that now accompanies it; but the original symbolism of the rite is forgotten, like so many of the practices still extant in Jewry.—St. James' Gazette.

Tea Gathering in Ceylon

Tea is getting to be a great product of Ceylon and the export is already 10,000,000 pounds. It is claimed in behalf of this tea that it is cleaner than Chinese or Japanese tea, which is manipulated and adulterated until its quality is considerably deteriorated. In Ceylon coolies pick the tea leaves, which are spread on trays to wither under cover for about a day. The withered leaf is then placed in a rolling machine, driven by power, and rolled for an hour, and during the process the leaves become a moist and twisted mass, out of which the expressed juice freely rolls. The leaves are then placed in trays to ferment or oxydize, during which process they change from a green to a copper color. The subsequent flavor and strength of the tea depend, to a great extent, on the fermentation, which is a chemical process, the success of which is due to the weather.

Firing is the next process. The tea is thinly spread on trays and placed either on charcoal stoves or in large iron drying machines, and at the end of half an hour it is thoroughly crisp and dried and has become tea. The tea is then sized by being passed through sieves of different mesh, giving the varieties of Broken Pekoe, Pekoe, Souchong, Congou and Dust. The first mentioned, which consists chiefly of the opening bud of the leaf, gives the strongest tea; so strong that the other teas are mixed with it. The tea is again slightly fired to drive off any suspicion of moisture, and packed while warm in lead lined boxes.

Ceylon tea may now be bought in the American market. It is extolled for its strength and flavor, and it is said that two pounds of it will go farther than three pounds of Chinese or Japanese tea. It is said to have a fragrance that is peculiarly its own.—Good Housekeeping.

Give Felons Their Labor.

The idea is simply preposterous that the people sent to the penitentiary should live in idleness. They should have the benefit of their labor, and if you give them the benefit of their labor they will turn out as good work as though they were out of the penitentiary. They will have the same reason to do their best. Consequently, poor articles, poorly constructed things, would not come into competition with good articles made by free people outside of the walls.

Now many mechanics are complaining because work done in the penitentiaries is brought into competition with their work. But the only reason that convict work is cheaper is because the poor wretch who does it is robbed. The only reason that the work is poor is because the man who does it has no interest in its being good. If he had the profit of his own labor he would do the best that was in him, and the consequence would be that the wares manufactured in the prisons would be as good as those manufactured elsewhere. For instance, we will say here are three or four men working together. They are all free men. One commits a crime and he is sent to the penitentiary. Is it possible that his companions would object to his being paid for honest work in the penitentiary? —Col. Bob Ingersoll in New York World Interview.

Leaping Salmon of Canada.

The salmon rivers of Canada are all streams of swift currents, whirling rapids and high falls. The salmon seems to make its way up these streams with as much ease as he moves down. One of the sights in the vicinity of Quebec is the salmon leaping at the Falls of Lovette, and during July many persons assemble there to see it. The falls are a succession of steep tumbles, and the water rushes over the rocks with great velocity. The salmon gather at the foot of the lower tumble, and, with marvelous leaps up the very face of the rushing waters, make their way to the smooth water without difficulty, gliding up the swift chutes like a flash and mounting each successive tumble until the grand summit is reached. The Canadian will tell you that when there was no legal interference with spearing, the Indians were in the habit of gathering at the foot of the falls in their birch canoes and casting their spears at the salmon as they leaped up the torrents, making their casts with such marvelous skill that the salmon aimed at was invariably stopped in his vaulting career and fell back impaled by the Indian's cruel barb.—Cor. Philadelphia News.

At the Dinner Table.

The American Anthropologist has positive views that a perfect dinner, thoroughly good in variety, cookery, service, æsthetic appliances, culinary chemistry, roses in winter, ice in summer, and guests with educated palates, is the finest type and expression we have of the highest civilization. "Savages eat when they can get food, and eat as long as the food lasts. Civilization may be traced by the changing hours of refection." That is doubtful, for the rules quoted from the age of Francis I, of France, are better than those now in vogue: "Rise at 5, dine at 9, sup at 5 and couch at 9." The question of grace at meals is traced to the pre-Christian and heathen habit of placating the gods, offering them a share of the food. Herbert Spencer would refer it to the custom of offering a part of each meal to deceased ancestors, and members of the family. Almost all customs extant have secured new meanings since their origin. —Globe-Democrat.

A Spirited American Lady.

I was recently told a good story about a spirited American lady, for whom a titled female friend had undertaken the delicate mission of inviting for her a number of guests to fill her house at Ascot during the races. Among these guests were numbered seven male scions of the British aristocracy. Two of these personages behaved as gentlemen should do, and were all courtesy and amiability to their hostess. The other five acted as the British cad is apt to do under any circumstances, and persistently snubbed the lady under whose roof they were staying. On the return of Mrs. X— to London, she was asked who her guests had been at Ascot. "I had the pleasure of entertaining two gentlemen and five men," was her answer. This reply got abroad, and every one of the seven called upon her afterward to express separately and individually the hope that he had been one of the two gentlemen.—Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

FOR OLD PEOPLE!

In old people the nervous system is weakened, and that must be strengthened. One of the most prominent medical writers of the day, in speaking of the prevalence of rheumatic troubles among the aged, says: "The various pains, rheumatic or other, which old people often complain of, and which materially disturb their comfort, result from disordered nerves." There it is in a nut shell —the medicine for old people must be a nerve tonic. Old people are beset with constipation, flatulency, drowsiness, diarrhœa, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia. These diseases are of nervous origin. Paine's Celery Compound, that great nerve tonic, is almost a specific in these disorders, and by its regulating influence on the liver, bowels, and kidneys, removes the disorders peculiar to old age. Old people find it stimulating to the vital powers, productive of appetite, and a promoter of digestion.

Sold by druggists. $1.00. Six for $5.00. Send for eight-page paper, with many testimonials from nervous, debilitated, and aged people, who bless Paine's Celery Compound.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Another Steamship Disaster.

The coast steamship City of Chester left San Francisco on the morning of Aug. 22d on her regular trip to Eureka, on the northern coast of California, with seventy cabin and twenty-three steerage passengers, and a full cargo. When still in San Francisco bay, just inside the Golden Gate, a dense fog prevailing at the time, she was run down and cut nearly in two by the Occidental & Oriental steamship Oceanic, from Hong Kong and Yokohama, and went down in five minutes after the collision, carrying ten cabin passengers, twenty steerage passengers, the steward of the steamer and two seamen. The Oceanic, and a number of tugs and boats of various kinds, did all that was possible to save the drowning and pick up the dead, but most of them were sucked down by the steamer as she sank in fifty fathoms of water, and did not come to the surface again. The City of Chester was a screw steamer of about 1100 tons gross register, and was built at Chester, Pa., in 1875. The Oceanic is a British steamship of much greater size, and belongs to the heavily subsidized line established by Canada and Great Britain to crush out the American Pacific Mail line.

Terrible Accident.

A large paper mill at Neenah, Wis., took fire at 11:30 o'clock P. M. on the 22d inst. While it was surrounded by people the boilers exploded, shattering to atoms the building, which was of brick and three stories high, and killing eighteen persons, fatally wounding seven, and injuring many others. The money loss was $100,000; insurance $52,000.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Mr. Cleveland demands in effect that there shall be a tariff for revenue purposes only. No tinkering with the tariff will suffice; no readjustment of duties will do. The only reform that common sense can accept of is one which unaffectedly substitutes the principle of unimpeded imports for that of tariff regulations.—London Standard.

It may be admitted that large reductions in the duties on imported manufactured goods would produce great distress in many parts of the United States. The free importation of iron, coal and wool would be a great boom to British producers. * * * If it were accompanied with reductions in the tariff upon cotton, woolen and other manufactures the artisans of this country would derive a marked benefit from it.—The Scotsman.

An English lady who visited America many years ago used to tell the following story: On the voyage she was one day shocked by seeing a ship's officer knock down one of the crew who was inclined to mutiny. So much did the sight affect her that she retreated to her stateroom and did not again appear on deck until land was sighted. Then she perceived at the wheel the man who had received the blow. Approaching him she asked with deep sympathy: "How is your head now?" "West-and-by-nor', ma'am."

WORK FOR IDLE GIRLS.

What Might be Done by the Daughters of Prosperous Parents.

A class of young women generally considered to be in a most enviable position, and whose discontent, where it exists, is considered to be without excuse, have in fact fair cause to be discontented. These are the idle girls of good society; the young women who, after having been well educated and taught to think for themselves—after having had their eyes open to see a certain degree of the truth about social relations and the exigencies of human existences—are condemned to comparative inaction by the assumption on the part of their parents that the proper thing for them to do next is to enjoy life, and that they are fortunate in not being obliged to do any manner of work except that which is involved in this apparently enviable vocation.

These girls have fair cause to be discontented, because, in truth, there has yet been no place made in the world for girls of their class. It is perfectly true that parents who are in prosperous circumstances, and able to provide for their daughters without any help of theirs, have the right to ask of them that, their school education finished, their mental powers well trained, and their especial abilities developed to the point of being able to give and receive pleasure through art, or music, or what not, they should now adorn and enliven their parents' home; and it seems to be an ungracious, not to say ungrateful, thing for such girls to ask for a career, to require to be taught a profession, or to be put at once in the way of some wage earning occupation.

And yet girls of this class, earnest, thoughtful girls, the very girls to delight a father's eyes and to be the comfort of a mother's heart, will persist in just these unreasonable demands. They know, theoretically, the uncertainties of life and of fortune; they know, theoretically, of course, the need of the world for honest workers, and its small need of mere butterfly existences; they know, still theoretically, the bitter woes of a large class of human beings, and the urgent necessity that the world should stir itself up to find a remedy. Why, then, should they be idle, or merely occupied in those social duties which seem so trival, and which are often more laborious than the work they fain would undertake?

The girls are right, and yet their parents are not wrong. Fathers and mothers have a claim upon their daughters for the gentle services which only they can give. They have a right to ask them to beautify their home, to be a center of attraction to their friends, to keep the wheels of social life in motion, to give to their parents the exquisite pleasure of making much of them, and showering gifts and pleasures upon them, and yet the daughters, too, have rights other than those of maintenance and of indulgence, which their parents are bound to respect.

They have the right to ask that, having been trained to think, and having been given the materials for most solemn thought in the knowledge which comes from history, from literature and from political and social science, they shall be allowed to carry thought into action. Though duty forbids them to ask for a career which would sequester them from their home ministry, they have a right to that larger horizon, that broader field of activity which their training has made to them a necessity, and failing which, not merely their mental and moral, but even their physical natures must dwindle.

Such girls as these should be introduced by their parents into philanthropic work. The crying want of the times is for unpaid workers who are trained thinkers, in all branches of work for others. Not only for personal service among the poor—though the need for that is enough to occupy the energies of all the idle girls in our large cities—but for the study of social problems; for the collection of statistics; for writing newspaper articles, magazine articles, tracts and books on special subjects. There is a need of women of leisure and of intelligence and activity to serve upon boards; to visit prisons and jails, and almshouses, and insane asylums, and, since abuses are by no means always the result of indolence or of depravity, but mostly of ignorance, to study into their nature, and to learn by what means a remedy may be found.

One great cause of those difficulties with which society is now grappling, the labor problem and the problem of pauperism, is that while physical science has been making rapid progress, economic science has been almost at a standstill. The study of economics has at last become the imperative duty of every educated man and woman. These women of leisure, these idle girls with their trained mental powers, owe it to their generation and to the world to do all that in them lies to advance, by study and by experiment, the present state of social and economic science.—Frank Leslie's.

Wild Kittens of Paris.

The inhabitants of the quarter in which the institute is situated have for some time past hit upon a curious expedient for getting rid of their superfluous kittens. When night throws her canopy over the scene—the language marches somewhat loftily—they emerge from their abodes with baskets, in which the little creatures have been deposited, wend their way to the Palais Mazarin, and, when no one is looking, turn them loose in the courtyard. The consequence of this maneuver is that at the present moment the attics and cellars of the Temple of Literature, Science and Art are overrun with a whole colony of cats in a wild state, and such alarming dimensions has the nuisance attained that the academicians and the employes who are located in the adjoining buildings have been compelled to post persons to act as sentries and keep watch and ward over the culinary establishments, it having been ascertained from painful experience that these feline creatures have a keen taste for the good things of this life. Meat, fish and a variety of other toothsome edibles have been purloined repeatedly, and for once in a way there has been the fullest evidence that the blame may fairly be laid on "the cat."—Paris Letter.

Many a man can show resignation in a great bereavement whose daily life is in large part devoted to grumbling over the little ills of life.—Christian Inquirer.

Politeness of the Italians.

Their everlastingly praised politeness and good looks is a lot of sentimental gush. They are not good looking and their politeness is all on the surface, consisting of the most profound courtesies and a stereotyped set of nicely turned compliments, but genuine politeness they do not possess. An Italian gallant will allow a woman to climb upon a chair for a book out of reach without the faintest idea of offering his services, but will look on admiringly and be overcharged with pretty expressions about her grace, or he will step before her with unfailing elegance to receive attention at a window where she has been awaiting her turn.—

Pleasant Reading for the Democracy.

That earnest and influential Cleveland organ, the New York Herald, cheers on its party friends as follows:

"Democratic Chairman Barnum is, as we judge from our despatches from Rochester, N. Y., talking a fair amount of nonsense in the western part of the state. 'We have,' he says, 'the republicans on the run.' 'The prohibition movement is growing fast and gets its recruits from the republican party.' 'There is no doubt that the result will be a glorious victory for the democracy.'

Mr. Barnum cannot believe this nonsense or that Mr. Cleveland is to be elected by such drivel. The republicans are not 'on the run.' They began with an agressive campaign, and they are forcing the fighting in every northern state. Wherever we look we see them perfecting their organization. In Congress they have drawn party lines with unscrupulous rigidity, and assail the administration at every point. They are raising money, forming clubs, sending out documents and striving by all means to win.

It is nonsense to except to elect Cleveland by temperance prohibition votes. When it come to close quarters these temperance votes cannot be counted on—assuredly not against Harrison, who has been preaching temperance and running Sunday schools and Bible classes in a Presbyterian church for a generation. The republican leaders understood this when they nominated him.

Mr. Cleveland can and should be reelected president. To do this there must be better democratic leadership than we have yet seen, and there must be an end of this nonsense about republicans being 'on the run,' depending on 'Cleveland's luck' and re-electing the preident by temperance votes.

Thus there was to be a 'solid south' for Cleveland. In Virginia, for instance, Wise and Mahone were to give Virginia to Cleveland by a republican Kilkenny cat arrangement. Now it appears that Field Marshal Quay, with his capacity for silence and in a peculiarly quiet way, has adjusted the Kilkenny cat business, and Virginia is to be fought in every county with a united republican party. West Virginia is to be challenged to the uttermost. Here in New York—where the battle should be fought and may be won—what evidence is there of party energy or enthusiasm? Already the great democratic party, which should be a unit, shows signs of disintegration upon some miserable quarrel about the governorship and mayoralty—miserable 'indeed' when we think of the imperial prize of the presidency, which selfish, purblind politicians may in their folly and greed throw away.

While the republican campaign shows animation the democratic droops and hangs. Instead of clear, resounding words of light and command we have drivel like this from Mr. Barnum. Mr. Cleveland is not to win by the leaders of the democracy mooning in a land of dreams."

A Jewish officer in the Belgian army, by the name of Fix, has just been promoted from the rank of colonel to that of major-general on the general staff. This is the first time that a Jew has been raised to this rank in Belgium. His promotion was urged by a Catholic ministry.

A letter received from Mr. F. W. Boynton, formerly of this city, by relatives here, says he is at Cleburne, Texas, and is employed as a freight brakeman on the Gulf, Colorado & Santa Fe railroad, his run sometimes extending from Cleburne to Purcell, Indian territory, a distance of 408 miles. Before going to Texas he was for a short time in California, and afterward in Colorado. A few days before writing the letter he had what he thinks a very narrow escape from death. His station on the train had been to brake in front, that is, four or five cars from the engine; but the rear brakeman one day got on a tear and was discharged, and Mr. Boynton was sent to take his place at the brake in the caboose, a new hand named Knox being put on at the front. On the first trip after the change, ten cars in the middle of the train, including the one that Knox was on, went down an embankment, and Knox was literally ground to pieces. Mr. Boynton considers that his life was saved by his mate going on a spree.

The house, store and barn of Hon. O. C. Sawyer at North Weare were burned Aug. 22d; loss $8,000; insurance not stated. L. L. Sawyer's shoe shop, near by, was also burned; loss $4,000, with $2,500 insurance.

The republican state convention of West Virginia unanimously nominated Nathan Goff for governor, by acclamation.

The Ward Three Republican caucus will be held in the Spalding schoolhouse at eight o'clock Friday evening, to choose delegates to the several conventions. PER ORDER.

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

In board of Mayor and Aldermen, Thursday evening, Aug. 23d:

Present the full board; Mayor Hodgdon in the chair.

Petitions of Willis E. Myers for a crosswalk on Middle street, and of John J. Pickering for relaying of sidewalk on State treet, were referred to the committee on streets, with power.

The committee to whom was referred F. E. Potter's communication regarding low awnings, recommended that the city marshal be instructed to enforce the ordinance in reference to the matter. Adopted.

Bills to the amount of $1900 were ordered to be paid.

The mayor and Aldermen Urch, Casey and Fletcher were appointed a committee to draft a code of rules and regulations for the government of the board.

George W. W. Gove, Warren O. Lear, Thomas Jones, Daniel Collins, Timothy Hennessey, John Turner and Charles S. Broughton were appointed supernumerary police officers.

The following were appointed assistant engineers of the fire department: George A. Jackson, 1st assistant; Willard M. Gray, Willard J. Sampson, and James F. Shannon.

Health officers: Dr. H. F. Clark, John J. Grogan, Joseph C. Muchmore and William Hampshire.

Superintendents of burying grounds: Michal J. Griffin, of the North and Cotton's; John S. Wendell, of the Pleasant street and Point of Graves grounds.

An ordinance sent up from the common council, providing for raising funds for building two schoolhouses, was read twice under suspension of the rules, and laid on the table.

Adjourned for one week.

In Common Council, President Sullivan in the chair: The question of providing better accommodations for the public schools was discussed at some length, the committee to whom the matter was referred at the previous meeting having reported the following bill:

Be it ordained by the City Councils of the City of Portsmouth:

That a committee of four members of this council, together with a like committee of the board of mayor and aldermen, of whom the mayor shall be one, be appointed, and that said committee when so constituted, be and are hereby authorized to prepare and negotiate credits or bonds of the city, to an amount not exceeding fifty thousand dollars, said bonds to be issued for such length of time, and to bear such rate of interest, as will be consistent with the best interests of the city, and the amount so realized from the sale of said bonds shall be and is hereby appropriated for the purchase of two or more suitable lots, and the erection thereon of two or more substantial brick and stone school buildings, whose aggregate seating capacity shall be four or five hundred pupils.

This bill was read twice and passed under suspension of the rules, and sent up for concurrence.

Adjourned.

DR. WEED'S CASE.

The trial of Dr. George F. Weed, formerly of this city, now of Newport, Me., charged with complicity in the robbery of Peter Bennett of Newport, commenced at Bangor on Wednesday, the 22d inst. A number of witnesses testified as to matters at Bennett's house after the robbery, including Weed's arrival there after another doctor had commenced dressing Bennett's wounds.

The prosecution offered in evidence a telegram received June 27th, 1887, by the station agent and operator at Newport, addressed to Weed; the prosecution objected, and the court reserved decision on the point.

Clarence Whitney, one of the men convicted on his own confession of the robbery was put on the stand, and relates the story previously published in regard to the part taken by Weed in planning and carrying out the robbery. His cross examination was not concluded when the court adjourned for the day.

MUSIC HALL.

Thursday evening the Moulton Comedy Co. gave a langhable rendition of the new farcical comedy "Hunt's Remedy," Mr. Jay Hunt making a hit in impersonation of the doctor. To-night the company present the thrilling melodrama "Life in the Metropolis; or the Dark Side of a City," and close their engagement in this city Saturday (matinee and evening) with "Rip Van Winkle."

POLICE COURT---BATCHELDER J.

THURSDAY, Aug. 23d.

Richard Preston, for an assault on Joseph McPhee, was fined $5, costs $11.-83, which was paid.

FIRE.

The alarm of fire from box fourteen, corner of Russell and Market street, s about half-past two o'clock Thursday afternoon, was occasioned by a light blaze on the roof of a shed situated on Green street, nera the railroad track, and owned by Thomas E. Call. The blaze was extinguished without much damage. It is supposed the fire caught from sparks from the Concord shifter.

ACCIDENTAL.

As Dr. Ed. S. Fay was driving down State street, Thursday morning, when near Fleet street a horse attached to a country wagon, and standing at the side of the street, suddenly backed the wagon into the roadway in such manner that Dr. Fay's carriage was struck and overturned. The doctor held on to the reins and was dragged a short distance, when he let go, but the horse was easily stopped a short distance down the street. The carriage was but little damaged, and the horse and driver were unhurt.

Charles P. Storer was fatally injured in Biddeford on Wednesday evening, the 22d inst. He was driving at a rapid pace across the iron bridge on South street, when the carriage struck some part of the bridge, and he was thrown out and had his skull fractured. He was well known to horse men in this city, and a number of years ago, before hore racing at the Rockingham trotting park was given up, lived for some time in the house at the park, and had charge of the grounds.

BASE BALL.

The Portsmouth club went to Lowell on Thursday, and got warmed to the tune of seven to one. This probably tended to comfort the Worcesters for the roasting they received the previous day from the Portsmouths.

The Lowells will play the Portsmouths on the South street grounds this afternoon.

MARITIME NOTES.

The steamer Oceanic on her Thursday morning trip to the Shoals was crowded to her full capacity.

Among the charters reported Aug. 22d was that of the schooner Mary Langdon, with 500 barrels of oil from this port to Boston, at seventeen cents.

Thec schooner Active, of this port, 264 tons register, Frisbee master, with a load of stone, was caught in the gale on the night of the 21st inst., and had her foremast, jibboom, bowsprit and wheel carried away, and was otherwise much damaged. She was towed into Truro harbor, Mass., by the fishing schooner Nannie Waterman, of Wellfleet, which vessel picked up Capt. Frisbee and his crew after they had been adrift from the Active five hours, they having taken to the boat after the foremast went, and hung astern of the schooner until the line parted. She was from St. George for New York, and arrived at Truro on the morning of the 23d.

The fishing schooner Albert Woodbury, of this port, Downs master, carried away one of her mastheads in the gale of the 21st, and put into Gloucester. A letter from Capt. Levi Downs, of the schooner Agnes E. Downs, written at Gloucester, says that of the big fleet of fishing vessels which ran in there on the 22d nearly every one had received damage to masts, booms, sails or in other ways, and many had lost boats. Many fishermen also put into Provincetown with sails split, spars broken or seine boats gone.

The training ship Saratoga, Lieut. Everett commanding, arrived at an anchorage in the lower harbor in the evening on the 22d inst., and will be towed up to the navy yard by the Leyden this forenoon.

The sloop Favorite, of New London, Conn., was dismasted and sunk off Montauk early in the gale on the evening of the 21st inst. The crew of three men took to their boat, and after drifting for twenty-four hours were picked up by the revenue steamer U. S. Grant.

The schooner Earl P. Mason, with 700 tons of coal, from Newport News, Va., for Boston, went ashore on the rocks near Point Judith during the storm on the night of Aug 21st, and is a total wreck. Crew saved.

William Powell and Harry Kimball one night recently took over fifty lobsters, all good sized and solid, near the buoy off Noble's island, and sold their catch for $2.76. The last lobsters of the season will be boiled to-day at most of the markets here, the close time commencing on the 25th.

The September number of Harper's Magazine has an illustrated sketch entitled "Two Montana Cities," by Edwards Roberts. The best article which has appeared of late, of which Mr. Roberts is the author, is a fine boy, born recently at Kelp Rock cottage in Newcastle, now occupied by the little stranger and his parents,—an excellent spot whereon to begin the world.

Mr. Robert A. Stott, of the Portsmouth police force, has been called upon for duty as an officer at the state encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic department of New Hampshire, at the Weirs Mr. Stott has before occupied the same position.

Landlord Safford of the Pepperrell house, Kittery Point, was in town on Thursday, and reports the hotels at the point as either filled or well occupied. The Pepperell was kept open last year through September, and will so continue this year, or longer if the weather should be propitious.

The Biddeford and Saco school boards have voted to introduce the normal music system into the schools the coming year, and Miss Grace E. Corliss, who has taught music in the schools of Ware, Mass., the past two years, has been engaged as teacher. She will give instruction in the schools of both cities throughout the year.

The First Symptoms

Of all Lung diseases are much the same: feverishness, loss of appetite, sore throat, pains in the chest and back, headache, etc. In a few days you may be well, or, on the other hand, you may be down with Pneumonia or "galloping Consumption." Run no risks, but begin immediately to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

Several years ago, James Birchard, of Danbury, Conn., was severely ill. The doctors said he was in Consumption, and that they could do nothing for him, but advised him, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine, two or three months, he was pronounced a well man. His health remains good to the present day.

J. S. Bradley, Malden, Mass., writes: "Three winters ago I took a severe cold, which rapidly developed into Bronchitis and Consumption. I was so weak that I could not sit up, was much emaciated, and coughed incessantly. I consulted several doctors, but they were powerless, and all agreed that I was in Consumption. At last, a friend brought me a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. From the first dose, I found relief. Two bottles cured me, and my health has since been perfect."

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,
PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Three Summer Dangers.

Three summer dangers menace the household and traveller at every turn. They are climate, food and water. To guard against them requires vigilance, abstinence, and SANFORD'S GINGER.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer complaints, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of cholera morbus,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

As a pure fruit stimulant for the aged, mentally and physically overworked, for delicate females, especially mothers, and as a means of reforming those addicted to an excessive use of alcoholic stimulates, it is invaluable.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists and dealers on those who call for and desire only

LICENSE YOUR DOGS.

SECTION 1. No dog shall be permitted to go at large or loose in this city until the owner or keeper of such dog, or the keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall have procured from the city marshal a license for such dog.

SECTION 5. It shall be the duty of the city marshal to cause all dogs to be killed which shall be found at large or loose within the city without a collar marked as required by law, and to cause all dogs so killed to be buried, and any person may lawfully kill any dog found within the limits of this city going at large contrary to the provisions of this chapter.

SECTION 6. In case any dog shall be found loose or going at large contrary to any of the foregoing provisions, or in case any dog not licensed shall be provided with a collar marked as required in this ordinance, the owner or keeper thereof or the head of the family or keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall upon conviction thereof be fined five dollars.

The above extracts from the city ordinances of the city will be strictly enforced.

HOW GRANITE IS POLISHED.

Putting a Smooth Surface on the Hard Stone—Methods in Detail.

The form is given to the stone by the hands of skilled masons, in much the same way as is done with other stones of softer nature. Of course the time required is considerably greater in the case of granite as compared with other stones.

If the surface is not to be polished, but only fine axed, as it is called, that is done by the use of a hammer composed of a number of slips of steel of about a sixteenth of an inch thick, which are tightly bound together, the edges being placed on the same plane. With this tool the workman smooths the surface of the stone by a series of taps or blows given at a right angle to the surface operated upon. By this means the marks of the blows as given obliquely on the surface of the stone are obliterated and a smooth face produced.

Polishing is performed by rubbing in the first place with an iron tool and with sand and water. Emery is next applied, then putty with flannel. All plain surface and molding can be done by machinery, but all carvings, or surfaces broken into, small portions of various elevations, are done by the hands of the patient hand polishers.

The operation of sawing a block of granite into slabs for panels, tables or chimney pieces is a very slow process, the rate of progress being about half an inch per day of ten hours. The machines employed are few and simple. They are technically called lathes, wagons and pendulums or rubbers. The lathes are employed for the polishing of columns, the wagons for flat surface, and the pendulums for molding and such flat work as is not suitable for the wagon.

In the lathes the column is placed and supported at each end by points, upon which it revolves. On the upper surface of the column there are laid pieces of iron, segments of the circumference of the column. The weight of these pieces of iron lying upon the column, and the constant supply by the lathe attendant of sand and water, emery or putty, according to the state of finish to which the column has been brought, constitute the whole operation.

While sand is used during the rougher state of the process, these irons are bare, but when using emery and putty the surface of the iron next to the stone is covered with thick flannel.

The wagon is a carriage running upon rails, in which the pieces of stone to be polished are fixed, having uppermost the surface to be operated upon. Above this surface there are shafts placed perpendicularly, on the lower end of which are fixed rings of iron. These rings rest upon the stone, and when the shaft revolves they rub the surface of the stone. At the same time the wagon travels backward and forward upon the rails, so as to expose the whole surface of the same to the action of the rings.

The pendulum is a frame hung upon hinges from the room of the work shop. To this frame are attached iron rods, moving in a horizontal direction. In the line upon which these rods move, and under them, the stone is firmly placed upon the floor. Pieces of iron are then loosely attached to the rods and allowed to rest upon the surface of the stone. When the whole is set in motion, these irons are dragged backward and forward over the surface of the stone, and so it is polished.

When polishing plain surfaces, such as the needle of an obelisk, the pieces of iron are flat, but when we have to polish a molding we make an extra pattern of its form and the irons are cast from that pattern.—Stone Mason, England.

South America's Tall Volcano.

Cotopaxi is the loftiest of active volcanoes, but is slumbering now. The only evidences of action are the frequent rumblings that can be heard for a hundred miles, and the cloud of smoke by day and the pillar of fire by night, which constantly arise from a crater that is more than 3,000 feet beyond the reach of man. Many have attempted to climb the monster, but the walls are so steep and the snow is so deep that the ascent is impossible, even with scaling ladders.

On the southern slope of Cotopaxi is a great rock, more than 2,000 feet high, called "the Inca's Head." Tradition says that it was once the summit of the volcano, and fell on the day when Atahualpa was strangled by the Spaniards. Those who have seen Vesuvius can judge of the grandeur of Cotopaxi if they can imagine a volcano 15,000 feet higher, spurting flames and lava from a crest covered with 3,000 feet of snow, with a voice that has been heard 600 miles. And one can judge of the grandeur of scenery on the road to Quito if he can imagine twenty of the highest mountains in America, three of them active volcanoes, standing along the road from Washington to New York. —American Magazine.

Gladstone Fifty Years Ago.

The following is a description of Gladstone, published in a London paper of 1838, the date of his marriage: "Mr. Gladstone's appearance and manners are much in his favor. He is a fine looking man. He is about the usual height and of good figure. His countenance is mild and pleasant, and he has a highly intellectual expression. His eyes are clear and quick; his eyebrows are dark and rather prominent. There is no dandy in the house but envies what Truft would call his fine head of jet black hair. It is always carefully parted from his crown downward to his brow, where it is carefully shaded. His features are small and regular, and his complexion must be a very unworthy witness if he does not possess abundant good health."—New York Commercial Advertiser.

A Wall Street Career.

The average length of a Wall street career is said to be ten years. In that time the means or vital energies of most men are consumed in the furnaces of speculation. The number of those who hold out twenty years is few, and fewer still the number who can bear the excitement for a longer period.—Chicago Herald.

Must Be Rescued Grammatically.

He was rescuing her from the billowy waves, but it looked as if they might never see Boston again.

"Hold on tight, Penelope," he gasped, "hold on tight."

"Don't say hold on tight," gurgled the girl, with her mouth full of Atlantic ocean; "say hold on tightly."—Utica Observer.

The money used to relieve the poor in London is said to amount to over $15,000,000 a year.

The eyes are the windows of the soul. Alas! too many tenements are empty.—Martha's Vineyard Herald.

Puget sound fir is taking the place of walnut, ash and mahogany for fine car work.

When we consider the patronage of this great office, [the presidency,] the allurements of power, the temptation to retain place once gained, and more than all, the availability a party finds in an incumbent whom a horde of office holders, with a zeal born of benefits and fostered by the hope of favors yet to come, stand ready to aid with money and trained political service, we recognize in the eligibility of the president for re-election a most serious danger to that calm, deliberate and intelligent political action, which must characterize a government by the people.—Grover Cleveland.

The Road Healthward Made Easier.

You have been ill, we will suppose, and are convalescing slowly. That is, you are trying to pick up a little flesh, to regain some of your wonted color, to accustom your stomach to more solid nutriment than its recently enfeebled condition permitted you to take. How can you accelerate your snail's pace healthward? We are warranted by concurrent testimony in affirming that if you will use twice or thrice a day Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an enabling medicine of long ascertained purity and tonic virtues, that you will be materially aided. It promotes a flow of the gastric juices, and helps the system to assimilate the nourishment of which it stands so much in need. It remedies a tendency to constipation without convulsing the bowels. The liver it stimulates to renewed activity, safely promotes the action of the kidneys and bladder, and annihilates malaria and rheumatism at the outset.

Crude petroleum is being sent from Lima, Ohio, to Chicago, Ill., by means of pipes.

Hay fever sufferers ought to know of its efficacy. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me as a preventive to hay fever. Have been using it since the 9th of August and have found it a specific for that much dreaded disease. For ten years I have been a great sufferer from August 9th till frost, and have tried many alleged remedies, but Ely's Cream Balm is the only preventive I have ever found. —F. B. Ainsworth, publisher, Indianapolis, Ind.

At Aurora, Ill., Rev. J. G. Cooper burned his house with the intention of cremating his wife and daughter, but they escaped. He then hanged himself.

A Peculiarity of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that while it purifies the blood, it imparts new vigor to every function of the body.

At Onancock creek, Va., three colored roughs savagely assaulted a colored picnic party, and were nearly cut to pieces.

If you desire to possess a beautiful complexion take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It cleanses and purifies the blood, and removes blotches and pimples, making the skin smooth and clear, and giving it a bright and healthy appearance. Take it this month.

To the Delicate and Malarious.

The most incredulous are convinced of the virtues of Aunt Rachael's Malarial Bitters upon a trial of them. Their base is Speer's port wine, with herbs and roots so favorably known to the medical profession and the community at large as the best cure for malaria. They are all that can be desired by the most feeble victims of malaria.

New South Wales has the population of New Jersey and the territory of Texas and California. It needs railroads, but in Australia instead of giving land to corporations the state borrows the money and owns the roads. This year New South Wales raises $55,000,000 in bonds and builds 1800 miles of railroad. Australian cities, in like manner, build and own their horse-car lines, and before many years will be debt and tax free.

A Scrofulous Taint.

"What a very humorous boy your Arthur is, Mrs. Goodly. Wit and humor seem to sparkle in every glance of his eyes." "O dear, doctor, you don't think it is scrofulous humor, do you? I always thought there was a scrofulous taint in his blood: he took it from his grandmother. But if it gets into his eyes, O, dear! O, dear! what shall I do? —and he so loves to study, too. What remedy would you advise doctor!" Abstractedly, and from mere force of habit the doctor said, "Ingalls' Mandrake Compound is the best remedy I know of for humors of all kinds."

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. IN A CONNING TOWER.

What One Man's Hand Controls on Board of a Man o' War.

Here in this spot is concentrated the whole power of the tremendous machine which we call an ironclad ship.

Such power was never till the world began concentrated under the direction of man, and all that power, the judgment to direct it, the knowledge to utilize it, is placed in the hands of one man, and one only.

What is this power?

Talk of Jove with his thunderbolts, of Nasmyth with his hammer! the fables of mythology and the facts of latter day science! where has there ever been anything to compare to it? Here in the conning tower stands the captain of the ship, and beneath his feet lie hidden powers which the mind can scarcely grasp, but which one and all are made subservient to his will, and his will alone. Picture him as he stands at his post before the battle begins: all is quiet enough, there is scarcely a sound save the lapping of the water against the smooth white sides of the ironclad, and no outward sign of force save the ripple of the parted waters falling off on either side of the ram as it sheers through the water. But mark that thin white thread escaping from the steam pipe astern, a fleecy vapor rising into the air and nothing more.

But what does it mean? It means that far down below some thirty glowing furnaces are roaring under the blast of steam; that in the great cylindrical boilers the water is bubbling, surging, struggling, as the fierce burning gases pass through the flues; and that the prisoned steam, tearing and thrusting at the tough sides of the boilers, is already raising the valves and blowing off at a pressure of 100 pounds. It means that the captain in his cunning tower has but to press the button by his side, and in a moment the four great engines will be driving the twin screws through the water with the force of 12,000 horse power, and that the great ship with the dead weight of 12,000 tons will be rushing onward at a speed of over twenty miles an hour.

In her turret and in her broadside batteries there is a deep hush of expectation; but there, too, waiting to respond to the "flash of the will that can," lie forces of destruction, which appal the imagination.

Far down below our feet, in the chambers of the great guns, lie the dark masses of the powder charges. A touch, a spark, and in a sheet of flame, and with the crash of thunder the steel shot will rush from their muzzles, speeding on their way 2,000 feet in a second, and dealing their blow with the impact of 60,000 foot tons—5,000 pounds weight of metal discharged by one touch of the captain's hand. Nor is this all; another touch and another signal will liberate the little clips which detain the four Whitehead torpedoes in their tubes. A puff of powder, a click as the machinery is started, and the two screws are set off whirling, and with a straight, silent plunge the long steer torpedoes will dive into the water, and at their appointed depth will speed on their way thirty miles an hour on their awful errand of destruction. Move that switch, and through the dark wall of the night a long straight beam will shoot forth with the radiance of 40,000 candles, turning the night into day.

A word spoken through that tube will let loose the hailstorm of steel and lead from the quick firing and machine guns on the upper deck and in the tops. A discharge of shot and shell, not to be counted by tens or scores, but by hundreds and thousands, a storm before which no living thing can stand, and under which all but the strongest defenses will wither and melt away like a snow bank under an April shower.

And last and most terrible of all, there is one other force ready to the captain's hand—a force the sum of all others, and which, if rightly utilized, is as irresistible as the swelling of the ocean tide or the hand of death. By your side and under your hand are the spokes of the steam steering wheel; far forward under the swirling wave which rises round the ship's cut water lies the ram, the most terrible, the most fatal of all the engines of maritime warfare. It is the task of the hand which turns that little wheel to guide and to direct the fearful impact of the ram.

Think what the power confined to one man's hand must be; 12,000 tons of dead weight driven forward by the frantic energy of 12,000 horse power, plunging and surging along through the yielding waves at a speed of ten feet every second, and with a momentum so huge that the mathematical expression which purports to represent it to the mind conveys no idea to an intelligence incapable of appreciating a conception so vast. To receive a blow from the ram is death, the irretrievable catastrophe of a ship's career. To deliver such a blow is certain victory. It is with the captain, and the captain alone, as he stands here in the conning tower, that the responsibility of inflicting or encountering this awful fate lies.

Now you will understand what I mean when I say that never since the world began have such forces been placed in the hands of a single man, whose eye alone must see the opportunity, whose judgment alone must enable him to utilize it, and whose hand alone must give effect to all that his courage, his wisdom and his duty prompt.—Murray's Magazine.

Our Sweetness of Disposition.

The London Times, summing up the reunion of the blue and the gray at Gettysburg, says: "In the last twenty-five years the American people must, as a whole, have learnt the art of training itself to an extraordinary sweetness of disposition, which it is no offense to say that individuals of the race do not invariably exhibit. If the secret be in any wise communicable, there are several quarters of Europe on which America would confer an inestimable kindness by imparting it."—Boston Transcript.

Technical Education in Trades.

The matter of technical education in trades, with a view to starting young men in the world in some profitable occupation without the intervention of a long and poorly paid apprenticeship, is receiving earnest attention from educational men all over the world. Several prominent Englishmen have declared themselves in favor of such institutions and a number of government technical schools in France are meeting with great success.—Chicago News.

Marriages of First Cousins.

But let us go a step further. Immediately after the Noachian deluge the marriages of first cousins formed the remotest degree of kindred available for such intercourse, even if the respective distances (see Genesis, ch. 10) and insuperable difficulties of communication and locomotion between the members of the only remaining family, scattered throughout the recently submerged world, did not necessarily involve a resort to the natural law of the first family, and were but one remove from the primitive law of nature. It was not until the lapse of many generations after the traditional history of the flood that Moses issued his Levitical decrees to restrain the licentiousness that was creating confusion in that social organization which had supplanted primitive simplicity. Such prohibitions are not confined to cases of consanguinity, though the prohibited intercourse undoubtedly includes "any that are near of kin," which may well embrace first cousins. The catalogue extends to degrees of affinity.

The vulgar error that both mental and physical deterioration of progeny is the result of consanguineous alliances, though long since exploded by the scientific portion of the medical profession, arose from arguing from a foregone conclusion to the premises, instead of from the premises to their legitimate conclusion. If it were otherwise, the race must have deteriorated from the very beginning; whereas, on the contrary, it is well known that by the law of nature the purity of a stock is maintained by breeding in and in, although to obtain certain foreign characteristics it is sometimes desirable to cross it with another. No doubt any specific acquired disease in a family would be intensified by the intermarriage of its members, but there is no record of any physical or mental infirmity, in the early ages of mankind, resulting from consanguineous alliances. The Levitical prohibitions were directed against a prevalent social and moral evil, sapping the purity of the domestic hearth, rather than a physiological one, affecting the sanitary condition of the world.—Hugh Weightman in New York Sun.

Ladies at the Dentist's.

According to experiments of most dentists, ladies are by far the bravest and most considerate patients. While not able to bear as much physical pain as mankind generally, they make up in force of will power and self control, and thus endure the trying ordeal without fainting or hysteria. They may suffer a shriek of pain to escape them, but they bravely hold their ground until the tooth is extracted. A young lady entered a dentist's establishment accompanied by her mother. She was suffering with a severe toothache. She was desirous of attending a party in the evening, however, and wanted some relief. An examination of the tooth proved the impossibility of saving it, and its extraction was suggested. "Very well," submissively replied the young lady. The head was thrown back, the pretty lips were parted, the forceps were inserted. A shrill scream pierced the air, but in another instant the young lady was smiling through her tears, and the dentist triumphantly held the emaciated tooth before her. Her toothache was gone and she could attend the party in the evening.

"A man would have carried that tooth around with him for a week," said the dentist, "before he would have mustered up courage enough to have it out, and he would have suffered the tortures of the damned before he would submit to the almost instantaneous operation of extraction. That's the difference between the sexes."—Chicago Herald.

The Need of Arm Exercise.

Walking on an even surface, the only variety of physical exercise which most business and professional men get in town, is well known to be a poor substitute for arm exertion. The reason is partially plain, since walking is almost automatic and involuntary. The walking mechanism is set in motion as we would turn an hour glass, and requires little attention, much less volition and separate discharges of force from the brain surface with each muscular contraction, as is the case with a great variety of arm movements.

The arm user is a higher animal than the leg user. Arm motions are more nearly associated with mental action than leg movements. A man's lower limbs merely carry his higher centers to his food or work. The latter must be executed with his arms and hands.

A third way in which arm exercise benefits the organism is through the nervous system. Whether this is due to an increased supply of richer, purer blood, or whether the continual discharge of motor impulses in some way stores up another variety of force, we do not know. One thing is certain, the victim of neurasthena is very seldom an individual who daily uses his arms for muscular work; with this, the limit of hurtful mental work is seldom reached.—Walter B. Platt, M. D., in Popular Science Monthly.

Flowers of French Landscape.

French scenery between Boulogne and Amiens is not particularly interesting, excepting when the fields are gay with flowers. The landscape presents a great variety of bright colors, poppies and corn flowers appearing to contribute more than a full share. The growing wheat is brilliantly lighted by them, much to the annoyance of the farmers, we think. According to the papers, French farmers could earn nothing at the present prices of their produce, even if taxes were nowhere. Sowing and reaping seems to be a worse business here than in England, and far worse than in the eastern and middle states of America, whence come so many complaints.—J. H. Cowperthwaite in New York Star.

His Pipe Drew the Lightning.

"You had better take that pipe out of your mouth, it will draw lightning," said a colored man near Acree, as Nellie Brown, the colored cook, was smoking her pipe in the door. Instantly, there was a blinding flash and Nellie fell dead. The lightning struck her on the top of the head, and then descended, tearing away her left breast as if cut off with a knife. Her clothes were burned off. She was the sister of Jordan Harris, a noted colored preacher. The colored people believe the pipe drew the lightning.—Atlanta Constitution.

FOR OLD PEOPLE!

In old people the nervous system is weakened, and that must be strengthened. One of the most prominent medical writers of the day, in speaking of the prevalence of rheumatic troubles among the aged, says: "The various pains, rheumatic or other, which old people often complain of, and which materially disturb their comfort, result from disordered nerves." There it is in a nut shell —the medicine for old people must be a nerve tonic. Old people are beset with constipation, flatulency, drowsiness, diarrhœa, indigestion, rheumatism, neuralgia. These diseases are of nervous origin. Paine's Celery Compound, that great nerve tonic, is almost a specific for these disorders, and by its regulating influence on the liver, bowels, and kidneys, removes the disorders peculiar to old age. Old people find it stimulating to the vital powers, productive of appetite, and a promoter of digestion.

Sold by druggists. $1.00. Six for $5.00. Send for eight-page paper, with many testimonials from nervous, debilitated, and aged people, who bless Paine's Celery Compound.

TRADE S.S.S. MARK FOR THE BLOOD

No Mercury, No Potash, Or any other Mineral Poison.

It is Nature's Remedy, made exclusively from Roots and Herbs.

It is perfectly Harmless.

It is the only remedy known to the world that has ever yet Cured contagious Blood Poison in all its stages.

It cures Mercurial Rheumatism, Cancer, Scrofula, and other blood diseases heretofore considered incurable. It cures any disease caused from impure blood. It is now prescribed by thousands of the best physicians in the United States, as a tonic. We append the statement of a few:

"I have used S. S. S. on patients convalescing from fever and from measles with the best results. J. N. CHENEY, M. D. Hiawville, Ga."

BERNEN, GA.—Willie White was afflicted with scrofula seven years. I prescribed S. S. S., and to-day he is a fat and robust boy. G. W. PARKER, M. D.

RICHMOND, VA., Dec. 15, 1883.—I have taken three bottles of Swift's Specific for secondary blood poison. It acts much better than potash or any other remedy I have ever used. S. F. WHITFIELD, M. D., Formerly of Sussex Co., Va.

DR. N. J. HALE, the well-known druggist and physician, of Nashville, Howard County, Ark., writes: "Having some knowledge as to what S. S. S. is composed of, I can safely recommend it as the remedy for all skin diseases, it matters not what the name may be."

We have a book giving a history of this wonderful remedy, and its cures, from all over the world, which will convince you that all we say is true, and which we will mail free on application. No family should be without it. We have another on Contagious Blood Poison, sent on same terms.

Write us a history of your case, and our Physician will advise with you by letter, in strictest confidence. We will not deceive you knowingly.

For sale by all druggists.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Another Message.

President Cleveland on the 23d inst. sent to Congress another message, asking that he be authorized to deny Canada the privilege of transmitting goods through the United States in bond, in retaliation for the "intolerable pretensions" and "overreaching spirit" of the Canadians. This is of course his answer to the senate for rejecting the Bayard fishery treaty, and its language is in strong contrast with that which the administration's defenders have been using toward the Canadians.

President Cleveland was given power to retaliate in kind on Canada for unfriendly acts, a year and and a half ago; this was all that was desired by the great majority of the people, and no such extreme measure as that now proposed by him has been asked for by the most ardent friends of the fishery interests. The power given him he has not used; it is not all likely that he expects to have the extreme power he asks for granted, nor that he would use it were it granted.

There is nothing in the rejection of the treaty, or its probable results, to warrant the president's lofty indignation and theatrical outburst against Canada. It is simply a bid for votes from the sea-coast voters, an attempt to throw off the record of the administration on the fishery question; and it will fail to effect the end sought.

How He Thought Free Trade Would Work.

As the present presidential contest is a square fight between protection on the one side and free trade on the other, an exchange suggests that it is well to keep before the people the frank and candid statements made by General Dick Taylor, one of the ablest men—though far from being one of the ablest generals—in the late rebel army, in an article explaining the defeat of the rebellion. Said he:

"We made two great mistakes. Had we avoided them we should have conquered you. The first was we did not substantially destroy the protective features of the tariff in the winter session of 1857 and 1858, by an act which provided a rapid sliding scale to free trade. * * * We could have passed such a law and held it tight on you till it closed the furnaces, workshops, woollen and cotton mills, and steel and bar-iron wroks of the whole north and west, and scattered your workmen over the prairies and territories. When the war was ready for you, you would not have been ready for the war. You could not have armed and equipped and put into the field a large army, nor built a large navy. You would have been without supplies, machinery and workmen, and you would have been without money and credit."

William Day, Frank Trafton and Henry Phillippine are held on the verdict of the coroner's jury, for the cowardly murder of Mrs. Howes at Andover, N. B. They are all well known as lawless characters.

A registered letter containing $10,000, sent from Portland, Oregon, to the Chemical national bank of New York, has been stolen. About a year ago a $10,000 package from the same place to the same bank was stolen by a clerk in the New York post-office, who is now in

LETHE.

Lo! like a water spirit in her car,
Even as Undine or the Lorelei,
We float in a dim river, you and I,
Seeing but faintly sun or moon or star;
And we shall never pierce its wind vexed bar
Into the open glory of the sky,
But tho' so near, shall never be more nigh
Till past all wondering where or what we are.

For this stream is called Lethe, and when we Break from the crystal bondage of our shell
Whose bubble strength and beauty's miracle
Save for our frailty now would set us free,
The Past and Future are Oblivion's free
For loosing us from Life's unquiet spell.

—Moreley Roberts in English Illustrated Magazine.

Seeds of Various Weeds.

Recent investigation made by collecting a large number of seed vessels of various species of weeds, counting the contained seeds and then averaging the results, brings the most surprising figures. The average yield of the sandbur is 2,800 seeds; of the ground cherry, 6,000; of the horse nettle, 1,200; of the cocklebur, 2,000; while the hull of the Santa Fe nettle furnishes 20,000 seeds; the jimson weed, 100,000; the foxtail, 14,000; the pungent meadow grass, 150,000; the tumble weed, 150,000, and the common pig weed or goosefoot sprinkles an average of 200,000 seeds to the plant each season. These numbers represent averages, and are, of course, much exceeded by individuals of the various species named.—Boston Budget.

Strange Things Brought Up.

Some strange things were brought up from the earth while drilling wells near Albany, Ga. White pine logs were brought up from a depth of 700 feet. Mr. Merritt, at a depth of twenty-seven feet, dug through a mass of seven feet of petrified bones. They were thigh bones, ribs, finger bones, teeth, and with these remains of some forgotten race, immense bones of animals now extinct. A Mr. Bowles, in digging out for a mill foundation, came upon the shore of an ancient ocean. This sand showed the ripples from the waves, and was covered with marine remains, shells, sharks' teeth and bones of deep sea monsters.—Chicago Herald.

The Roads About Buenos Ayres.

In dry weather they are inches deep in dust, and when heavy rain comes on, they are a deep sea of liquid mud. Until one has seen the extraordinary way in which these earth roads convert themselves into absolute bogs, one cannot fully appreciate how realistic is the story of the man who, picking his way along one of these mudways, saw a hat apparently floating on the surface.

He kicked it with his foot, and was surprised to hear a gruff voice from underneath say, "Leave my hat alone!"

"Who are you?"

"Who am I? Why, I'm the conductor on the top of an omnibus."—"Zephyrs."

A Definition of Gluttony.

"Gluttony," says the Shepherd in Wilson's "Noctes Ambrosianæ," "may be defined as an immoral and unintellectual abandonment of the sowl o' man to his gustative nature. I defy a brute animal to be a glutton, A swine's no a glutton. Nae creatur but man can be a glutton. All the rest are prevented by the definition." Not much fault can be found with this definition of gluttony, except in one rather important particular—that the craving for food is not always prompted by the desire to indulge the palate, but is caused by what is virtually a disease.—New Orleans Picayune.

Light in the Dark Continent.

In tracing the gradual opening up of the African continent, during the last hundred years, Dr. Supan finds that the days of pioneer exploration are not yet over. A few patches of the surface have been surveyed with some care; of others we have a general knowledge, and in others lines of travel have been run through, but there are still great regions—as in parts of the long traveled Sahara even—that are an absolute blank to civilized man.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Grumbling and Criticism.

Many men and women lose all the sweetness of life by giving way to a spirit of grumbling and criticism. There are many thousands surrounded with good constantly by words and acts asking: "Is it worth living?" It is an unprofitable spirit to cultivate, and the grumbler in the marble palace is not so much a man or woman as the contented and happy one in the humblest cottage.—Detroit Free Press.

The Indian Girl's Explanation.

One of the Indian girls, when about to leave for her western home, stood silently apart, while her more loquacious friend rattled off all sorts of parting messages, then, with tears in her eyes, she turned to the one beside her and said softly, "—— thinks of her friends on the outside; I have them all in my heart." And she had.—Hampton (Va.) School Record.

Rock Crystal Watches.

A new and peculiar class of timepiece has lately been brought out which illustrates the steady progress that is being made in the arts of skill and precision. This is a watch of ordinary size, of which the case and plates are made of Brazilian pebble or rock crystal, thus rendering the watch transparent, and exposing to plain view the wheels and all other parts of the interior mechanism.—Scientific American.

England's Domestic Service.

About a seventh—15.7 per cent.—of the working population of England is engaged in domestic service. In America only 6 per cent. of the same population earn their living in this way. At least ten families are competing for one domestic in the United States where only four are bidding against each other in England.—Once a Week.

Names for Triplets.

This is the latest credited to W. S. Gilbert. A friend was bewailing in his company that his wife had just presented him with triplets, all girls. "What am I to do with them?" asked the poor man. "I don't even know what to name them." "Oh," said Mr. Gilbert, "call the first Kate, the second Duplicate, and the third Triplicate."—The Argonaut.

A Masseuse's Observation.

A masseuse who has practiced her profession largely among families of wealth makes the statement that in many years she has administered massage to only one woman whose ribs had not been displaced by corset wearing.—New York World.

Waste silk has been shown to be the most effective nonconductive covering for steam pipes. The price is high, but the demand is very great.

Prof. Loisette Wins in Court. Literary Piracy Condemned.

Chief Justice Van Brunt, holding the special term of the supreme court on the application of Nelson Smith and Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, made the injunction in favor of Prof. Loisette, restraining George S. Fellows from publishing his memory system perpetual. Dr. William A. Hammond, Daniel Greenleaf Thompson, author of a work on psychology, and several other professors testified that Prof. Loisette's system was original, being a new departure in the education of the memory. The court ordered Fellows to deliver up to Prof. Loisette the stereotype plates and all the books in his control. Over nine thousand copies of the pirated edition were delivered up yesterday.—New York Sun.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

Hood's Sarsaparilla

Is Peculiar to Itself

Congressional—John H. Hutchinson, John F. Sweetser, William H. Sise, William G. Billings, Joseph Cheever, William H. Moore.

Councillor—Henry A. Yeaton, John Knowlton, Benjamin F. Winn, Charles H. Joy, Herman Tarlton, Herman W. Oxford.

County—Charles E. Batchelder, Lewis G. Davis, Horace A. Martin, Enoch J. Conner, John F. Leavitt, William H. Dunn.

Senatorial—Lewis E. Smith, Marcellus Bufford, John L. Randall, Robert C. Sides, Alfred Stavers, Thomas Kennedy.

DR. WEED'S CASE.

On the 23d, Whitney's testimony was concluded, and other witnesses were put on the stand, including one James Welsh of New York, who related how he and one Donovan went from New York to Newport in 1887 to meet Weed and aid in robbing Bennett; he gave all the details of the alleged plot, but it fell but it fell through because he did not care to risk using violence against Bennett, as Weed hinted might be necessary.

On the 24th, Edward E. Newell of Exeter, telegraph operator for the Boston & Maine railroad, was the first witness. He testified to sending a despatch to Dr. George Weed at Newport in the forenoon of Dec. 3d last, but was forbidden by the superintendent of the telegraph company to produce the despatch in court.

Everett C. Wardwell, a dry goods merchant of Newport, testified to speaking with Clarence Whitney in front of Dr. Weed's office on Sunday afternoon, Dec. 4th.

Mrs. Dora A. Whitney, Clarence Whitney's stepmother, testified that he entered the house Sunday evening, Dec. 4th, after dark, but went out in a few moments.

James A. Foster, who was concerned with Whitney in the robbery, was then brought from the jail, and gave evidence very closely tallying with that of Whitney previously given.

The trial will not end this week.

ATHLETICS.

The Portsmouth Athletic club have voted to have their third annual field day and anniversary supper on Monday, Sept. 10th. The athletic sports will take place on the South street field, commencing at two o'clock in the afternoon, and the programme will be as follows:

Hundred yards dash—first prize, large silver cup, gold lined; second prize, silver cup.

Putting sixteen-pound shot—prize, silver cup, gold lined;

Running high jump — prize, gold medal;

Three fast jumps—prize, gold medal;

Sack race—prize, silver cup, gold lined;

Standing broad jump—prize, gold medal;

Hurdle race,—prize, silver cup;

Throwing ball,—prize, gold medal.

Eugene P. Conner will act as starter, Edgar D. Stoddard as time keeper, and Eugene Sullivan as referee.

In the evening the members of the club will proceed in barges to the Farragut house at Rye beach, where supper will be served at nine o'clock.

KEEP IN YOUR DOGS.

PORTSMOUTH, Aug. 23d.

Mr. Editor: As I was passing along dog that was lying in the middle of the square made a rush for the sidewalk, and intercepted me with a decided show of commencing hostilities, which however he concluded not to do. Now, while I am no dog-fancier I have no wish to hurt a dog or other animal; but I have a positive objection to being hurt by a dog, and had this particular one gone any further than he did with his demonstrations last night, his owner would, I think, have been minus a pet to-day. I was walking quite rapidly at the time the incident occurred, which may have been one reason for the dog's attack; but it is rather too much to expect of a citizen and tax-payer that he shall graduate his speed in walking to suit the ideas of propriety entertained by every stray cur, and any dog who dosen't know more than to mistake a gentleman of my prepossessing personal appearance and reputable standing in the community for a suspicious character, can hardly be possessed of brains enough to blow out. Judge Batchelder in a case recently brought before him ruled that a person shooting at a dog by which he was attacked was not liable to punishment under the law against discharging firearms in the compact part of the city, and people who own dogs which they value but which have a habit of interfering with other people at night, should be careful that the animals are not allowed outside their own premises. OWL.

BASE BALL.

The game on the South street grounds, Friday afternoon, between the Lowells and Portsmouths, was won by the home club, nine to five. The attendance was large and the game a fine one.

MUSIC HALL.

The Moulton Comedy Co. will close the week's engagement in Music hall today, with entertainments afternoon and evening—"Rip Van Winkle" at both.

Mr. Roland Reed began a two weeks' engagement at the Boston Museum last evening in Fred Marsden's farce comedy, "Humbug," in the presentation of which he had the support of his own company. The strong feature of each of its three acts is found in the opportunities afforded Mr. Reed as Jack Luster, to illustrate the art of lying, and to teach the lesson that it is always safer to tell the truth unless circumstances favor the liar. Mr. Reed has a genius for imitating the class of men which Dickens so cleverly drew the likeness of in his Alfred Jingle, and the ever-ready fashion in which he extricates himself from passing dilemmas makes a constant source of merriment for his audience. He had a most hearty reception last evening, and kept his audience in good humor whenever he was on the stage. His great success in comic opera has led him to introduce some vocal selections into "Humbug," including what he styles "a pocket edition of the 'Mikado,'" and these portions of the entertainment gave great pleasure to the audience. The company gives Mr. Reed good support, and the piece is evenly presented throughout.—Boston Herald.

The music hall orchestra will be composed as follows for this season: Two violins, cornet, clarionet, flute, trombone, piano and double bass.

PERSONAL.

Arnold Heap, Esq., wife and child, of Chicago, arrived in this city Friday morning on a visit to Mrs. Heap's mother, Mrs. Sarah E. Baker of Fleet street.

Mr. John S. Tebbetts of New York is passing a vacation with his parents, Mr. J. M. Tebbetts and wife of Miller avenue.

Rev. Massena Goodrich and wife, of Pawtucket, R. I., are visiting relatives in this city.

Mr. Josiah H. Morrison started on Thursday last for a trip to North Conway to pass a week.

Mr. Walter Brown of Boston is visiting Mr. Weeks and wife of High street.

A Bar Harbor despatch of Aug. 24th says: "Secretary Whitney arrived at Bar Harbor last night in company with Hon. Frank Jones of Portsmouth."

Mr. Frank W. Wheaner, of Greeley, Col., is visiting Mr. G. S. Johnson of High street.

MARITIME NOTES.

The schooner Henry M. Clark, of New York, formerly a fishing vessel and owned at this port, arrived at New Bedford on the 23d inst. in distress. She is from St. John, N. B., for New York with lumber. During the gale of Tuesday night, the 21st, part of her deck load was washed away, and she sprung a bad leak, being kept afloat only by hard pumping. She will discharge cargo and repair at New Bedford.

The little steamer Dion, of Dover, went on the marine railway at Kittery on Thursday evening to have a leaky seam caulked, and came off Friday morning, and the schooner Triton went on the ways later in the day.

The United States training ship Saratoga was towed up from the lower harbor to the navy yard at an early hour Friday morning, by the U. S. S. Leyden.

Elvin Newton came in from the Isles of Shoals on Friday. He reports fish as being scarce, but has a crew of seven men at Lunging island in readiness for operations whenever the mackerel strike in, if they strike in before December, as he intends to keep the crew until that time.

A despatch of Aug. 24th from London says: "The dory Dark Secret has been spoken, 1400 miles out from Boston. The captain reported all well."

At Newport, R. I., Aug. 23d, the schooner J. R. Bodwell, of and from Rockland for New York, was fined $20 for not having the name and hailing port painted on her stern as the law requires. The captain has complied with the law and paid the fine. She had black letters on a white ground, whereas the name should be in white, yellow or gilt letters on a black ground.

United States District Attorney O. A. Galvin of Massachusetts has filed a libel against the schooner West Side, Robert W. Halbert master, charging that on July 13th last Halbert took a false oath before collector Presson of Gloucester, as to being a citizen of the United States, whereby he obtained an illegal enrolment of his vessel. It is claimed that Halbert falsely swore that he was naturalized in 1871. The penalty in such a case is forfeiture of the vessel, her tackle, apparel and furniture.

The little Scotch cutter Minerva, the length of which is only forty feet, completed her ocean voyage on the morning of the 23d inst., and anchored at Lawley's yard, South Boston, at 9:30 o'clock. She was in command of Mr. Charles Barr, who is a brother of Captain Barr of Thistle fame. The Minerva left Fairlie, Scotland, July 26th, and the run was made in just twenty-eight days, beating the recent trip of the schooner Fortuna by over four days. From Tory island, the last land sighted, to Cape Cod, the first land made, she was just twenty-six days. She took the recent storm about fifty miles off the cape, and it blew a hurricane. The Minerva worked to the windward with nothing on but a storm trysail. The gale delayed the yacht nearly two days. The Minerva was sent to Boston by Fife, her owner and builder, for orders, and in Lawley's yard will receive her racing spars and be put in racing trim.

Want of Sleep

Is sending thousands annually to the insane asylum; and the doctors say this trouble is alarmingly on the increase. The usual remedies, while they may give temporary relief, are likely to do more harm than good. What is needed is an Alterative and Blood-purifier. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is incomparably the best. It corrects those disturbances in the circulation which cause sleeplessness, gives increased vitality, and restores the nervous system to a healthful condition.

Rev. T. G. A. Coté, agent of the Mass. Home Missionary Society, writes that his stomach was out of order, his sleep very often disturbed, and some impurity of the blood manifest; but that a perfect cure was obtained by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Frederick W. Pratt, 424 Washington street, Boston, writes: "My daughter was prostrated with nervous debility. Ayer's Sarsaparilla restored her to health."

William F. Bowker, Erie, Pa., was cured of nervousness and sleeplessness by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla for about two months, during which time his weight increased over twenty pounds.

Three Summer Dangers.

Three summer dangers menace the household and traveller at every turn. They are climate, food and water. To guard against them requires judgment, abstinance, and SANFORD'S GINGER.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer complaints, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of cholera morbus,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

As a pure fruit stimulant for the aged, mentally and physically overworked, for delicate females, especially mothers, and as a means of reforming those addicted to an excessive use of alcoholic stimulates, it is invaluable.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists and dealers on those who call for and desire only

A SOUTH AMERICAN SCENE.

The Great Salt Plains of the Interior—Troops of Flamingoes.

'Twas 2 o'clock in the afternoon; Loanneo marched at the head of our little troop. "Oh, look! look at the snow!" he exclaimed, at the moment when leaving the valley of Condors, we were about to enter the plain. Snow in the month of March in the southern hemisphere! We thought our companion must have had a sudden sunstroke; that would not have been at all impossible, for the heat in this valley was torrid—if one might give the name valley to the large opening bordered with enormous rocks whose broken fragments strewed the ground as if to hinder us in our march, and keep us longer in this cursed pass, where vegetation is only represented by gigantic lichens, whose silvery threads could hardly be distinguished from the grayish mass of rock to which they clung.

"Are you crazy, Loanneo," cried Charles.

"Dame, you can see for yourselves. If that is not snow it certainly looks exactly like it; though as you get closer it is not cold at all."

The thermometer marked 75 degs. Scarcely had we rejoined our comrade when we uttered a simultaneous cry of astonishment. Right before us, bounded only by the horizon, stretched an immense plain of dazzling whiteness, whose surface sparkled under the bright rays of the sun. Any one would have sworn that it was snow. Without uttering a word, so overwhelming was our astonishment, we turned to Barlejo with an air of mute interrogation. "I have found out what it is," cried Lawrence—"it is cotton."

"But where are the cotton pickers?"

"Yes, that is true—they are nowhere to be seen."

The "Vaquero" laughed in his sleeve; he thoroughly enjoyed our astonishment. "We are about to enter the great salt plains," he said finally, when he thought our patience had been sufficiently tested.

The salt plains! Don Cabral had spoken to us of them when we were discussing our journey at the estancia of las Jarrillas; but our imagination had never pictured any landscape as grandiose in its uniformity. As far as the eye could reach, extended an ocean of salt, white and sparkling as snow. Not a shadow on this panorama, which reminded me of the immense steppes of Siberia, when winter has spread her immaculate winding sheet over that kingdom of death and silence. Not a spot which could break the monotony. "Come—encourage," continued Barlejo, "it is a vile place to cross under the broiling sun, which is hot enough to roast an ox, but we must get over it before nightfall, for even if we sacrifice our horses we could not think of camping on the salt plains."

"And how far across this plain?"

"About twelve miles."

Twelve miles! and our poor horses had not been able to go out of a walk all the morning. It was the only gait possible in the valley of the Condors. Putting spurs to our horses we started off at a hard gallop. The gauchos allowed us to take the lead. Our gallop did not last long. As soon as their feet touched the salt our horses stopped as if nailed to the ground; under their feet the salt crackled like snow. We could only go on step by step. And twelve miles to make at this pace, when we had hoped to clear the plain at a gallop. The heat was suffocating—the reflection of this sea of salt so many times refined and purified by the continual washing and dryings of rain and wind blinded us. To complete our sufferings the north wind, that suffocating, enervating wind, began to blow. We went panting through this furnace with nothing to freshen or mitigate the scorching heat. The last rays of the setting sun tinged with a rosy hue this white and naked landscape. Suddenly on our left appeared a mass of fiery red, while before us a long line of vivid green was clearly defined against the whiteness of the salt. At the same moment the horses began to whinny—they smelt the water. Their pace quickened under the stimulus of this hope of soon reaching fresh water, as only those who have lived in the desert can understand. Water—we were soon to reach the water—with voice and hand we encouraged the poor animals. We were on the edge of the lagoon when at a word from our guide we stopped short. The spectacle before us was indeed enough to make us halt. Issuing from a marsh in a line like veteran troops of infantry, two or three thousand birds with excessively long necks and feet, the plumage on their bodies of soft rose tint, and wings the color of fire were advancing, calm, dignified, majestic. "Los Flamengos!" exclaimed Barlejo, as we stepped on the ground, or rather on the salt.—Henri Leturque in Detroit Free Press.

Peculiarities of the Appetite.

Wallace says that some of the Pacific islanders will never eat hens' eggs, considering them unfit for food; but they sell them to sailors. The Esquimaux will not eat vegetables, considering it a perverted taste that will indulge in such stuff. The New Guinea natives refuse to eat bread and biscuits, and abhor sugar. On the contrary, such tribes enjoys ants, grasshoppers, monkeys and snakes. Those Malayans that collect edible birds' nests never can be induced to eat of them. African tribes that keep most cattle never taste milk. Salt is where all the world finds kinship, for no nation or tribe but craves it, and needs it. On the whole we shall have to go back to the old Latin saw for an explanation of such diversities: "There is no accounting for tastes."—Globe Democrat.

An Innovation in Trade.

A New York house that formerly employed 100 drummers has dispensed with them all, and in their place prints monthly an illustrated catalogue, which is mailed to all customers. A member of the firm is credited with saying that it is a more effectual solicitor than the body of men it used to send out, while the expense is very much less. The interior merchants are reported to be pleased with the innovation. This plan may work very well in some lines of trade, and not at all in other. It will be a good while before personal solicitation of business will go out of fashion, if it ever does, and the present generation of traveling men need not expect to ever wake up of a morning and find their occupation gone.—Rochester Herald.

Effects of Mental Idleness.

Mental idleness is sure to lead to mental ruin. He who will not exert his thoughts, who lets them passively receive whatever influence may chance to fall upon them, will soon lose the chief power which makes them valuable. It is an easy habit to fall into, and one which each person needs to guard against—that of listlessly reading, or listening, or dreaming instead of actively thinking and working up these influences into ideas and convictions that are worth holding, because they have been justly earned. It is the vacant mind, where no good seed is struggling upward into life, which will soonest be covered with weeds.—Once a Week.

The Road Healthward Made Easier.

You have been ill, we will suppose, and are convalescing slowly. That is, you are trying to pick up a little flesh, to regain some of your wonted color, to accustom your stomach to more solid nutriment than its recently enfeebled condition permitted you to take. How can you accelerate your snail's pace healthward? We are warranted by concurrent testimony in affirming that if you will use twice or thrice a day Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, an enabling medicine of long ascertained purity and tonic virtues, that you will be materially aided. It promotes a flow of the gastric juices, and helps the system to assimilate the nourishment of which it stands so much in need. It remedies a tendency to constipation without convulsing the bowels. The liver it stimulates to renewed activity, safely promotes the action of the kidneys and bladder, and annihilates malaria and rheumatism at the outset.

Hay fever sufferers ought to know of its efficacy. Ely's Cream Balm was recommended to me as a preventive to hay fever. Have been using it since the 9th of August and have found it a specific for that much dreaded disease For ten years I have been a great sufferer from August 9th till frost, and have tried many alleged remedies, but Ely's Cream Balm is the only preventive I have ever found. —F. A Peculiarity of Hood's Sarsaparilla is that while it purifies the blood, it imparts new vigor to every function of the body.

To the Delicate and Malarious.

The most incredulous are convinced of the virtues of Aunt Rachael's Malarial Bitters upon a trial of them. Their base is Speer's port wine, with herbs and roots so favorably known to the medical profession and the community at large as the best cure for malaria. They are all that can be desired by the most feeble victims of malaria.

HOW MAPS ARE MADE.

Dots and Lines and Crooked Marks That Require Months of Skilled Labor.

The story of a dot—a fortune in a hair line—is the making of a map. Dot stories fill a row of walnut cases; the reminiscences of dotted lines occupy thousands of pigeonholes; a library of crooked marks is piled to the ceiling of a five story block on Monroe street. It is the largest map house in the world, and for twelve years has printed 1,000,000 maps a week—624,000,000 pieces of linen paper covered with dots, lines and crooked marks.

Fortune lies in the accuracy of the lines and stories in the locations of the dots. Maps are as necessary to real estate men as title deeds, and nearly as much depends on their accuracy.

A map is a plain, simple thing that tells its varnished tale at a glance. How is it made? Until about the time of the great fire maps were engraved on stone, copper or steel. The process was very slow, tedious and expensive. The plates soon wore out and maps cost about as much as a sheet of gold. About 1870 a Buffalo man invented the process of making maps on wax. It revolutionized map making, and now maps are as common and nearly as cheap as newspapers.

The mapmaker works in a room whose temperature cannot run below 90 degs. Few men work at it longer than four years, though years of apprenticeship are required to make them expert. The heat becomes unendurable in the end and they go into some other employment.

Preparatory to making the original plate melted beeswax and some hardening ingredient are poured on a highly polished metal table. For fine work the wax is as thin as a piece of paper, but for the coarser kind the waxen sheet is an eighth of an inch thick. Rough pen and ink drawings of the work to be done are given the operators. They draw the hair lines with sharp pointed instruments by the aid of straight edges. The dotted lines indicating county or township boundaries are made with little wheels, on whose narrow edge are cut the peculiarly designed lines. All crooked lines are made by hand and require an artist's eye. The names of towns, rivers, countries and the like are impressed in the wax with type letter by letter. Every impression must cut through the wax to the polished steel plate beneath, for the map is made face down. When all the lines and letters are in the wax is placed under a cooler temperature, which hardens it. The wax is then covered with black lead and the steel plate, with its waxen coat, is suspended in an electrotyping solution. The copper in the solution covers the black lead and forms a hard plate which is called the original. The wax is then peeled off and the printing surface is presented. The thin copper plate is backed up with type metal and the plate is ready for use. It is usually preserved, however, for the making of stereotype plates from which the actual printing is done.

In the preparation of the etchings great care is required to keep the wax at the proper temperature, as a degree too low would make it hard to work and a degree too high would melt it and probably destroy it. Often many hundred thousand maps of the same pattern are ordered and from twenty to forty plates are made from the original. If the maps are small so many of these plates as can be used conveniently are placed side by side on the presses and a sheet of maps is printed at each impression. The ordinary advertising real estate map is finished when it leaves the press. The better maps are sized and varnished. The larger ones are mounted on rollers and wooden strips. This completes the mechanical process of the making of a map.

But this is the smallest part of a map. The unseen work, the preparation of the original draft, represents the time, labor and money expended. The story of the dot is not woven in a day. Postoffice towns are located by copies of papers in the postoffice department at Washington; the chief engineers of the railroads send profiles of their lines; county surveyors make maps of their localities. Where the government has made surveys the location of a section, township, or county line is easily made. But the six mile township system was not thought of until the western reserve of Ohio was surveyed. In the older states, where a boundary line begins at a stone and runs to a white oak tree, the trouble begins. Good local maps are used in these states. But in countries where no government surveys have been made the greatest difficulties are encountered.—Chicago News.

Value of Old Books.

The moral of all this is that every one who has any old books, papers or pamphlets which he doesn't want should give them to a library instead of the paper mill or the fire, and that every library should have a top drawer, as that institution is known to all mothers of families, in which to deposit miscellanies of too little apparent value to catalogue. Seventy-five dollars have been paid for a quack almanac, badly wanted for some purpose. And the prices paid for many old books of perhaps not very much greater intrinsic value are—well, Bradford's Almanac of half a dozen vacant pages fetches over $500. It was the first issue of the press in Pennsylvania. The Bay Psalm Book, printed in 1640, in Cambridge, fetches over $1,000, by virtue of being the first book printed in the, now, United States. The late Henry Stevens once bought a $10,000 library to get a copy of this. While, if we go back a little further, we may find Mr. Quaritch, the London bookseller, giving $20,000 for a book printed by Schoeffer the second printer, because it is a fine and rare specimen of early typography. That is about $1,000 a year for the privilege of owning a book! These be the things of which enthusiastic librarians dream.—Philadelphia Times.

Assisting the Memory.

A simple device for assisting the memory is to change the pen, pencil, bunch of keys, or other article in constant use, from its accustomed pocket to another. Failure to find it when wanted will bring to mind the reason for transferring it. I have found this plan of great advantage when it was not convenient to note down an item that might otherwise be forgotten. In fact, the plan can be used for an indefinite number of purposes.—The Writer.

A HINDOO CRITICISM.

An Educated East Indian Gives His Impressions of the English.

An educated Hindoo, who is writing a series of his first impressions of England in The Indian Spectator, eulogizes the comfort of English homes, laments the costliness of English fruits and declares that John Bull has too many things to attend to to look after cooking. "In fruits he excels everybody. In sweets he is not inferior to the Frenchman, and always inferior to the Indians."

He continues: John Bull loves to be exclusive. Every man for himself is his motto. Let me alone is his ideal of society. You might travel for hours in the same compartment of a train without exchanging half a dozen words with your companions. I should not be surprised if they wanted a heaven to themselves. Perhaps Swedenborg was right. Even their flirts, male and female, have an air of cold solemnity about them which makes your blood run cold in your veins. Their very amusements savor of business. Most of them have a cynic disgust of life, are always morose, and, though burning with a desire to oblige you, quite capable of making you turn away in disgust at their coldness. Then there is so much stoutness and solidity in their character. What they do they do with a will. If they eat, they eat like giants; if they drink, they drink like giants, turning brandy into water, but if they work, they also work like giants. No half heartedness, no irresolution, no want of earnestness about them. If you see them walking in the streets of London you would think the world had come to an end. Yet they are only going to the parks.

Everybody has a hobby. The nation is so full of eccentricities. They hold their own; tell a lie and stick to it, is their motto; and then they love opposition. It is a crime to be poor. The goddess of wealth has more votaries than any church. To call one a beggar is the greatest insult. Short accounts make long friends, so goes the English proverb, not like the Indian proverb, friends' accounts are settled in heart. Nobody tolerates being under money obligations to another if he can help it. Your money is the test of your merit. In India poor men could live and even be comparatively comfortable. In England it is not so. It is the law of the survival of the fittest, and the fittest is he who commands most money. There is a feverish competition everywhere, and to be a man of independent means is everybody's ambition. This lies at the root of all that material progress which one everywhere finds in England. But unlike our people, whose 4 per cents or massive buildings or curious jewels are often the only evidence of their wealth, they know how to make good use of their money.

Every Englishman and Englishwoman works, if not to earn a livelihood, to do good to others. The climate is fatal to an idle man. A Frenchman considers to show capacity is the end of speech in debate; an Englishman considers the end of speech in debate is to advance business. They require everybody to be true to his engagements, and I often missed many a one by being only a minute too late. For a punctual man, a man of work, nothing is too good, and there is not a public man who is not a man of work. A good speaker is not always looked upon as the best man in a ministry; a minister who does not work is soon elbowed out. Their Gladstones, Hartingtons, Churchills, Parnells, Bradlaughs are working themselves to death in their respective causes, otherwise they would be nowhere. Reserve power, nothing by fits and starts, is the rule. Nobody hates show and humbug more than they, and the best dressed man is he whose dress excites no notice.

Englishmen talk of the baneful effects of caste in India as if they had none in England, though it may not be in the same sense. A poor man is a Sudra and a rich man a lord, a peer, a Brahmin; but the English Sudra can, like Viswamitra of Hindoo mythology, be a Brahmin, not by austerities like the royal sage, but the austerities in the accumulation of wealth. An Englishman never pardons his superiors for any familiarity toward him, nor does he pardon himself for any toward those below him. We in India have yet to learn the lesson of stubbornness and resoluteness, and one might willingly sacrifice half the rhetoric of the country for a tenth of that spirit of self help which is so strongly noticeable in England. There they do all that they attempt. Perhaps this system of mutual dependence is the great bane of our society. "Joint family" is not their motto; as soon as a man marries he hires separate lodgings and keeps separate house. The Hindoo suffers, the Englishman struggles.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Longevity of Our Race.

The biologist, Bichat, whose intuitions so marvelously anticipated the conclusions of a later science, held that the normal longevity of our race should be an average of 96 years, bearing his inference on the fact that the life term of all known mammals exceeds at least six times the period of their growth. A dog, growing for three years, may live to 18 or 20. A horse, growing for four or five, attains, and often exceeds, an age of 30 years. A camel, growing twice as slowly, may live to 40 years and upward. An elephant, even in captivity, does not attain its full growth before its 15th year, and in India often outlives two centurys. Some of the larger quadrumana likewise grow very slowly; several varieties of baboons, for instance, do not acquire the characteristics of maturity before the beginning of their teens; and the naturalist, Brehm, mentions a male chacma, who, after becoming the patriarch of his tribe, raided the durra fields of the Zulu villages for nearly thirty years before he met his Waterloo in a fight with the outraged natives. The males of our own species grow for at least sixteen years, but less than one-third reach even the threefold multiple of that age, and hardly one in 300 the normal sixfold.—Dr. Felix L. Oswald in The Forum.

Another View of It.

If we could see ourselves as others see us, some of us would see ourselves a great deal better than we really are.

This thought is suggested by Boker in "Francesca Da Rimini:" "This life is one continual struggle to hide our baseness from the world."—Detroit Free Press.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Four years ago drink had reduced Conrad Shenfield, formerly a wealthy business man of Erie, Pa., to deepest poverty. Ragged, filthy and hungry, he went one night to the Murphy temperance meeting, where he took the pledge, and kept sober day after day. Colonel C M. Lynch, an attorney, loaned him $200 and he disappeared from the city. Last Tuesday Shenfield died in Kansas City, giving $150,000 worth of real and personal property to Colonel Lynch, besides valuable mining property at Albuquerque, N. M.

A Famous Doctor

Once said that the secret of good health consisted in keeping the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels open. Had this eminent physician lived in our day, and known the merits of Ayer's Pills as an aperient, he would certainly have recommended them, as so many of his distinguished successors are doing.

The celebrated Dr. Farnsworth, of Norwich, Conn., recommends Ayer's Pills as the best of all remedies for "Intermittent Fevers."

Dr. I. E. Fowler, of Bridgeport, Conn., says: "Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."

Dr. Mayhew, of New Bedford, Mass., says: "Having prescribed many thousands of Ayer's Pills, in my practice, I can unhesitatingly pronounce them the best cathartic in use."

The Massachusetts State Assayer, Dr. A. A. Hayes, certifies: "I have made a careful analysis of Ayer's Pills. They contain the active principles of well-known drugs, isolated from inert matter, which plan is, chemically speaking, of great advantage to their usefulness. It insures activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. Ayer's Pills contain no metallic or mineral substance, but the virtues of vegetable remedies in skillful combination."

EASTERN RAILROAD COMPANY.

A SPECIAL MEETING of the Holders of Certificates of Indebtedness issued under the act entitled, "An Act for the relief of the Eastern Railroad Company and the securing of its debts and liabilities," passed April 28th, 1878, will be held at the Eastern Railroad Station in Boston, Mass., on the 28th day of August, 1888, at eleven o'clock A. M., for the purpose of electing a new Trustee under said act in place of William C. Rogers, deceased.

WM. P. PHILLIPS, CHARLES R. CODMAN, } Surviving Trustees.

"HEALTH! LOVE! WORK!"

Were ever such beautiful triplets born?
Rosy and sweet and glad as the morn;
Never a heartstone far and wide
So happy as where these three abide.

If the angels sent but one to me,
Which would I choose of the lovely three?
O, of the trio, Love is best;
Love immortal, is loveliest.

—Mrs. George W. Swift in Woman.

Railroads of Indian Territory.

There are 20,000 Cherokees, 5,000 Choctaws, 5,000 Chickasaws, and from 2,000 to 3,000 Seminoles in the territory. The Creeks number 8,000 to 10,000 souls, but it is thought about half of these are negroes. Owing to prejudice among the Cherokees and Choctaws there are fewer negroes in those nations. The territory has more railroads than any who have not studied the subject would believe. The Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe route runs a line from Arkansas City to Gainesville straight through the middle of the territory. The Missouri, Kansas and Texas, part of Gould's Missouri Pacific line, runs through the northeast corner, through the Cherokee, Creek, Choctaw, and part of the Chickasaw nations. There is a fifty mile bit of road from Fort Smith, Ark., to Moskogee, in the Creek nation, entirely traversing the Cherokee country. The Atlantic and Pacific road has got the right of way, and has made its survey straight across the territory. A branch of the Rock Island system crosses the territory, and a branch of the Southern Kansas route runs across the northeast corner. Diagonally across the state is projected the Dennison and Wachita Valley road, part of the 'Frisco system.—New York Sun.

The Waste of Fertility.

The city that lives at the expense of the country owes the land a debt. Payment of a just debt both honor and honesty exact. This debt is duly set forth on the annual balance sheet of nature. If payment is refused the world goes bankrupt. Liebig, chemist, philosopher, philanthropist, adduces the past as a warning to the present. He declares that "the cloacae of Rome absorbed the well being of the Roman farmers." After the wide Campagna had been wasted by the sower of the great city, all of Italy became its victim. After Italy she poured Sicily into it, then Sardinia, then Africa. Only Egypt, annually renewed by the slime of the Nile, was able measurably to withstand the drain. The sewer of Rome swallowed the fertility of the ancient world. In the "dark ages" the earth as the race of man, lay as in fallow. So only could there be recuperation from the physical as from the moral exhaustion of her pernicious rule.

Against Chicago the grim balance already shows in the millions. On the lowest basis on which computation can be made Chicago, imitating pagan Rome in this, wastes annually not less than two millions in present money value. Applied judiciously to the soil the gain in added harvests would be twofold that. The methods of saving and utilizing this vast wealth, with its wondrous possibilities, are well known. The expense of applying them is but nominal in comparison with the gain. It needs only that this product of the city be placed on the market. Its value shown by the results of its application would compel purchasers. If there is profit in it transported in the bamboo baskets of China, what gains do we not lose who can restore this matter to its place at one-hundredth the cost of that in China?

Instead, with our sewerage system we poison our people. Every zymotic disease that decimates our children is traceable to its fetid exhalations. And those whom we intrust with the care of the public health can devise nothing better to protect that than by a "garbage crematory" to pour this gold in the ore, too bulky for the sewer, through flame into the funereal smoke that hangs over the crematory like a canopy of mourning shrouding a starving soil.—Chicago Times.

Cheating the City Directory.

A few days ago I desired to call upon a young friend who is reckoned among the swells of New York. I had forgotten his address, and turned to the directory. To my surprise, for he had lived in the city all his life and was well known about town, his name did not appear there. I then hunted for the names of several mutual friends, from whom I expected to obtain the desired information, and, to my increased astonishment, I found that their names, too, were omitted. Fortunately I found a copy of the "Society List," the directory that pretends to contain the names of the elite of the city, and in that way I discovered the object of my search.

It was while talking to my friend later on that I jocosely referred to his having been dropped from the list of citizens.

"Why, my dear fellow," was his reply, "there's nothing accidental about that. It is the result of design, and I congratulate myself on having been clever enough to keep clear of those deucedly persistent fellows that go around collecting names."

"But what in thunder do you want to keep your name out of the directory for?" I cried, completely mystified.

He laughed.

"It's getting to be vulgar, old fel," he said. "It is considered more aristocratic nowadays not to have your name sandwiched in with a lot of ordinary people. The gentleman of today is a traveler. He has many residences, and prefers to have it thought that he is moving about from one to another. Anyhow it is an established fashion and rapidly growing among the select."

My friend, who would be a first class fellow if he had not been wealthy and a member of a very fast set, mentioned many other reasons for the desire of the dude to be unknown to the common herd. Some of them were more substantial than those already quoted.—New York Cor. Globe-Democrat.

Something About "Fairy Rings."

The fairy rings of England, so famous in folk lore, began at a bit of manure dropped by a cow or by birds. A mushroom growth it was that ate up the nitrogen of the soil. No one noticed their beginning, but after awhile would be seen a circle of grass, and within it a barren spot. The grass of the edge, or ring, was deeper green and more luxuriant, but inside whatever grew was stunted. Mushrooms of different sorts abounded and crowded up to the edge of the grass. These are terrible eaters of nitrogen, carbon, phosphorus, potash. As they exhaust the soil their mycelium, or seed, extends outward, and, thus springing up, exhausts again. But the decay of the mycelium, which is so rich in plant food, first fattens and feeds a ring of grass before displacing the same. A rich ring of dark, stout grass is formed by the deposition of carbon and phosphates, and then this is crowded back and out by the craft of the toadstools. All this the folk did not use to know, but instead they saw it to be the work of fairies.—Mary E. Spencer in Globe-Democrat.

Some Democratic Leaders.

The democratic papers and orators would have the people believe that the republican party is run by and in the interests of the great corporations and monopolies, while the democratic party is managed by and for "the people." Yet on the national democratic executive committe there are five railroad millionaires. Mr. William H. Barnum, the eminent democratic manager and buyer of "mules"—he once authorized the buying of seven in one drove—is an officer in six railroad corporations. Chairman Calvin S. Brice of the democratic executive committee is an officer in nine railroad corporations, one of them being the Canadian Pacific. Mr. John S. Barber, another member of the committee, is vice-president of the Virginia Midland railroad, and Mr. Sewell is president of five railroads. Congressman Wm. L. Scott, the great and grinding coal baron; Jay Gould, the great telegraph monopolist; Havemeyer, the king of the sugar trust; Payne, the head of the Standard Oil and cotton-seed oil monopolies; and the great whiskey ring as a unit, are all Cleveland and reform. Monopolies and trusts might be shattered by a victory won under such leadership and with such aid, but it is not probable that anything of the kind would occur.

In a fight at a Baptist meeting at Monticello, Ga., Aug. 23d, two men were shot dead, one or two mortally wounded, and several badly hurt. Over thirty shots were fired. Those fellows evidently belong to the church militant.

William Henry Hurlbert of London, formerly editor of the New York World and still an excellent democrat, has written a book against the Irish and Ireland which has delighted tory England immensely. Mr. Hurlbert also is engaged in vilifying Mr. Blaine and the republican party.

The people of the United States have always welcomed to its shores the poor and oppressed of all nations, who have generally prospered and done well by the kindness of the old American population. But when it comes to this, that, aliens of only a few years' residence, who were obliged to flee from poverty and disgrace in Europe, undertake to dictate to their patrons how the country is to be managed, is it not time to call for a halt?

An unknown man about twenty-seven years old, well dressed and apparently slightly intoxicated, jumped overboard from the steamer Tremont shortly after she left her wharf in Boston, Aug. 23d, and was drowned. He said "Well, good bye," stood on the rail.

A butcher in Liverpool, England, was recently summoned before a magistrate on the charge of selling horseflesh for beef. He was fined fifty shillings, not for selling the horseflesh, but because it was unsound. The magistrate said that he knew of nothing to prevent a butcher from selling such meat, provided it were good and sound.

The advantages of advertising could not be better illustrated than in the case of Mr. W. L. Douglas, of Brockton, Mass., manufacturer of the celebrated W. L. Douglas $3.00 shoe. About four years ago, S. R. Niles Newspaper Advertising Agency, of Boston, placed for Mr. Douglas an advertisement covering a portion of the New England states. Since that time Mr. Douglas has steadily increased his advertising as his business prospered, and the returns have been so gratifying that he has recently placed, through Mr. Niles, his advertisement in over 5000 newspapers, covering every section of the country from Maine to California.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." PEARLINE

Goes right to the heart of

Dirt and Filth

Pearline makes everything as clean as possible, in less time, with less labor, with less wear and tear on yourself or the objects cleaned, and at less expense than anything else known. And this accounts for its wonderful growth and popularity. Used all over the United States. Every woman who does her own work will appreciate its wonderful aid by giving it one fair trial. Every woman who keeps a servant should supply that servant with PEARLINE—the result will be a better servant, better work and more of it, and a mistress better satisfied.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or "the same as Pearline." It's false—they are not, and besides are dangerous. PEARLINE is never peddled, but sold by all good grocers.

Canavan Wins the Game for Portsmouth.

The Portsmouths played a game with the Worcesters at Worcester on Saturday, and won their first game out of town with any of the New England clubs now in the race. Feen, the pitcher, struck out eight of the Worcesters. Canavan batted the ball over the left-field fence for a home run, with two men on bases, winning the game. Rudderham made a two-base hit; 'rah for Ruddy. The score:

As nice a game of ball as one would wish to see took place on the south end grounds, Saturday, between the Nonpareils of this city and the Kittery club, the score standing five to three in favor of the former.

Don't forget to encourage the boys, this afternoon, by attending the ball game. The Manchesters have never been beaten by the Portsmouths, but it's a long lane, etc.

REPUBLICAN DELEGATE CAUCUSES.

State—Frank E. H. Marden, Joseph Wain.

Congressional—John Hallam, Frank P. Rand.

Councillor—Horace D. Whidden, Geo. J. Webber.

Senatorial—Ira Brown, Allen Greenough.

County—Harry B. Drew, Joseph J. Wain.

At the republican caucus in Rye on Friday evening, Aug. 24th, the following-named persons were elected delegates to the several conventions:

State—Lewis E. Walker, George B. Caswell.

Congressional—George G. Lougee, J. Curtis Philbrick.

Councillor—Emmons B. Philbrick, John T. Marden.

County—Thomas W. Rand, Freeman J. Locke.

Senatorial—Gilman Garland, J. Jenness Rand.

POLICE COURT---BATCHELDER J.

SATURDAY, Aug. 25th.

Clarence Jenness, for assaulting Marshall Goodwin, was fined $1, costs $8 36. Paid.

Horace Tetherly, brawl and tumult, fined $1, costs $8 44. Paid.

OUR BEST WISHES GO WITH THEM.

Mr. Wilbur J. Rockwood, late master of the Jones school, arrived home on Friday accompanied by Mrs. Rockwood, from Bethlehem, this state, where they have been passing several weeks, at the Prospect house. Mr. Rockwood and wife departed last Saturday for Methuen, Mass., for a short visit before taking up their residence in Lynn, Mass., where Mr. Rockwood takes charge of the high school. The resignation of Mr. Rockwood was a loss to our schools and his departure is a loss to the city. Many parents have expressed their regrets at his leaving, as the children have advanced much under his tuition, and he has kept the good will of the children while at the same time maintaining a proper degree of discipline. Lynn has made a valuable acquisition, and the best wishes of many of our citizens—ours among them—go with Mr. Rockwood and his wife to their new home.

MUSIC HALL.

Mr. Roland Reed has scored a succes in the amusing comedy, "Humbug," in which he has been acting during the week. Mr. Reed has the art of engaging the attention of his audiences from the beginning of the play, and then follow him with merriment through the various absurd situations into which and out of which he is constantly getting himself. The supporting company contributes to the fun that pervades the comedy.—Philadelphia Ledger.

REAL ESTATE SALE.

The house No. 29 Vaughan street, owned and formerly occupied by H. Fisher Eldredge, Esq., was sold at auction on Saturday at noon by Auctioneer Wendell, the purchaser being Mr. Winslow T. Perkins, station agent for the Boston & Maine railroad in this city, and the price $3200. The barn on Raitt's court owned by Mr. Eldredge was afterward sold by Mr. Wendell, and was taken by Mr. David Welch, the Hanover street baker, at $1220.

DR. WEED'S CASE.

At the close of Foster's testimony the government rested its case.

In the afternoon on the 24th Dr. Weed took the stand as the first witness for the defence. He gave his age as forty-six years, his profession as physician, and said he had practiced in Newport fifteen years. He positively denied the statements of Whitney and Foster as to their having been in his office with him on Saturday, Dec. 3d, or that he ever knew or saw in Newport a man named Welch or one named Donavan. The first time he ever saw Foster was on the Saturday following his own arrest on Dec. 28th.

Explained about having twiee taken rides with Whitney, and said those were the only times he ever rode with him. Never wrote a letter to Whitney, nor received a letter or telegram from him. Never knew of any plan to rob Peter Bennett, and of course never asked any one's assistance in any such scheme. Weed's testimony was not concluded when the court adjourned to Saturday.

Saturday morning Dr. Weed continued his testimony. He testified as to his whereabouts on the Sunday of the robbery, (the robbery took place in the evening;) visiting patients, and drinking liquor to excess during the day, so that when he arrived home in the afternoon his wife noticed that he was under the influence of liquor. After tea, left home for his office; visited several patients during the evening, and reached home at eleven o'clock After retiring, his wife called him, and said "he was wanted to go to Peter Bennett's." He got his instruments and went to Bennett's. Found his services were not needed, as Dr. Harvey was sewing up the wounds. Bennett and his grandson had visited his office several times before the robbery, the old man complaining of illness, but he had given him no opiate. Foster was never in his office to his knowledge. Whitney's testimony about conversation at jail was not true.

Dr. Weed being cross-examined, stated was arrested Tuesday, Feb. 8th. Was kept in jail twenty-nine days. Graduated from American Medical university in Philadelphia in 1870, after a four months' course. Commenced practising in Newport fifteen years ago, and about eight years ago opened a drug store, which he continued two years. From May 1st, 1887, to Dec. 4th, 1887, was in Newport substantially the whole time. Had been Peter Bennett's family physician for one year previous to the robbery. Never knew that Bennett kept large sums of money in a trunk. Whitney had visited his office several times, and it was he who spoke of Peter Bennett and his money on a drive witness took with him.

Saturday afternoon, cross-examination resumed; Witness described the circumstances of his arrest, and stated that he owned but little personal property. On the day after the robbery witness was at home all day, and had no professional engagement out of Newport Sunday night, Dec. 4th. This closed the cross-examination.

On re-direct examination witness said: "Officer showed him no warrant when arrested, and he did not ask for one.

This closed the examination of Dr. Weed, and the court adjourned until Monday morning.

Mr. Cleveland demands in effect that there shall be a tariff for revenue purposes only. No tinkering with the tariff will suffice; no readjustment of duties will do. The only reform that common sense can accept of is one which unaffectedly substitutes the principle of unimpeded imports for that of tariff regulations.—London Standard.

By the caving in of a bank of earth on Garrison hall, Dover, Saturday, where the reservoir is being built, Patrick Waters, a citizen of Dover, and Mike Tamara, were entombed. Tamara was dug out alive, but Waters was dead when found.

Sunday was one of the hottest days of the season. The streets were deserted—everyone that could, going to the beaches and the harbor. The stable men reported every team out In the evening an immense jam of teams and pedestrians were at the Wentworth listening to the excellent music of the Gypsey band.

Mrs. Helen M. Cann, her three grandchildren and maid, from Winchester, Mass., are passing a few weeks at the Carter cottage in Kittery. Mrs. Cann is a sister of Mrs. P. M. Langton. Miss Ella O. Tobey and Miss Clara F. Tobey of Boston, also sisters of Mrs. Langton, are making a short visit with that lady.

Boating parties were numerous on Sunday. The Nonpareils and Athletics went to Chauncey's creek, James Drisco and party went to the Shoals in the sloop Tryphosia, and Willis E. Pinder was out with his new cat-rigged boat for the first time. All the small boats were in demand by pleasure seekers.

A collision took place on the corner of Penhallow and Daniel streets Saturday afternoon, between teams belonging to Warren Keen and John H. Wells. Mr. Keen's teams were upset, a girl and boy thrown out, but resulted in no serious damage. After running up and down Daniel street for awhile, the horse of Mr. Keen was stopped.

The freight train from Dover, and freight train No. 246, on the main line coming from the east, were in collision at Noble's island on Saturday evening last, two cars being badly smashed, delaying incoming passenger trains for some time. The cause of the accident was a defect in one of the signal lights on the island.

When Mr. Oliver W. Ham went to his stable on Vaughan street, Saturday morning, to look after his horse, he found that the animal had broken through the floor of the stable during the night, and had been very badly cut and bruised in his struggles to extricate himself. The horse was gotten out with some difficulty, and bandaged and patched up as well as possible, but it was feared he was ruined.

Capt. James Burke came in on Saturday from the light-house at Boon Island for supplies, and left the same evening to attend to his official duty. This was his first appearance here for two months. About one thousand people from the seashore resorts have visited the station thus far this season, out of curiosity to look at the island and lighthouse.

Schooner Fannie T., Capt. Adams, of Ogunquit, took 200 large mackerel off Boon island last Friday, by seine. They were brought in to Portsmouth on Saturday, and sold.

The gross receipts of the Midsummer Fete at Eliot last week we are informed were $1996—a very satisfactory result of the work of its promoters. With better weather the attendance would have been a crush.

Butterfish, a small fish resembling the chub, are quite numerous off the coast here now. Some specimens are being brought into this market. They are fat, and readily grabbed up by those moving along the wharves, who want something for the pan.

Mr. Samuel S. Sides, starter of the Wentworth house coaches at the railroad station in this city this season, has found at different times several well filled pocketbooks which had been dropped by their owners, who on receiving their property liberally rewarded Mr. Sides with thanks.

Among the assignments of republican speakers in Maine the present week is that of Gen. Robert P. Kennedy, member of Congress from Ohio, at Kittery on Wednesday evening. On Saturday last men were engaged in setting poles on which it is proposed to hoist republican campaign flags the same evening—one at the Depot, and two at the Foreside, one of the latter at Dr. Wentworth's.

Says Sarah Orne Jewett in the Eliot Fete: "Let us try to preserve the character of Eliot, and York, and Wells, and Kittery, and the Berwicks, as best we can, and not try to make them look newer places not half, nor quarter so beautiful as they. Let us keep the pleasant old houses standing, and our grandmothers' front yards blooming, and teach the old associations and legends to the children just as long as we can."

Alderman Urch's maple polls, from the planting of which the name of Elm street was transmogrified into Maplewood avenue, are all dead. They are well boxed in by nicely-painted protectors. It is too late now, but someone suggests that scarlet beans be planted there next spring, so as to be ornamental. In the meantime some of the ancient elms at the head of the street, planted by the old colonial set, still survive.

Friday evening about six o'clock, as Mr. J. R. Connell was getting into his dogcart in front of his store, the horse started back, running the vehicle against a two-seated carriage which was passing, with such force as to badly twist one of its wheels, disabling it. The carriage contained a number of ladies and gentlemen from Rye; the ladies were much frightened, but no one was hurt, and another carriage was procured at one of the stables for the trip back to the beach.

The Eastern Star of Aug. 24th says: "While a trunk belonging to Joseph Vance, checked to Kennebunk, was on the platform at the Portsmouth depot, Wednesday, a young man came along, took a couple of checks from his pocket, changed the one already on the trunk for one of his, and walked away. As it happened, the station agent saw the whole proceeding and immediately telegraphed to Kennebunk. The trunk was put off at Kennebunk, and the aforesaid young man also got off to claim it, but he saw an officer standing in such close proximity to it that he became frightened, boarded the train and escaped."

Says the Kennebunk Star of last week: "A large and enthusiastic audience listened to Solon Chase at West Buxton, Wednesday evening, who argued the tariff question from the farmer's standpoint, and showed to the satisfaction of his listeners that the protection of our industries is necessary to maintain a home market for the farmer's products. His very happy and pertinent illustrations by means of 'them' and 'sweet corn and pork' brought out the applause of his audience." Uncle Solon and his steers will be remembered for the prominent part they took in the greenback campaign in Maine ten or a dozen years ago.

Charles H. P. Storer of Kennebunk, who was badly injured by being thrown from a team in Biddeford on the evening of Aug. 22d, and later was reported to have died, was still alive on Thursday afternoon, the 23d. On that day the doctors raised the broken portion of the skull, taking out five pieces of bone which were bearing on the brain, one of them being the arch of the eye, and another a piece of the frontal bone which extended in toward the brain nearly an inch. It was thought possible by the doctors that he might recover from this operation, in which case his right leg would have to be amputated, it being badly broken above and below the knee.

Three Summer Dangers.

Three summer dangers menace the household and traveller at every turn. They are climate, food and water. To guard against them requires judgment, abstinance, and SANFORD'S GINGER.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer complaints, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of cholera morbus,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

As a pure fruit stimulant for the aged, mentally and physically overworked, for delicate females, especially mothers, and as a means of reforming those addicted to an excessive use of alcoholic stimulates, it is invaluable.

◆ Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

◆ Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists and dealers on those who call for and desire only

More than twenty years ago Adamson's Botanic Balsam was introduced generally throughout New England as a remedy for Coughs, Colds and Pulmonary complaints. Since its introduction it has constantly won its way into public favor, until now it is the universal decision that ADAMSON'S BOTANIC BALSAM is the best remedy for curing Coughs, Colds and Asthma.

Eating House in Berlin.

I visited an eating house in Berlin which for primitiveness is rather ahead of anything else I have seen in the world. The dining table consisted of a log in which eighteen cavities appeared at regular intervals. Each cavity was of about the size of a large soup bowl, and fastened near every one was a big iron spoon attached to the log by an iron chain. The method of dining was neither complicated nor prolonged. A table d'hote dinner, consisting of one course, which, by the way, was the only dinner served in the house, cost five pfennigs—about one cent and a quarter of our coin. The diner enters and planks down his money before taking his seat. Then he chooses one of the broad cavities, seizes the iron spoon and waits for the waiter. That functionary is usually a sort of a Pooh-Bah, combining in himself the duties of cashier, proprietor, head waiter and bouncer in chief.

After the guest is seated the waiter walks up to him bearing two steaming cans and asks, shortly: "Thick or clear soup?" The diner usually, after sniffing the fumes of the cans and giving the matter weighty consideration, makes his decision, and then the factotum fills up the nearest cavity with soup, turns on his heel and washes his hands of all further consideration. I did not gain the impression from a casual inspection that the waiter had ever washed his hands in any other than a figurative sense. The diner scoops the soup out of the hole in the log with his iron spoon, and, having thus dined wisely and well, is promptly ordered out by the bouncer in chief. There is no lingering over an after dinner cigar, nuts, raisins, fruit or coffee. The expedition of the meal is its most striking characteristic, except, perhaps, its simplicity.—Blakely Hall in New York Sun.

At the Picture Dealer's.

It was in a picture dealer's. Some people are irreverent enough to call such places art stores. Well, perhaps, most of them might be called curiosity shops, but still "art store" does not seem to be a happy combination of names. How that word "store" has risen in dignity of late years! It is the gradual spead of democratic ideas, which unfortunately seem to lower the highest as well as elevate the lowest. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say they made a common level between high and low. High art as it was known is disappearing anyway. The only high art nowadays is making money, and that is why picture dealing is a higher artistic profession than picture painting. The errand boy of the establishment was making himself useful around the place. Several ladies had strolled in to look at the pictures, without any intention of buying, which perhaps disgusted the errand boy. A picture of the Magdalen stood on an easel.

"Ah!" said one of the ladies, going up to it and viewing it critically, "That is Mary Magdalen, isn't it?"

"I don't know if it is Mary Magdalen," said the boy.

The proprietor happened to be standing close by.

"Don't you know that is Mary Magdalen?"

"Well, Magdalen's 'nough, ain't it? It don't matter whether it's Susie or Jennie or Imogene Magdalen, does it? How should I know all those women's first names?"—San Francisco Chronicle.

Properties of Nitro-Glycerine.

So sensitive is nitro-glycerine to concussion and percussion, that if it be dropped only a few feet or struck even a slight blow it will explode. An example of this wonderful property of the stuff occurred a few years ago in Panama, when the sudden ignition of a quantity of it converted a wharf and a warehouse into a mass of unrecognizable fragments, inflicted damage to the extent of about a million dollars and suddenly ended a number of lives.

Careful investigations soon demonstrated that the change which converts a harmless substance like glycerine into such a tremendous explosive is made by the substitution of molecules of nitrogen and oxygen for atoms of hydrogen in the original compound. When this is done with great care and the process is carried through the last stage, the resultant liquid is nothing more than a vast mass of gas held together by the weakest and most unstable bonds.—New York Mail and Exores.

Underwear of Pure Wool.

Talking of the Jaeger system, Dr. R. C. Rutherford said: "The spread of Dr. Jaeger's sanitary ideas in this country has been little short of miraculous. Of course, years ago, the theory had been advanced by others that the most healthful raiment was that woven from animal fiber, but Jaeger was the first to enthusiastically work out this theory in its practical details. I myself, for two years, have worn nothing, save collars and cuffs, that is not of pure woolen material, and I have derived appreciable benefit from it. The main reliance of the system is on the indisputable fact that it is the property of animal fibers to exhale and diffuse all excretions of the body with which they may become impregnated, while cotton, linen or silken fabrics retain them for an indefinite period. Underwear of absolutely unadulterated wool needs to be washed but seldom. Simply hanging it in an air current suffices to render it pure and sweet. On the other hand, if you leave clean and newly washed linen or cotton garments in a drawer they will absorb the almost imperceptible odors of the atmosphere, and in a short time need what the housekeepers call a good 'airing' before they can be used."—The Epoch.

The Bane of the Dentists.

Neuralgia and abscesses are the bane of the dentists. Patients come to them with their faces swollen to twice their natural size and as sensitive to the touch as a gouty foot, and will insist upon having the tooth taken out at once. They are in misery and must have relief. In vain the dentist assures them of the impossibility of an operation. They insist and he protests. He dare not suggest the idea of leaving the extra amount of cheek in the office with him for a week or until it subsides, and so he probably attempts a lancing operation that may be successful or otherwise, as the case may be, but the patient is appeased, and that is the chief result to be desired.—Chicago Herald.

It is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any free trader could employ now.—London Times.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

"The World Moves,"

Maintained Galileo, when his tormentors racked him for advocating the true system of Copernicus. Certain follies hold out, however, against the illumination of discovery and experience. There are hosts of people who, because they have adopted certain principles, continue to swallow them to their dying day in defiance of the laws of common sense. Mercury, drastric purgatives, super-potent narcotics and sedatives, though they have given ground before the irresistible progress of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a national, painless remedy for disorders of the liver, the stomach and the bowels, still continue to make ambulating apothecary shops of many stomachs. The symptoms of liver trouble are easily remediable without any abdominal disturbance with this beneficent alterative. So also are constipation, sick headache, heartburn and an inability to digest satisfactorily. It cures fever and ague, rheumatism and kidney trouble.

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

Congress have repeatedly, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

When we consider the patronage of this great office, [the presidency,] the allurements of power, the temptation to retain place once gained, and more than all, the availability a party finds in an incumbent whom a horde of office holders, with a zeal born of benefits and fostered by the hope of favors yet to come, stand ready to aid with money and trained political service, we recognize in the eligibility of the president for re-election a most serious danger to that calm, deliberate and intelligent political action, which must characterize a government by the people.—Grover Cleveland.

Mr. Cleveland demands in effect that there shall be a tariff for revenue purposes only. No tinkering with the tariff will suffice; no readjustment of duties will do. The only reform that common sense can accept of is one which unaffectedly substitutes the principle of unimpeded imports for that of tariff regulations.—London Standard.

Success of the Artist.

The commonest error into which a critic can fall is the remark we so often hear that such and such an artist's work is "careless" and "would be better had more labor been spent upon it." As often as not this is wholly untrue. As soon as the spectator can see that "more labor has been spent upon it" he may be sure that the picture is to that extent incomplete and unfinished, while the look of freshness that is inseparable from a really successful picture would of necessity be absent. If the high finish of a picture is so apparent as immediately to force itself upon the spectator he may know that it is not as it should be; and from the moment that the artist feels his work is becoming a labor he may depend upon it it will be without freshness, and to that extent without the merit of a true work of art. Work should always look, as though it had been done with ease, however elaborate; what we see should appear to have been done without effort, whatever may be the agonies beneath the surface. M. Meissonier surpasses all his predecessors, as well as all his contemporaries, in the quality of high finish, but what you see is evidently done easily and without labor.

I remember Thackeray saying to me, concerning a certain chapter in one of his books that the critics agreed in accusing of carelessness, "Careless? If I've written that chapter once I've written it a dozen times—and each time worse than the last!"—a proof that labor did not assist in his case. When an artist fails it is not so much from carelessness—to do his best is not only profitable to him, but a joy. But it is not given to every man—not, indeed, to any—to succeed whenever and however he tries. The best painter that ever lived never entirely succeeded more than four or five times; that is to say, no artist ever painted more than four or five masterpieces, however high his general average may have been, for such success depends on the coincidence, not only of genius and inspiration, but of health and mood and a hundred other mysterious contingencies.—Sir John Everett Millias in Magazine of Art.

The Great Lick Telescope.

A very important event for the little city of San Jose, Cal., is the completion of the Lick observatory. This is the result of the generosity and the appreciation of the benefits of science of James Lick, one of the pioneers of California, who died in 1876 at an advanced age. He went to California in 1847 with a small capital, and by investing it wisely soon became, by the growth of San Francisco and the development of the state, a manifold millionaire. In 1873, at the age of 77, Mr. Lick conceived the idea of erecting an observatory and placing therein the finest, as well as the largest, telescope in the world. For this purpose he donated $700,000. After years of preliminary work and detail the terms of the gift have been completed and Santa Clara county, Cal., is the location of the finest instrument ever made. The great telescope is seventy-five feet long and has a thirty-six inch refractor. As a fitting climax to this magnificent bequest, it may be stated that the body of James Lick is deposited in the pier upon which the iron framework of the great telescope stands. Although known to the world as a cold, self contained and exceedingly erratic man, Mr. Lick has left a monument of his broad liberality which is not exceeded by anything on the face of the earth.—Detroit Free Press.

Diphtheria from Pet Cats.

In a recent issue of The London Sanitary Record I read a startling account of the manner in which a pet cat unquestionably communicated diphtheria from one family to another with sad and fatal results. A little boy was taken ill with what ultimately turned out to be fatal diphtheria. On the first day of the sickness, when the little fellow was taken with nausea, the cat licked the vomit on the floor. In a few days, the little boy having died, the cat was noticed to be ill, and her suffering being so severe, and so similar to those of the dead boy, the owner had the animal killed. During its illness the cat had been let out into the barnyard of nights, as usual. A few days later the cat of a neighbor, also let out at night, was noticed to be ill. The second animal, which, however, recovered, was the pet and playmate of four little girls, who, grieved at its illness, nursed it with great care. All four of the little girls were seized with diphtheria and died, and their mother is satisfied that they got it from the cat. It is easy to imagine how a cat can catch diphtheria or other infectious diseases, when it is remembered how often milk or other unused food from the sick room is given to the cat, or by some people thrown into the back yard for the cats of the neighborhood.—Dr. Frank J. Lutz in Globe-Democrat.

A Point of Honor.

In Burmah people of superior rank must not dishonor themselves by passing underneath persons of inferior rank; thus a nobleman must not pass through a passage when a servant is occupied in a chamber above. In Indoo-China this opinion is most extensively held. If it were not so strongly prevalent two storied houses would be far more common. When a case is being heard on an upper floor and a woman has to be examined, the whole court will adjourn to the room below rather than bring a female above the heads of persons who may chance to be on the ground floor. A Buddhist priest—as superior in rank to a layman—even on a friendly visit, will decline to enter a two storied building. The populous capital of Siam is intersected by numerous canals, which are crossed by many bridges; but these bridges are so constructed that the roadways in the center can be removed. If the king is to pass along a particular route notice is sent beforehand to the authorities, and the roadways are actually removed till his majesty has gone by, in order that no subject may stand upon the bridge while the sovereign is passing beneath.—Once a Week.

Refitting Old Shirts.

A gentleman's outfitter in London advertises to fit old shirts with new fronts, collars and wristbands. This is not so economical as it sounds, for it implies that the shirt is of linen, not of the tender and fragile cotton by which the collar, cuffs and front of the American shirt are most often held together.

WOES OF A TELEGRAPHER.

Trouble During a Thunderstorm—Messages Not Easily Disciphered.

"And you imagine we fellows have a slick time of it, eh?" said an operator at the Western Union Telegraph office. "Well, you are away off. An operator's life, especially this sort of weather, isn't altogether a pleasant one, when he has got to use a fan with one hand and a pen with the other."

"How many words do operators usually write a minute?"

"An expert operator has to write on an average from thirty to forty-five words, and sometimes more, according to the ability of the transmitter at the other end of the wire. If the sender is a first class man he can make it very uncomfortable for the receiving operator by sending so fast that he won't have time to dip his pen in the ink bottle, not if it were buttoned to his bosom. Then in a thunder storm the lightning interferes a good deal with the operator's transmitting. The receiving operator, if his ability allows it, can readily get along by guessing, but he has to be very careful, or any mistake that he may make will cause his salary to be somewhat diminished at the end of the month on account of having to pay the cost of the message, or a few hundred dollars more. No, sir, an operator's life is not one of pleasure, as is the general impression. It's one of continual worry, and is strictly business."

"How do operators usually learn the business?"

"A first class operator frequently starts out as 'messenger,' and through his own perseverance gradually learns the 'ropes,' and, if he is ambitious enough, he finally becomes an operator. He may not then be fully up to the standard. He's got to become accustomed to different styles of messages, such as 'social business' and 'cipher.' Any first class operator can sit down and write cipher after cipher, with the experience he has had with this economic and costly style of telegraphing. For instance, in an everyday style like this: 'How melons ripe enough to pluck?' or 'Cotton's easier, market steadier, cotton coming in lively,' is all easy enough, but when the messages get this way: 'Somnambulistic echu, buy hundred bales middling,' and it is mixed at the other end to read, 'Summon an ambulance, try hounded pills, middling, etc.,' or 'send me firfrix tollar, I vas ousagsnelt,' it's not quite so easy. The operator looks at such a message, turns it different ways, and either carries it back for 'reconstruction,' or lets it go as written. Then again, 'I wasn't yez coom right doon on the wire' no doubt means, wants him to reply by wire. When he gets such a message the operator is in another 'pickle' what to do.

"In 'cipher' and 'cables,' though, such risks cannot be taken, as it might involve thousands of dollars, and as the operator's finances are nominal, he cannot take the risk.

"There are also stock quotations that are important, oftentimes more so than the cipher messages. A quotation comes along. The merchant does not intend to invest until he is certain that the quotation has been correctly received. An operator or the telegraph company cannot always be held responsible for misspelled or badly written messages."

"How should a message be written to insure prompt dispatch and quick delivery?"

"It should first be plainly written, every word and figure spelled out. Paper is plentiful and can be generously utilized for this important purpose."—New York Graphic.

Use of Foreign Titles.

The "intelligent foreigner" is highly amused at the ludicrous custom adopted by some of our "leading" London papers of giving the German title "Herr" indiscriminately to Teutonic, Slavonic and even non-Aryan gentlemen. One finds it natural that the uneducated masses do not know the difference between a "Roossian" and a "Proessian;" but when our leading lights fall into the same error it is difficult not to smile at their ignorance. Nobody will find fault with any of our "dailies" for not securing the services of a Mezzofanti, but on the other hand, they should try to hide their want of knowledge, and not pose as learned in matters of which they are hopelessly ignorant. "Herr Tisza" or "Herr Ristich" looks exceedingly droll in English print; "Mons. Dragumis" perhaps less so. The rule which the papers seem to wish to follow is to give every gentleman his title. Well and good. But in that case they should write, if they wish to be polite, "Tisza ur," "Pan Ristich," "Kyrios Dragumis," etc., or drop the title altogether if they do not know it.—Notes and Queries.

The Seeds of Berries.

A curious phenomenon, generally rare, and attributed to physiological idiosyncrasy, has this year been quite general. Thousands of persons have been mildly poisoned by eating strawberries. The act of eating fruit is a fine art not generally understood. Most people sit down to a repletion of the first fresh fruit that they can secure. When strawberries come they gorge themselves on that fruit for a month or more. There is no fruit that does not carry with it a special danger if over indulged in. The grape is probably healthiest of all, if the seeds are discarded. But berries have direct medicinal effect, either laxative or astringent while the seeds are irritants. The only conclusion is that people should exercise common sense about eating, that is if the common sense be as plentiful as the fruit.—Globe-Democrat.

Military Balloons in Use.

The actual practice of military ballooning is now being carried on by Italian forces in the Soudan to a considerable extent, and this question of obtaining the gas for the balloons has caused not a little trouble. The hydrogen required has been manufactured at Naples and taken to the seat of war in steel tubes, each of which is about 5 5-8 inches in diameter by 4 feet 7 1-2 inches long, the walls being about 5 5-8 inches thick. The hydrogen is produced by action on iron turnings with dilute sulphuric acid, and is pumped into these tubes at a pressure of 1,919 pounds per square inch. Forty of the tubes are needed in inflating a single balloon.—New Orleans Picayune.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

Assessing the Office-Holders.

Colonel Charles D. Lewis, treasurer of the democratic state committee of Massachusetts, and also the Massachusetts member of the democratic national committee, issued a circular letter to the employes of the Boston post-office on Saturday, soliciting contributions of funds to assist the state committee in conducting "an active and vigorous campaign." The circular is plainly printed in bold, clear type, except that Colonel Lewis' signature is made in purple ink with a rubber hand-stamp. Accompanying the circular letter is an addressed and stamped envelope in which the anticipated contributions can be inclosed. Inquiry at the post-office Saturday afternoon revealed the fact that the circular had been sent to the employes indiscriminately, high and low, men and women. The circular reads as follows:

BOSTON, Aug. 25, 1888.

Dear Sir—The pending presidential campaign is of great importance to the country. Every voter ought to be interested in the result. The state committee desires to conduct an active and vigorous campaign in this state, and to enable it to carry out such intention and to defray current and other legitimate expenses which must necessarily be incurred, the financial assistance and support of all supporters of the administration in the state are required and needed. The committee urgently appeals to and solicits you, as one interested in promoting the success of the present administration, to contribute such an amount of money as you may feel inclined to give for these purposes. Please send your contributions to Charles D. Lewis, treasurer, 259 Washington street, Boston. Respectfully yours, CHARLES D. LEWIS, Treasurer.

Plenty of Boodle.

Where, Oh! where, is the civil service gone? The president in his extremity gives $10,000 for the democratic campaign fund, and the members of the cabinet, following his example, give according to their salaries. All officers are expected to contribute pro rata. "As the old cock crows, the young ones learn."

Gen. Butler to Speak.

Gen. B. F. Butler, having been requested by a number of prominent republicans and democrats of Massachusetts to deliver a public address on the tariff and the fishery question, has accepted the invitation, and named Tremont Temple, Boston, as the place, and Friday evening, Aug. 31st, as the time, for the address. Among the signers of the request was Judge Josiah G. Abbott, late democratic candidate for governor of Massachusetts.

Railroad Men's Strike.

The locomotive engineers, firemen, brakemen and switchmen on the Peoria, Decatur & Evansville, the Evansville & Terra Haute, the Evansville & Indianapolis and the Evansville Belt railroads, about 500 miles in all, went on a strike last Sunday afternoon. The immediate cause of the trouble was the refusal of President Mackey to discharge F. C. Smith, master mechanic of the Peoria, Decatur & Evansville road at Mattoon, Ill. They claim that Smith is overbearing and unreasonable, and they are unable to agree with him.

Waterman Irons, an aged merchant of Providence, R. I., was robbed in his leather store Friday afternoon, and injured so badly that he died that night. "Spike" Murphy and a companion have been arrested for the crime.

HUNTING IN ALASKA.

Killing a Bear—Indian Superstition—A Deer Hunt—A Night Camp.

After tracking two days my companion and myself secured two natives as guides, and, leaving the river, set off for the mountains. At the end of the first day's tramp we sighted a black bear feeding upon berries about a mile distant. We were both so exhausted from our tiresome walk across the tundra that we concluded to send one of the guides after the bear. The Indian first seated himself and examined his rifle, selecting three cartridges and placing them in the gun. He then pulled a few hairs from his clothing, which he threw in the air to ascertain the direction of the wind, and then started so as to come up to leeward of the bear. We kept careful watch through a glass, and saw him on hands and knees work slowly toward the animal. When within 150 yards he fired two shots. The bear jumped and fell almost in his tracks.

There are probably no more superstitious people in the world than the northern Alaska Indians. Every action of their daily life is governed by some belief handed down from father to son, or originated by the shaman, the Indian doctor, who holds great sway over them. The ceremonies attending the killing of the bear will illustrate. Bruin was first placed upon his back with the head toward the mountains. The head was then skinned, severed from the body and taken by one of the natives, who, placing himself astride of the dead animal, raised and lowered the head three times, touching the bear just over the heart each time and muttering some incantation. The third time he threw it from him, uttering a loud shout in which the other natives joined. This was done to drive the bear's spirit to the mountains so that it would cause them no future trouble. A part of the dead animal had to be left on the spot where he was killed, or the hunters would get no deer that season. A camp was made at the place, and after the head had been roasted and picked clean it was placed in the top of a high tree, but for what purpose they would not tell. The skin was stretched flat upon the tundra—fur side down. The portion of the bear not consumed was placed in a tree and a rude scarecrow made to keep away birds. The following winter the skin and meat were sledged for and found in good condition.

A deer hunt which we witnessed was so different from our previous conceptions that I think it worthy a description. Upon this occasion, while sleighing with a party of Indians, a herd of deer was sighted. The natives took their rifles and started, some going in one direction and some in another, but all keeping to leeward of the deer. Those who went directly toward the herd waited until the others had got partly around before starting. The first shot was the signal, whereupon all hands rushed toward the frightened animals, who separated and plunged blindly in every direction. The Indians shouted, making all the noise possible, the fleeing animals in their fear mistaking Indians for deer and rushing on until a shot showed them their error, when they would turn and flee as blindly as before. Even after the first fright they circled around the danger, trying to get together, and in this way many more were killed. As much meat as could be carried was loaded upon the sled, while the remainder was cached in the snow, be sledged for at some future time.

After a hard day's march, a camp was established, it being then too dark to travel. The dogs are first unharnessed, and chained separately to bushes to prevent fighting. After an hour's rest they are fed upon dried fish, this being the only meal they receive in twenty-four hours. They are given all they can eat, unless the supply is short, and in such cases their endurance is wonderful, a small piece of fish once a day sufficing a dog and enabling him to work for a couple of weeks. A great many interesting facts could be given illustrating the sagacity and endurance of these animals. As a rule they have no affection. They recognize the person who feeds them as their master, but they obey only through fear. They are more than half wolf, as all young wolves caught are raised and used as dogs. In every team there is generally one dog who constitutes himself master. He is naturally one of the most powerful of the number, and the others seem to recognize his supremacy. This dog, upon seeing any one of the others habitually shirking while the rest are pulling, will attempt to reach and punish him, and if it is impossible to do so while in harness, will deliberately go to him when the day's sledging is finished and administer the deserved chastisement.

In establishing a night camp when in a wooded country, the most sheltered spot is selected and a pit is dug in the snow about fifteen feet in diameter and a foot deep. The bottom is then stamped down to make a hard floor. Around this pit is built a wall about four feet high, by laying young spruce trees on top of one another and cutting off their inside branches. This wall has two openings or breaks diametrically opposed, dividing the pits into halves with a through passageway separating them. Along this way, which must always face the wind, dried wood is piled and fired. On either side pine boughs are laid on the snow, and on top of them the sleeping bags. Such night camps are easily made, and the coldest nights can be comfortably passed in them. The only drawback is the difficulty in getting the wood.

In conclusion, the Indians of Alaska have been reported as savage and treacherous. In my experience I found the natives of interior northern Alaska the most kind and hospitable people in the world.—W. L. Howard in Popular Science Monthly.

Character of Dreams.

Any marked increase in the number or change in the character of dreams should be seriously considered. They are sometimes the precursors of a general nervous and mental prostration. In such cases habits of diet and exercise, work and rest, should be examined. If dreams which depress the nervous energies and render sleep unrefreshing occur frequently, medical counsel should be taken. The habit of remembering and narrating dreams is pernicious; to act upon them is to surrender rational self control.—J. M. Buckley in The Century.

Dyspepsia

Makes the lives of many people miserable, and often leads to self-destruction. Distress after eating, sour stomach, sick headache, heartburn, loss of appetite, a faint, "all gone" feeling, bad taste, coated tongue, and irregularity of the bowels, are some of the more common symptoms. Dyspepsia does not get well of itself. It requires careful, persistent attention, and a remedy like Hood's Sarsaparilla, which acts gently, yet surely and efficiently. It tones the stomach and other organs, regulates the digestion, creates a good appetite, and by thus overcoming the local symptoms removes the sympathetic effects of the disease, banishes the headache, and refreshes the tired mind.

Distress After Eating Sick Headache Heart-burn Sour Stomach

"I have been troubled with dyspepsia. I had but little appetite, and what I did eat distressed me, or did me little good. In an hour after eating I would experience a faintness, or tired, all-gone feeling, as though I had not eaten anything. My trouble, I think, was aggravated by my business, which is that of a painter, and from being more or less shut up in a room with fresh paint. Last spring I took Hood's Sarsaparilla—took three bottles. It did me an immense amount of good. It gave me an appetite, and my food relished and satisfied the craving I had previously experienced." PEARLINE

Goes right to the heart of

Dirt and Filth

Pearline makes everything as clean as possible, in less time, with less labor, with less wear and tear on yourself or the objects cleaned, and at less expense than anything else known. And this accounts for its wonderful growth and popularity. Used all over the United States. Every woman who does her own work will appreciate its wonderful aid by giving it one fair trial. Every woman who keeps a servant should supply that servant with PEARLINE—the result will be a better servant, better work and more of it, and a mistress better satisfied.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or "the same as Pearline." It's false—they are not, and besides are dangerous. PEARLINE is never peddled, but sold by all good grocers. Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

MUSIC HALL.

"Humbug" is a radical comedy. It is entirely funny, and one of the cleverest things about it is the manner in which the fun is made cumulative. Thus the second act is funnier than the first, the third than the second. It is also ingenious—the situations being new, the complications novel and in the amplest measure laughable, and the movement natural and logical. The question of probability hardly enters into the question of current comedy. "Humbug" is a noteworthy piece of writing. Mr. Reed's character is that of a shifty, good natured humbug, who poses as Jack Luster; his performance is characterized by the dash which made his work in "Cheek" so popular, but it is an impersonation on a higher plane, and will be likely to stand the test of time as a well-defined creation—a figure of the comic drama with meat on it, not a wooden man that is moved only when the string is pulled.—Detroit Free Press.

At Music hall Wednesday evening; tickets at Goodrich's; see advertisement.

DR. WEED'S CASE.

The trial was resumed on the morning of the 27th. The county attorney called Dr. Weed to the stand for a moment, and the latter testified that in his call at Peter Bennett's the morning after the robbery he took no vial of medicine from the mantelpiece.

Judson E. Oakes of New York, who has figured quite prominently in the testimony, took the stand and said that he never introduced Whitney and Weed; he had known Whitney for two years, but never entered into any scheme with him and Dr. Weed to rob Peter Bennett. Etta Oakes, wife of the preceding witness, swore that when Whitney called at their house on the Sunday noon before the robbery nothing was said about Bennett or his money.

BASE BALL.

The Portsmouth club speaks in the highest terms of Feen's pitching at Worcester last Saturday.

Householder, our first baseman, was change catcher of the Richmond, Va., club, when Tate, Johnson, Nash, Higgins and Glenn, now of the Bostons, were members.

The finest game of the season was played on the South street grounds Monday afternoon, between the Manchester and Portsmouth clubs, and was won by the home club, score two to one. Between five and six hundred persons witnessed the game. Mahoney umpired, and there was no dispute over his decisions. The score:

The Portsmouth and Manchester clubs left this city by the Pullman train Monday evening for Bangor, Me., where they will play with each other, and with the Lowell club, to and including Friday, during the continuance of the Maine state fair, the clubs receiving a guaranty and expenses. The clubs will return on Friday evening, and on Saturday the Manchesters will play in Lowell and the Worcesters in this city.

FIX IT UP.

The old North cemetery, near the railroad station, is in a most disgraceful condition. The grass has not been cut this year, and the weeds have grown rank and gone to seed all over the enclosure. Strangers who are attracted thither to search the tombstones for historic names are amazed at the neglected appearance of the hallowed spot, as they pick their way through the tangled mass of running vines, raspberry bushes, milkweed and goldenrod. We believe Alderman M. J. Griffin is paid for taking care of this cemetery, and he should be required to earn his money.—Penny Post.

The Chronicle has annually published items similar to the above for several years past, but the ancient cemetery has continued to be a disgrace to the city right along. And we suppose it will continue to be. What matters it that scores of men whose names are a part of the early history of the nation lie buried there? They can't vote.

A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.

There came near being a "scrap" in front of the Kearsarge house Saturday night, but the police got there.—Times, Aug. 27th.

From 10:49 to 12:10 on Saturday night, scores of people witnessed a slugging match between two well-known "toughs" at the junction of Vaughan and Congress streets. The battle raged from the Kearsarge house to Yeaton's grocery; during that time, with all the tumult made, no policeman appeared, and the combatants had ample opportunity to settle their difficulty. Where were the "guardians of the night" when this disgraceful battle occurred?—Penny Post, Aug. 27th.

BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION.

Mrs Olive Folsom Hoyt, of Newington, celebrated the 85th anniversary of her birthday on Tuesday, Aug. 21st. Mrs. Hoyt's maiden name was Coleman, and she was sister to Phinehas Coleman, who died some ten or twelve years ago, and Enoch T. Coleman, deceased within about a year. Her husband, the late Hanson Hoyt of Newington, has been dead over twenty-five years, and she lives with her youngest son, Thomas Benton Hoyt; she has five children living, four sons and one daughter. She has kept a diary ever since she was married, nearly sixty years; it is very interesting, and often referred to by the townspeople for data.

There were present on Tuesday evening Darius Frink and wife, the latter a sister of Mrs. Hoyt, aged sixty-four years; Gilbert Hoyt and Joseph S. Hoyt, sons of the old lady, and their wives; James William Hoyt, another son, his wife and two daughters; Mrs. Ann S. Frink, the oldest daughter of Mrs. Hoyt, and her son Cyrus Frink, and his wife; two other sisters, Mrs. Sarah Ann Langdon, aged eighty-three, and Mrs. Hannah Newton, aged seventy-five; James Winkley Hoyt, son-in-law of the old lady; Delia Wiggins and Hortense Wiggins; and T. Benton Hoyt and family.

Refreshments were served, and a very pleasant evening was passed. Mrs. Hoyt, though feeling some effects of advanced age, shows less of them than many younger women; is cheerful and contented, and able to enjoy life and aid others to enjoy it.

PERSONAL.

Miss Addie L. Newman of Farmington is visiting at John H. Walton's, Rock street.

Mrs. Geo. H. Russell and daughter of Bellows Falls, Vt., are visiting Sailmaker James W. Wingate, U. S. N., and family, of Austin street.

Mr. Wm. F. Hudson and wife, of this city, are visiting a sister of Mrs. Hudson at Lebanon, this state.

Mercer Goodrich, Esq., city clerk, has gone to Boston and New York on a vacation of a week or ten days. Mr. Samuel R. Gardner, city clerk, will attend to his duties during his absence.

Col. Taylor of the Boston Globe, with a party of ladies and gentlemen, was at the Isles of Shoals on Sunday in his yacht the Ocean Gem. The party were entertained by Hon. Charles Levi Woodbury as his guests.

Misses Jennie Coffin, Anna Marr, Mamie Fields, Lizzie A. Entwistle, Nellie Magraw and Edith Jellison left on Saturday for Scarborough beach, Me., for a two weeks' vacation.

A letter was received in this city from Mr. Albert A. Drake by his father, Mr. W. Irving Drake, last week. Mr. Albert A. Drake has been absent from this city about a year, during which time he has travelled through many of the extreme western states and territories, now being located in Washington territory. He describes Salt Lake City as being a fine city, well arranged, and in good order and condition at present.

ENGINEERS' ASSIGNMENTS.

The new board of fire engineers met and organized on Saturday evening last. First Assistant Jackson will assume direct control of the Hook and Ladder truck; Assistant Gray, of steamer No. 2; Assistant Sampson, of steamer No. 3; and Assistant Shannon, of steamer No. 4.

George H. Marden, a native of this city, died at his residence in Charlestown, Mass., last Friday, at the age of seventy-four years. He was a prominent resident of that place, for many years a member of the school board, a conspicuous member of the Masonic fraternity for nearly half a century, and a member of the Congregational church. His funeral took place in Charlestown on Sunday afternoon.

Pears' is the purest and best Soap made.

Housekeepers should try Preston's Flavoring Extracts.

Every room at the Appledore house was occupied on Saturday and Sunday nights, and the help were obliged to vacate their rooms to accommodate the guests. This was something unusual, so late in the season, even at that popular resort.

Several young men who were riding around town in a two-seated carriage, about six o'clock Saturday evening, drove down Congress street at a high rate of speed, circumnavigated the drinking fountain in the middle of the Parade without checking the speed of the horse, and were almost on the straight course up Congress street again when the off wheels of the carriage collapsed. Bystanders stopped the horse, and the young fellows got out of the carriage and led him away, leaving the wreck alongside the curbstone.

Sunday was one of the most uncomfortable days of the season in this city, the mercury reaching par in the shade. At the Shoals it was very comfortable to sit in the sun on the rocks.

The president has subscribed $10,000 to the fund to re-elect Grover Cleveland as president. He subscribed $50 for the relief of the sufferers by the South Carolina earthquake.

Several wagons from the Agamenticus district of York, with baskets for sale, were on the Parade on Monday. The Agamenticus baskets, made wholly by hand, are the equal of anything of the kind in the market, for finish and strength.

If the Cleveland-Bayard fishery treaty was so favorable to the American fishermen as the administration supporters would have us believe, why is it that the Canadians breathe forth threatenings and slaughter because a republican senate rejected it?

B. F. Vittum of Dover will this fall erect near the sea wall at Wells beach a cottage for his own occupancy next summer; and it is alleged that fifteen other summer cottages will be built at that beach before the opening of next season's summer travel. Sixteen cottages at one beach, and that beach a hitherto much neglected one, is a large order; but the story may be true for all that.

The sultry weather of Monday forenoon was relieved toward evening by a fine bracing breeze from the northwest.

Landlord Grant of the Sea Cottage, York beach, was in this city on Monday on business connected with his hotel, and reported the house filled with company, some of which is likely to remain for several weeks.

A Famous Doctor

Once said that the secret of good health consisted in keeping the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels open. Had this eminent physician lived in our day, and known the merits of Ayer's Pills as an aperient, he would certainly have recommended them, as so many of his distinguished successors are doing.

The celebrated Dr. Farnsworth, of Norwich, Conn., recommends Ayer's Pills as the best of all remedies for "Intermittent Fevers."

Dr. I. E. Fowler, of Bridgeport, Conn., says: "Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."

Dr. Mayhew, of New Bedford, Mass., says: "Having prescribed many thousands of Ayer's Pills, in my practice, I can unhesitatingly pronounce them the best cathartic in use."

The Massachusetts State Assayer, Dr. A. A. Hayes, certifies: "I have made a careful analysis of Ayer's Pills. They contain the active principles of well-known drugs, isolated from inert matter, which plan is, chemically speaking, of great importance to their usefulness. It insures activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. Ayer's Pills contain no metallic or mineral substance, but the virtues of vegetable remedies in skillful combination."

Three Summer Dangers.

Three summer dangers menace the household and traveller at every turn. They are climate, food and water. To guard against them requires judgment, abstinance, and SANFORD'S GINGER.

SANFORD'S GINGER, compounded of Imported Ginger, Choice Aromatics, and French Brandy, convenient, speedy and safe, instantly relieves cramps and pains, speedily checks all forms of summer complaints, prevents indigestion, destroys disease germs in water drunk, restores the circulation and digestion when suspended by a chill,—a frequent cause of cholera morbus,—breaks up colds and fevers, and wards off malarial, contagious, and epidemic influences.

As a pure fruit stimulant for the aged, mentally and physically overworked, for delicate females, especially mothers, and as a means of reforming those addicted to an excessive use of alcoholic stimulates, it is invaluable.

Never travel without SANFORD'S GINGER.

Beware of worthless "gingers" offensively urged by mercenary druggists and dealers on those who call for and desire only

LICENSE YOUR DOGS.

SECTION 1. No dog shall be permitted to go at large or loose in this city until the owner or keeper of such dog, or the keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall have procured from the city marshal a license for such dog.

SECTION 5. It shall be the duty of the city marshal to cause all dogs to be killed which shall be found at large or loose within the city without a collar marked as required by law, and to cause all dogs so killed to be buried, and any person may lawfully kill any dog found within the limits of this city going at large contrary to the provisions of this chapter.

SECTION 6. In case any dog shall be found loose or going at large contrary to any of the foregoing provisions, or in case any dog not licensed shall be provided with a collar marked as required in this ordinance, the owner or keeper thereof or the head of the family or keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall upon conviction thereof be fined five dollars.

The above extracts from the city ordinances of the city will be strictly enforced.

History of Honiton Lace.

Honiton lace has a curiously checkered history, with many fluctuations. It is said to have been first introduced by the Flemings, who took refuge in England to escape the persecutions of the Duke of Alva. Many Flemish names are still to be found in the neighborhood of Honiton, namely, Stocker, Murch, Maynard, Trump, etc. In 1660 there was such a demand for it that France thought it necessary to issue a royal ordinance providing that a mark should be affixed to imported English thread lace. Two great fires at Honiton in 1756 and 1767 gave the first check to its production. Queen Adelaide tried to revive it after twenty years of severe depression by ordering a skirt made of sprigs, copies of natural flower, commencing with the initials of her name; for a very debased and hideous set of patterns had come in. This does not seem to have produced a great revival of the trade, and when our present queen required her wedding lace it was found difficult to provide the workers, but eventually a dress worth £1,000 was made at the small fishing village of Beer.

The English royal family has been most constant patrons of Honiton lace, and has done immense good in keeping the trade alive. We will end by quoting a few quaint words from "Fuller's Devonshire Worthies," which sum up the plea for the revival: "Hereby many children who otherwise would be burdensome to the parish prove beneficial to their parents. Yea, many lame in their limbs, and impotent in their arms, if able in their fingers, gain a livelihood thereby; not to say that it saveth many thousands of pounds yearly formerly sent over seas to fetch lace in Flanders."—Saturday Review.

A Somnambulist's Feat.

A young gentleman of my acquaintance is walking about just now with what at first sight looks like a very bad case of sore throat. He carries his head twisted over his port shoulder and moves it as cautiously as if he thought the hinges were insecure. He is one of a firm of lawyers on Court street, and his business throws him in contact with many people every day. They usually ask him what is the matter, but such a question extracts nothing further than a grunt and the volunteered information that if he were not very busy he would be at home. This is a hint not to bother him, and I didn't. I got the story from another source. He is newly married to a charming young lady, and this, and the fact that he is yet young in the legal profession, and still feels remorse, tends to disturb his mind so that his slumbers are not very sound.

The other evening the bride was awakened by hearing a noise. A light was dimly burning, and by means of it she could see a tall, white figure standing on the footboard of the bed. She was going to scream, when she recognized her husband. "Charley," she cried, "what are you going to do?" "I think I'll take a dance, my dear," said he. And he did. He made a beautiful dive from the footboard of the bed into a Persian rug a few feet away. It took a long time for his wife to make him believe this story. He puts in most of his spare time now reading a book entitled "How to Cure Somnambulism."—Brooklyn Eagle.

New Varieties of Lilies.

There is a pretty Chinese fancy connected with these flowers, to the effect that if they blossom before a certain day the owner of them will live throughout the year. I was curious to know how many different kinds of lilies they have in China, and, chatting with the chief clerk of the state department on the subject, he kindly sent me the next day a roll of no less than twenty-five different kinds of lilies, hand painted in their natural color upon fine rice paper. Many of these are quite unknown in this country, while others are familiar.

The Chinese name for lily is uri, and they have such quaint given names as hagako, a beautiful scarlet flower; uba, a small white blossom; tepo, which is like the Bermuda ascension lily; sirato, a golden tiger lily; acasima, a small red lily; yama, a large white lily, the petals spotted with brownish red; takaginea, a double yellow lily; bene sugi, a large, highly decorated flower, the long white petals striped with magenta; koke, a purple lily; siro kanoko, a white tiger lily, and ya yeteuko, a tiger lily three times doubled! It will be seen from this that there are possibilities for florists in the direction of the development of new varieties of lilies which have not yet been seen in this country.—Fuller Walker in New York Graphic.

What Constitutes a Ration.

An order issued from army headquarters lays down this rule as to what a soldier's ration shall be:

"By direction of the secretary of war, paragraph 2,150 of the regulations, is amended to read as follows:

"2,150. A ration is the established daily allowance of food for one person. For the United States army it is now composed as follows: Twelve ounces of pork or bacon or canned beef (fresh or corned) or one pound and four ounces of fresh beef, or twenty-two ounces of salt beef; eighteen ounces of soft bread or flour, or sixteen ounces of hard bread, or one pound and four ounces of corn meal. To every 100 rations fifteen pounds of beans or peas, or ten pounds of rice or hominy; ten pounds of green coffee, or eight pounds of roasted (or roasted and ground) coffee, or two pounds of tea; fifteen pounds of sugar; four quarts of vinegar; one pound and eight ounces of adamantine or star candles; four pounds of soap; four pounds of salt; four ounces of pepper, and to troops in the field, when necessary, four pounds of yeast powder to the 100 rations of flour."—Chicago Times.

An Event of Importance.

The visit of the sultan of Morocco to Algiers in order to communicate by cable with his representative at the Madrid conference is an event of some historical importance. For years the sultan opposed the laying of this cable, as he did not wish to bring Europe any nearer to his domain. It is fifty years nearly since a sultan of Morocco has deigned to set foot in Tangiers, a seaport town polluted by the presence of many Europeans.—New York World.

In Connecticut there are 85,000 acres along the Sound shore devoted to oyster cultivation.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

The American election is infinitely more important to Englishmen than their own internal politics just at this juncture. * * * The main question at issue is English free trade against the continental system of protection.—London Times.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

It is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any free trader could employ now.—London Times.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

"The World Moves,"

Maintained Galileo, when his tormentors racked him for advocating the true system of Copernicus. Certain follies hold out, however, against the illumination of discovery and experience. There are hosts of people who, because they have adopted certain principles, continue to swallow them to their dying day in defiance of the laws of common sense. Mercury, drastic purgatives, super-potent narcotics and sedatives, though they have given ground before the irresistible progress of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a national, painless remedy for disorders of the liver, the stomach and the bowels, still continue to make ambulating apothecary shops of many stomachs. The symptoms of liver trouble are easily remediable without any abdominal disturbance with this beneficent alterative. So also are constipation, sick headache, heartburn and an inability to digest satisfactorily. It cures fever and ague, rheumatism and kidney trouble.

Rossi, the Italian tragedian, is said to be about to retire permanently from the stage.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Found Dead.

Last evening a person giving the name of G. R. Thompson registered at Hunt's Hotel, and desired to be called in season to take the 12 P. M. train for Chicago. Being unable to awaken him, the room was entered by means of the ventilator over the dood, when the gentleman was found to be dead. He was advertising agent for Sulpher Bitters, which has an extensive sale. The coroner returned a verdict of death from heart disease. His body will be sent east immediately.—Cin. Commercial.

She Tried and Knows.

A leading chemist of New York says: "No plasters of such merit as the Athlophoros Plasters have ever before been produced." They are a novelty because they are not made simply to sell cheap, they are the best that science, skill and money can produce, and will do what is claimed for them. For sprains, aches, weakness, lameness, etc., they are unequaled.

A band of female footpads has been discovered in Chicago. This is, indeed, a signal tribute to the all-round qualities of the Chicago girl's foot.

During the last twenty-four years 2400 bulls and 1700 horses have been killed in bull fights in the city of Mexico. Two picadores have been killed by the bulls in that time.

Dakota's appeal to the president to send a special message to the house to favor her admission into the Union does not seem to have had any attention paid to it. There are too many republicans in Dakota to suit either the president or the democratic members of the house.

An Italian editor printed in his paper last spring, it is said, that during President Blaine's European visit Congressman Cleveland had been put in charge of the White House.

When we consider the patronage of this great office, [the presidency,] the allurements of power, the temptation to retain place once gained, and more than all, the availability a party finds in an incumbent whom a horde of office holders, with a zeal born of benefits and fostered by the hope of favors yet to come, stand ready to aid with money and trained political service, we recognize in the eligibility of the president for re-election a most serious danger to that calm, deliberate and intelligent political action, which must characterize a government by the people.—Grover Cleveland.

Mr. Cleveland demands in effect that there shall be a tariff for revenue purposes only. No tinkering with the tariff will suffice; no readjustment of duties will do. The only reform that common sense can accept of is one which unaffectedly substitutes the principle of unimpeded imports for that of tariff regulations.—London Standard.

My Wife Said

To the Delicate and Malarious.

The most incredulous are convinced of the virtues of Aunt Rachael's Malarial Bitters upon a trial of them. Their base is Speer's port wine, with herbs and roots so favorably known to the medical profession and the community at large as the best cure for malaria. They are all that can be desired by the most feeble victims of malaria.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma and all Throat and Lung Affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, he will feel it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Germany's Sepulchral Stoves.

The German houses are entirely wanting in the comfortable warmth we are accustomed to in America. Their sepulchral, white porcelain stoves, twelve feet or so high, dispense almost as little heat as cheer. Solemnly erected in the corners of the rooms, they present an aspect that (when one is in a homesick mood) is remarkably dispiriting, and often they produce the same effect on one's spirits as would the near neighborhood of the monuments and gravestones they so strongly resemble. But the bed furnishing is as oppressively warm as the heat of the white, ghostly stoves is insufficient. The great eider down quilts, that always form the outside coverings, are as thick and heavy as feather beds. Beside the sweltering heat that these produce, there cannot but be the suggestion that very likely they may already have done duty for several generations. But those who have always lived in a country of vulgar progress probably do not appreciate the conditions of living in a land where aristocratic conservatism prevails. It is not at all likely that houses in Germany will be warmed by steam pipes or furnaces, or anything but their colossal white stoves, for several hundred years yet.—Hanover Cor. Boston Herald.

Ice Sailing with Skates.

Ice sailing is the latest amusement to take here, and it has become very popular. I do not mean with boats, but with skates. The skater crosses two sticks binds him and covers them with canvas, making the whole about six feet by one or two in extent. He places this sail against his back and runs his arms through the sticks so as to hold it. With a good wind he can go twenty miles an hour over smooth ice, and he can tack and beat against the wind, just as in sailing a boat. There is a ten mile surface at Creve Cœur lake that offers elegant sport. It is very exciting, but it requires some daring to start in, as the rapidity of the skater is apt to terrify the man who has never tried it. In skating with the wind one's eyes water, but one can see quite well enough to avoid holes. There would be little chance of being saved if you did blow in. However, it is an easy thing to blow across a three foot hole in going at a high rate of speed. It is very exciting sport, and require very little practice to master its intricacies. It requires comparatively smooth ice for good skating. If an obstruction is met with your fall is pretty hard.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Men Wearing Varied Colors Again.

Gentlemen are slowly but surely drifting back to those days when light and fantastic colors were necessary to a handsome and well ordered toilet. The ladies are no longer to monopolize the gay hues with which the rainbow is decorated. In the animal kingdom the gentleman member of the family generally puts on the plumage or wealth of hair and fur. For proof, behold the lion and the gold or silver pheasant. I say gentlemen are slowly but surely drifting back to those days of blue silk coats, yellow vests, green knee breeches, lace collars and wristlets, etc. Don't you believe it? Examine any new tailor made suit and see if a pair of trousers are ever made up nowadays without a gay colored piece of V shaped silk inserted and joining the waistband in the back. A finical gentleman would not wear trousers that did not have this literally entering wedge. The crimson necktie is already the proper caper. These colors are bound to widen and lengthen until they cover the form of creation's lord.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

The Babies of Japan.

The little baby is not offered its natural nourishment for three days. During this time the liquor of boiled rice is fed to it! And it is not tucked daintily up in soft white blankets in its clean little bed, but set up in a small tub and covered with coarse, dark comforts. The only relief it has during its infancy from this uncomfortable position is when it is put on its mother's or some else's back, inside their clothes, and taken out for an airing. It is claimed by the more enlightened now that this constant sitting position, or being crowded against some one, with shoulders thrown forward and chest pressed in, is one reason why almost all Japanese are so extremely narrow-chested. It is anything but pleasant to see a 2-year-old strapped on the back of a 4-year-old, with head (shaven, of course,) thrown way over to one side, the unhappy little victim fast asleep with the sun streaming on it, and flies feasting on the dirt which is almost invariably part of a Japanese baby's face.—Babyhood.

People of Alaska.

Governor Swineford says in his annual report that there are 30,800 people in Alaska. Of these, 27,500 are uncivilized natives, 2,750 civilized natives, 300 Aleuts, 1,800 creoles and 5,000 whites. The year was regarded as an exceptionally bad one in regard to temperature, but the enthusiastic governor, who was acclimated in the northern peninsula of Michigan, says that he has not changed his opinion as to the general salubrity and mildness of the climate. And this seems to be borne out by the statistics of meteorology, for it cannot be said that a climate which ranges from 3 degs. below to 77 degs. above is harshly cold or scorching in its heats.—New York Mail and Express.

Red Wood for Veneering.

Veneer manufacturers having been put to much trouble and expense to secure from the natives of Persia or from French markets, even fancy wood burls from which to carve out veneers for manufacturing purposes, have demonstrated by recent experiments that red wood stumps possess meritorious qualities for such use, and will undoubtedly be substituted for the more costly woods in the future. The demand for burl and curly red wood for finishing work has already reached large proportions in the west. The large butts of trees now being slain in California forests will be used to a great extent.—New York Sun.

Table Decoration.

A Paris letter says the latest agony in silver table decoration is a very large platter with a swan at one end. On this coffee cups are served, with a cream jug and sugar bowl. The swan, with its outstretched wings and curved neck, is in reality a coffee pot. It is an old Louis XV. [illegible]

Utilizing Waste Leather.

A most interesting feature of all businesses using leather is that not one particle of the leather is wasted. Our shoe factories alone sell annually fifty tons of waste. This goes mainly to a firm in Philadelphia, who pays $7 a ton for it. A large amount is sent to Lynn, Mass., and other points, where the leather is ground up, mixed with a medium and pressed into buttons. The remainder that is not so used is treated chemically, turned into a gelatinous mass, dried and ground into a fertilizing dust. The sole leather pieces that fall from the block of the heel stamper are sorted into two heaps. The very fine pieces are put with the fine waste. The scraps, presenting a surface of a couple of square inches, are barreled up and sold to parties in New York or Boston at one cent a pound, where they are put through a peculiar machine. This instrument splits the pieces nearly through. Then it opens the piece thus cut like a book. Thence it is delivered from between rollers, and is large enough to be again sent to the factory to be cut up into heel lifts.—Baltimore Sun.

An Elephant's Brain.

Cornell college desired an elephant's brain, and it fortunately secured one. P. T. Barnum was the donor and the recent fire at Bridgeport, Conn., the cause of his generosity. They hardened the brain while it remained in the skull by continual injection, the same method employed with the brain of the Elmira murderer. The method originated with this college and prevents the distortion following the removal and subsequent hardening of the brain. It is done in the following manner: All the vessels except the vertebral and the carotid arteries are tied, and these are connected by rubber tubes with a tank containing diluted alcohol, which is arranged at a proper height to allow the fluid to slowly flow through the brain substance. The study of the brain is yet to be made, and the result is awaited with interest. Animal trainers, especially those of elephants, claim that they possess little reasoning power, and we do not imagine in consequence that the result will benefit anything but comparative anatomy.—The Doctor.

Petrified Monster in Iowa.

The petrified remains of a huge animal have been discovered near Percy, Ia., by a man named S. R. Dawson. It was lying beneath the surface on the bank of the Des Moines river. The total length of the body measures, without the head, over forty feet. The head was detached from the body, and when discovered was some distance away from it. At nine feet from the end of the tail it measured four feet six inches in width. In support of his theory that this is the petrified remains of some extinct monster, Mr. Dawson, in describing the find, shows that it is entirely unlike the stone formation in the vicinity. A spar of quartzite formation was discovered in the locality where the blood vessels and intestinal canal should be, and another formation was found in other parts. The remains were in a bed of dark blue stone surrounded by petrified remains of insects and other animals. Mr. Dawson is confident that the monster belonged to the carboniferous age.—Demorest's Monthly.

Human Curiosity in Austria.

A remarkable case of disease is at present engrossing the attention of medical men in Austria. There is lying at the hospital of the city of Ischl a patient afflicted with a bony excrescence protruding from between the lower cervical vertebrae. The excrescence has the form of a horn, is round and straight, with a diameter of one and a half inches. It has grown to a length of about eight inches, and would probably have been much longer by this time but for the fact that the point was broken off several times to be sent to the pathologic institute of Vienna for examination. There is no feeling in the horn, the breaking off of the points, which the patient did himself, causing him no pain whatever. At the root where the horn is attached to the spinal column it is soft and movable, but it rapidly grows hard and is like bone at a short distance from the root.—Foreign Letter.

Writing a Composite Novel.

A new amusement is suggested by a club of young persons—sixteen in number. They are writing a book—a novel. So far the secretary is having the most fun out of it, but great expectations tremble way down in all the sixteen hearts. This novel is to have sixteen chapters, and each chapter is to be written by a different member. When finished the successive chapters are handed back to the secretary, who, consequently, is the only one who knows the various writers. They are all in fear and trembling lest the love making fall to their lot—that being considered the most difficult part to do justice to. There will certainly be much amusement afforded by the undertaking.—Chicago Herald.

Historian Bancroft's Longevity.

Mr. George Bancroft accounted for his own longevity the other day with three reasons: First, that he was the middle child in his father's family, equally distant from the youngest and the oldest; second, that he had always gone to bed at 10 o'clock, unless it had been impossible; and, third, that he had always spent four hours in each day in the open air, unless prevented by a storm. He added that his riding, of which the newspapers had made so much, was primarily for the purpose of being out of doors, and not of being on horseback.—Frank Leslie's.

Big Armor Clad Ships.

The French government has again taken up the building of great armor clad ships. Eight are now being pressed forward to completion. Admiral Pallu de la Barriere has caused a vessel to be built encased with cocoanut fibre instead of armor plates. It is said to have greater power of resistance than steel.—Paris Letter.

King Theebaw's Chair.

Among the loot taken from King Theebaw's palace in Burmah and about to be sent to London is a carved ivory chair, which, as it took two years to make, was not completed when the king was captured. It was composed of twenty-five elephant tusks and worth many thousands

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

"American wages for American workmen." Republican motto.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

I'll twist the British lion's tail,
I'll make the Canucks fear me;
We've got to fish, and they cut bait—
By jingo, boys, you hear me!

I'll pile the earth with English dead,
If you will all stand near me,
And capture every Irish vote—
By jingo, boys, you hear me!

I'll crush the Senate at a blow,
And those who always jeer me;
I'll make it break its party's neck—
By jingo, boys, you hear me!

I had not thought to call a turn
That would as this endear me,
But Providence protects its own—
By jingo, boys, you hear me!

Now let us all rejoice and sing,
And Democrats come near me;
If I come back you take the earth—
By jingo, boys, you hear me!

[Washington Critic.

Plenty of Boodle.

Under the heading "Enormous contributions for the democratic campaign," our neighbor the Times in its news columns says:

President Cleveland has enhanced the ardor of the democrats in charge of the national campaign by sending them his check for $10,000. A very cordial letter accompanied the president's contribution. The members of the cabinet have also sent very liberal contributions, and altogether, from the personal friends of the president in Washington, $150,000 has thus far been handed in. All the contributions have been accompanied by encouraging letters. One letter said that it wouldn't be necessary for the democrats to threaten to "fry the fat" out of the manufacturers—that the friends of Mr. Cleveland would see to it that the committee had all the money necessary for the legitimate expenses of the campaign. This demonstration of support from the president will, it is believed, incline the star-eyed goddess from the blue grass country to alter her opinions somewhat, and admit that Mr. Cleveland believes in self-help quite as much as anybody else. Anyway the president's check and the contributions of the cabinet and his friends, coming right on top of the Canadian retaliation message, have cheered up the mighty.

There is nothing so cheering to your genuine professional "reformer"—nothing that will so enhance his ardor—as the handling of plenty of boodle.

Mormon Colony in Chihuahua.

The Mormons have within the past three years seen the advantages of cheap grazing and farming lands in this country and the opportunity to escape persecution in the United States. The results are seen in the flourishing colonies of Juares and Diaz, the former adjoining us, the latter about seventy-five miles to the north.

Each colony comprises from 200 to 300 souls. They are recognized for their fair dealing, honesty and thriftiness. The country owes them a debt of gratitude for introducing high grade live stock of all descriptions, farming implements, seeds, trees, saw and flour mills and industries hitherto unknown to the Mexican but in its most primitive form. Though polygamy is against the law in this country, the Mormons are tolerated and encouraged, and up to the present time have been of immense benefit to the country in educating the natives to a more advanced class of work. Some proselyting has been done by their missionaries in the southern part of the republic, mostly in and about the City of Mexico.

They attempted to induce a number of the converts to form part of the Juares colony, but after bringing about thirty families they were obliged to return them to their homes. The Mexican converts could not amalgamate with the Americans. The Mexican, though converted in belief, could not be converted to the manners and customs of the American. Besides, they are a great people for forming attachments to the land of their birth. They rarely leave the home they were born in. This is decidedly so among the lower, half Indian class that comprised the majority of the converts. To this fact the Latter Day Saints, as they prefer to be called, attribute their failure. The colony of Juares is laid out in rectangular form, divided into streets and lots. In the latter their little wooden houses are erected, the only wooden houses in this portion of the country, surrounded by gardens and trees. In case of "plural wives," two or more houses are seen in the same lot. —Louis Ross in New York World.

Value of the Eucalyptus Tree.

The eucalyptus belongs to the myrtle tribe. It is said that there are as many as 150 varieties of the tree. They are native to Australia, but have already been introduced into most of the tropical and temperate countries of the world. Two kinds have been chiefly cultivated, the red gum (resinifera), and the blue gum (globulus), which is the better known. It is famous for its rapid growth, as it often makes an increase in height of from six to nine feet a year. The tree continues growing at this rate until it has reached an enormous size.

The products of this tree are numerous and varied. The wood is said to be valuable for the carpenter's and builder's uses. The gum, or rosin, is employed in the manufacture of "soaps, perfumes, lozenges, court plaster, liniments, syrups, pomades, toilet vinegars, as well as many preparations used for artistic purposes, such as varnishing oils, veneer and tracing paper." There has been for some years established in Paris a store for the sale of eucalyptus perfumery.

But by far the most valuable and important property of this tree is its power of correcting malaria. This quality is, perhaps, due to the aromatic oil which the tree contains, or more probably to the drainage effected by its roots. It has been proved in many countries in which the tree has been planted. In Algeria the cultivation of the tree has rendered many low lying or marshy districts inhabitable, where, in the early years of French occupation, foreigners could not live on account of deadly fevers.—Youth's Companion.

The World's Highest Mountains.

Every once in a while we discover that some mountain peak must give up the undeserved distinction conferred upon it of holding its head higher than all other summits. For a long time Mount Chimborazo was supposed to be the highest mountain in the world until in the progress of the Himalayan surveys Mount Everest was found to overtop it. Four years ago W. W. Graham, who has been higher above the sea than any other mountain climber, asserted that Everest must yield the palm of supremacy to an unnamed peak about seventy miles from it. We long supposed that Mount St. Elias was the loftiest mountain of North America, but we now know that that honor belongs to Mount Wrangel, which is about 500 feet higher than St. Elias. It was also supposed that Mount Kilima-Njaro, 18,700 feet high, was the greatest elevation in Africa, but now comes Count Teleki, the Hungarian traveler, with the assertion that this mountain must play second fiddle to Mount Kenia, about 200 miles north. He is the only man who has yet ascended Kenia.—New York Sun.

The Poison of Tobacco.

It is very unusual to find in a great smoker a healthy appetite for plain food, and medical opinions may be had in any number as to dyspepsia caused by smoking. To whatever degree the habit affects the nervous organization, it appears to be certain that the process which is regarded as soothing is really destructive. Sir Benjamin Brodie must have known what he was writing about when he declared that "the poison of tobacco acts by destroying the function of the brain." In a Russian hospital in 1866 a Dr. Chadnowski took the liberty of examining by means of a pump the digestive powers of six smoking and as many non-smoking soldiers, and he recorded that "in the former the time required for digestion averaged seven hours, while in the case of the non-smokers the mean period of digestion was only six hours." With the present enormous consumption of tobacco the social consequences, apart from those concerning the bodily and mental powers of the consumers, are important.—Pall Mall Gazette.

The Crystals of Blood.

According to Dr. Pesetty Cevera, writing in a Spanish journal, if blood be mixed with a little bile, small crystals are formed which are of different shapes in different species of animals. In man they are right angled prisms, in the horse cubes, in pigs rhomboids, in sheep rhomboidal plates, in dogs right angled prisms very similar to those seen in human blood, and in chickens more or less regular cubes.—Brooklyn Eagle.

No, Patti has no babies. The family have decided that they can't afford it. When they realized that it would cost the youngster £100 every time he wanted his mother to sing him to sleep, cash up, or no concert, they decided that no baby could stand it without mortgaging the nursery and fittings.—London Tid Bits.

Tobacco's Absorptive Qualities.

MATTERS IN YORK.

YORK CORNER, ME., Aug 18th.

On Thursday, the 6th inst., an old-fashioned clambake took place at "Maplewood," the residence of Mr. C. J. Hutchins and wife. The huge pile of stone near the house, deposited there years ago by the untiring industry of Mr. Andrew Preble, was utilized as an oven, and the roasting of the clams, fresh gathered from the shore of the historic York river, was presided over by Mr. M. T. Benner of Everett, Mass.,—a man who needs no teaching in that art. The tables were laid in the beautiful grove in front of the house, and all did ample justice to the good things thereon. All ages were represented, from the grandma of sixty-five years, down to little Miss Beatrice Benner, of four months. After dinner a game of ball was indulged in by the "boys," notwithstanding the fact that the mercury stood among the 80's. There were present Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Cate and son, and Mr. and Mrs. M. T. Benner and family, of Everett, Mrs. T. Witham and Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Littlefield of York, and others.

HAMPTON JOTTINGS.

HAMPTON, Aug. 27th.

Rev. W. W. Fay and wife have been passing the past few weeks in town; they leave this morning. Yesterday morning Mr. Fay delived a fine sermon, pleasing a large audience. He has accepted the call at Westboro', at a salary of $2500; the parish at Bridgewater offered an increase of $600 if he would remain there.

Miss Hattie Cole and her brother Wesley are very ill with typhoid fever; a sadness has rested over the community for the past week as this fair one has seemingly failed to notice her friends, being delirous from the first of her sickness; faint hopes of her recovery fill the hearts of her many friends.

On the noon mail from the east only one letter and two papers were found in the mail-bag one day last week.

The Union house is full; last week applicants for board were refused, and extra help was hired on Saturday.

Last evening the Pullman train passed through with thirteen cars and two engines, every car being crowded.

Four flag poles are ready for setting, two near the residence of Mr. Alfred Leavitt, formerly light-house keeper at Boon island, and two not far from the railroad crossing,—for campaign flags.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

An attempt was made on Wednesday night of last week to burn the Episcopal church (St. John's-by-the-sea) at Old Orchard. A window was seen open on Thursday, and parties on entering found that the baptismal font had been overturned, and all the prayer books piled up in the robing room and saturated with kerosene oil. An attempt had then been made to burn them, but the fire had died out before communicating with the building. Two surplices were burned with the books. A number of lamps were broken, and it was plain that some scoundrel had attempted the destruction of the building. This church has been broken into once before this season.

Charles H. P. Storer of Kennebunk, who was injured by a carriage accident in Biddeford on Wednesday evening of last week, died on Sunday.

A Famous Doctor

Once said that the secret of good health consisted in keeping the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels open. Had this eminent physician lived in our day, and known the merits of Ayer's Pills as an aperient, he would certainly have recommended them, as so many of his distinguished successors are doing.

The celebrated Dr. Farnsworth, of Norwich, Conn., recommends Ayer's Pills as the best of all remedies for "Intermittent Fevers."

Dr. I. E. Fowler, of Bridgeport, Conn., says: "Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."

Dr. Mayhew, of New Bedford, Mass., says: "Having prescribed many thousands of Ayer's Pills, in my practice, I can unhesitatingly pronounce them the best cathartic in use."

The Massachusetts State Assayer, Dr. A. A. Hayes, certifies: "I have made a careful analysis of Ayer's Pills. They contain the active principles of well-known drugs, isolated from inert matter, which plan is, chemically speaking, of great importance to their usefulness. It insures activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. Ayer's Pills contain no metallic or mineral substance, but the virtues of vegetable remedies in skillful combination."

SILVER WEDDING.

Friends and relatives of Mr. Isaac Wetherell and Mrs. Susan J. (Hanson) Wetherell, to the number of seventy-five, gathered at their residence, No. 17 Madison street, Monday evening of this week, to celebrate the 25th anniversary of their marriage, which was solemnized Aug. 27th, 1863, by Rev. Ivory F. Waterhouse, then pastor of the Court street Christian church. The visiters consisted largely of members of that church, which the "bride and groom" attend, and where Mr. Wetherell has for a number of years past been sexton. Shortly after nine o'clock the choir of the church, aided by the company, sang the hymn "Blest be the tie that binds," at the close of which Mr. Albert R. Junkins, in the absence of the pastor, addressed Mr. and Mrs. Wetherell in words well chosen and appropriate, and alluding to the esteem in which they are held, presented them on behalf of their friends with an elegant silver cake-basket, a set of very handsome silver knives, and a purse of money. The presentation was such a surprise to the recipients that they were unable to express their thanks as they would have liked, but many of the guests had been in a like situation, and knew from experience how such a surprise, following words recalling the happy memories of earlier days, can affect the powers of expression. Refreshments were served during the evening, which was most happily passed until the departure of the visitors at a reasonable hour, all tendering with their congratulations the hope that the respected couple may live to look back upon the celebration of their golden wedding. M.

A COACHING PARTY.

A party of ten persons, namely, Senator C. F. Manderson and wife, Gen. J. N. H. Patrick and wife, R. W. Patrick, John E. Patrick, H. W. Yates and wife, W. W. Walker and R. S. Berlin, all of Omaha, Nebraska, arrived in this city on Tuesday, having driven from New York by easy stages, on their way to the White mountains. They travel in two carriages, one having three seats and a driver's box, and being drawn by four horses; the other is smaller and is drawn by two horses. They also have three saddle horses. The carriages, which are unlike anything before seen here, are elegant affairs, and finely finished; the horses are beauties, and their trappings correspond. The teams were sent from Omaha to New York by rail.

FLAG RAISINGS IN KITTERY.

This evening, at seven o'clock sharp, the republicans of Kittery will raise a large Harrison & Morton flag at the Depot, with music by the Portsmouth band, and speeches by B. F. Hamilton of Biddeford and Col. H. H. Burbank of Saco. At eight o'clock the people, with the band, will march to the Foreside, where two other flags will be hoisted, one at the residence of Col. M. F. Wentworth, and the other near the end of Government street. After the flags are hoisted, the people will be addressed on the political issues of the present campaign by Hon. Robert P. Kennedy, member of Congress from Ohio, in the Neil field opposite the shipyard. Should the weather be stormy, the speaking will be in Trefethen's hall.

POLICE COURT---BATCHELDER J.

TUESDAY, Aug. 28th.

Thomas Kelley, Patrick Freeman and Michael Monday, for drunkenness, were each assessed $9.90, fine and costs. In default of payment, Brentwood for the lot.

OBITUARY.

Mr. Charles H. Tobey of Kittery Point, Me., passed quietly away last Sunday evening after a sickness of three weeks. He was taken sick in Baltimore, Md., and performed his usual duties on the passage to Portland, Me., when he left his vessel and came home, suffering greatly until relieved by death. The deceased was second mate of the schooner Annie F. Conlon, of Portsmouth, for nearly seven years, faithfully filling that position. Mr. Tobey was a member of the U. O. G. C. of this place, was fifty-two years of age, and leaves a wife and two daughters. The afflicted family have our deepest sympathy.

Mrs. Lucy Ilsley, widow of Rev. Silas Ilsley, formerly pastor of the Middle street Baptist church, died at Pine Plains, N. Y., Aug. 26th. Mrs. Ilsley was a daughter of the late Capt. Samuel Harding of South Berwick, Me., and was much beloved for her Christian virtues.

MUSIC HALL.

This evening, at Music hall, Roland Reed and his effective supporting company of comedians will appear in "Humbug," a most amusing farcical comedy, full of clean fun and mirth provoking situations. See advertisement.

DR. WEED'S CASE.

At the afternoon session of the court on the 27th, William M. Stewart, who lives near Weed's house, testified as to hearing a team drive into and out of Weed's yard on the night of the robbery.

Benjamin Grant of Elmira and Mrs. Sarah Pearse of Exeter testified, the latter in regard to Dr. Weed being called to attend her daughter, Mrs. D. F. Gilman, on the night of Dec. 4th.

Mrs. Lucretia P. Weed, wife of the accused, aged forty-one years and married twenty-one, testified as to her husband's coming home on the night of Dec. 4th, and his state of intoxication. The reason she told the messenger who came for him to attend Bennett, that he was not at home, was because he was not in a condition to leave the house. Mrs. Weed was deeply affected while giving her testimony.

Mamie Weed, fourteen years old, daughter of the respondent, testified in regard to her father's movements in the house during the day and evening on Dec. 4th.

It was thought at the close of the day's session that the case might reach the jury on the 28th.

On the 28th the defence introduced a few more witnesses who testified as to minor points in the case. The officers who captured Foster and Whitney told of the arrest, and of the money found on the men. Howard Grant, a watchman in the Bangor jail when Whitney and Foster were first confined there, told of their having communication by means of a string and paper. The evidence for the defence was all in by ten o'clock in the forenoon, and the government then put on witnesses in rebuttal. The evidence was completed about three o'clock in the afternoon.

RAILROAD ITEMS.

Counsel for the Manchester & Lawrence railroad have served upon the Concord railroad another writ, for the recovery of over $300,000 not embraced in the two suits previously brought against the Concord.

At a special meeting of the bondholders of the Eastern railroad, held in Boston on Tuesday, to choose a trustee in place of William C. Rogers, deceased, Mr. Charles U. Cotting was unanimously elected to the position.

Two passenger cars ran off an open switch at Old Orchard last Saturday night, and were considerably damaged. The wrecking train from Portland was sent out, and it was about two o'clock Sunday morning before it got back to Portland from the scene of the accident.

PERSONAL.

Hon. E. H. Rollins and wife of Concord, Chas. E. Hill and wife of Manchester, Gen. and Mrs. S. C. Lawrence, Manning Emery, wife and children, and William H. Hackett, were at the West End hotel, Bar Harbor, on Monday.

Miss J. Delight Sturdevant of this city is visiting friends in New York.

Mrs. Albert Sheafe, of Boston, who has been visiting in this city since July, at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Thomas R. Martin, has returned to her home in Boston. Mrs. Sheafe is a native of this city.

Miss Gerrish of Cambridge, Mass., youngest daughter of the late Woodbury Gerrish, formerly of Portsmouth, is visiting friends in this city.

Mrs. Cyrus T. Lang of Woburn, Mass., is visiting her sister, Mrs. Lewis E. Smith, of Middle street.

Mr. Edward J. Moulton arrived home from Bangor on the 28th inst., on the schooner Mary Willey, Capt. Williams. The schooner passed out by White head at four o'clock Monday afternoon, and arrived in the lower harbor about ten o'clock Monday forenoon.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Comdr. John F. McGlensey is detached from this navy yard Sept. 1st, and placed on waiting orders.

Rear Adm. J. E. Jouett, president of the naval board of inspection and survey, arrived in this city on Tuesday, and will make an official visit to the navy yard this morning to inspect the government vessels there.

Housekeepers should try Preston's Flavoring Extracts.

Pears' is the purest and best Soap made.

Miss L. H. Anderson will reopen her school on Summer street Monday, Sept. 10th.

The Wentworth house help had a ball on Monday evening, in the dance hall of the hotel.

The Mechanics' Association building is to be repainted, and have the electric light introduced.

The homeward rush of summer visitors is getting fairly under way, and the outgoing trains are crowded.

The democrats of ward four will hold their delegate caucus in the ward room on Thursday evening, Aug. 30th.

J. W. Potts of Albany, N. Y., a guest at the Oceanic, Isles of Shoals, on the 27th inst. caught a codfish weighing seventy-six pounds and eight ounces before being dressed. This was the largest cod ever caught by a guest at that hotel.

Charles E. Batchelder, Esq., was on Monday evening elected president of the republican club, Mr. Wm. H. Moore having resigned. Judge Batchelder was the first elected president of the club, but declined to serve on account of ill health and a projected European trip.

A breeze of excitement was caused at the steamer Mystic's landing, Tuesday morning, by a man whose name was given as Forsaith, who appeared on the scene armed with a hammer, and with both pockets filled with rocks. He was on the hunt after one of the navy yard workmen, with intent to pound him up a lot with the hammer, and hit him on vulnerable spots with the rocks. The hammer was taken from him by a workman, and thrown into the dock, and he was advised to cart the rocks to some other part of the city, which advice he shortly acted upon.

Hon. James G. Blaine, Hon. R. E. Frazer of Michigan and Gen. Adam E. King of Maryland will speak at Old Orchard on the 4th of September, and at South Berwick on the 6th, in the afternoon.

Mr. Alonzo A. Hayes of Kittery Foreside is at Weirs, N. H., this week, in attendance on the 12th annual encampment of the New Hampshire Veterans' Association, from the 28th to the 31st insts.

There was a democratic flag raising in Eliot on the evening of the 27th inst. It is said that the crowd in attendance numbered seventeen, and the band was an accordeon. If that was so, and we had seen that flag-raising, while we might not have cheered for the candidates we should have felt very much like cheering for the flag-raisers.

Mr. James Boardman of Kittery has just completed a fine new boiler for Mr. Starr's steam yacht Gypsey, which he has brought to this port every season from Connecticut, for use while he and his family are summering at the Pepperrell house, at Kittery Point. The boiler is 36x52 in size, is constructed of the best Glasgow marine steel, and the inspector of boilers pronounces it one of the finest pieces of work he ever saw. Mr. Boardman has all the work he can attend to, and contemplates starting a boiler shop in this city at an early date.

The gondola Electric Light, Capt. Wm. Nason, is carrying sand, said to be of fine quality, from Roberts' brick yard at Dover point to Kittery, for use in building the new public library building there.

The schooner Earl P. Mason, which ran ashore near Point Judith in a gale the first part of last week, has been floated off by wreckers and taken into Newport, Rhode Island.

Rear Adm. Luce, commanding the North Atlantic squadron, will hoist his flag on the U. S. S. Ossipee, expected to arrive at Portland from Halifax to-day.

CITY OF PORTSMOUTH.

CITY MARSHAL'S OFFICE, July 14, 1888.

FREQUENT complaints having been brought to my notice that men and boys are in the habit of bathing in the waters exposed to the streets, highways and other public places, especially in Sagamore Creek near Lafayette road and Sagamore road, in violation of the city ordinances; notice is hereby given that all persons found offending in this particular will be prosecuted to the extent of the law.

JEFF. C. ROWE, City Marshal.

LICENSE YOUR DOGS.

SECTION 1. No dog shall be permitted to go at large or loose in this city until the owner or keeper of such dog, or the keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall have procured from the city marshal a license for such dog.

SECTION 5. It shall be the duty of the city marshal to cause all dogs to be killed which shall be found at large or loose within the city without a collar marked as required by law, and to cause all dogs so killed to be buried, and any person may lawfully kill any dog found within the limits of this city going at large contrary to the provisions of this chapter.

SECTION 6. In case any dog shall be found loose or going at large contrary to any of the foregoing provisions, or in case any dog not licensed shall be provided with a collar marked as required in this ordinance, the owner or keeper thereof or the head of the family or keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall upon conviction thereof be fined five dollars.

The above extracts from the city ordinances of the city will be strictly enforced.

PHILOSOPHY OF MARRIAGE giving a clear synopsis of the impediments to marriage, exhausted vitality, etc., etc., sent by Lotteries and Dreams.

In lotteries and kindred forms of gambling, men reject trust in other folks' luck, and believe instead in coincidences and dreams. They find the number on which they finally stake their fate in all manner of absurd and unmeaning ways. All the tens of thousands of ticket holders in a great lottery have selected their number in some way satisfactory to themselves, about which we hear nothing when the result is a failure, as in ninety-nine cases out of hundred it necessarily is. But when the result chances to be a success, as in a small proportion of cases it must be, the whole story is gravely related in the papers as though the number actually bringing the prize had been determined beforehand by some scientific process of reasoning, and success assured by the exercise of good judgment and ingenuity.

Yet it is idle to inveigh against the folly of such fancies and superstitions. They have existed in all ages and among all races from time immemorial. Carrying in themselves their own contradiction, they also carry in themselves what to believers in luck appears their full confirmation. For he does not observe that the ideas about luck which run through his mind are contradictory, and in their self contradiction provide for every event. When success comes to him by following one idea about luck his faith in luck is confirmed; but when failure arrives he is not a whit less satisfied that he holds the true faith about luck, for he has another doctrine about that event also.—Richard A. Proctor.

Alcohol for Diphtheria.

Alcohol, we make bold to say, is the prince of antiseptics and the most perfect and reliable medicine of which we have any knowledge in diphtheria. Diluted with equal parts of water and given in small and repeated doses, the malignant symptoms of this most fatal malady soon disappear, and convalescence becomes assured. It is interesting to note with what facility the alcohol dissolves the diphtheric exudation in the throat, lowers the temperature and calms the pulse, showing its destructive action upon the germs of the disease, which have been absorbed by the glands and gained access to the blood. This remedy has been used by us in the treatment of diphtheria since 1873, during which time no case of the disease has slipped through our hands except in one solitary instance, and that case was in articulo mortis before the remedy was given. The remedy is also prophylactic to the disease, as we have found in many instances where it has been expedient to quarantine the patient. For this purpose it is only necessary for exposed persons to use the remedy, diluted as above stated, as a gargle and to swallow a little of it three or four times a day.—Medical Times.

How Wooden Spools Are Made.

Birch wood is preferred. The birch is first sawed into sticks four or five feet long and seven-eighths of an inch to three inches square, according to the size of the spool to be produced. These sticks are thoroughly seasoned. They are sawed into short blocks, and the blocks are dried in a hot air kiln. At the time they are sawed a hole is bored through them. One whirl of the little block against sharp knives, shaped by a pattern, makes the spools at the rate of one a second. A small boy feeds the spool machine, simply placing the blocks in a spout, and throwing out the knotty or defective stock. The machine is automatic, but cannot do the sorting. The spools are revolved rapidly in drums and polish themselves. For some purposes they are dyed yellow, red or black. They are made in hundreds of shapes and sizes. When one sees on a spool of thread "100 yards" or "200 yards," these words do not signify that the thread has been measured, but that the spool has been gauged and is supposed to contain so much thread.—Golden Days.

A Valuable Literary Discovery.

A literary event of national importance has taken place in Japan. One of the legation officers, now with the new minister to Germany, recently discovered in the Ashikaga college (Tsuh-li Hioh) a copy of Hwang K'an's Confucian Analects over 1,200 years old, with all the ancient commentator's notes. This work has disappeared in China ever since the Southern Sung dynasty—i. e., for some 700 or 800 years; and as the whole history of the present copy is known, the Chinese government has directed the minister in Japan to borrow it, in order that a carefully corrected copy may be taken. It may be added that should there be any Kana inscriptions upon this copy valuable light will also be thrown upon the Japanese alphabet question.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Oyster Culture in France.

Oyster culture has had a great development in France. Thus, while in 1857 there were in the Bay of Arcachon twenty parks, or district oyster beds, in 1865 there were 297 beds, producing 10,000,000 oysters annually, and there are now 15,000 acres of beds, yielding an annual supply of 300,000,000 oysters. From Auray, on the coast of Brittany, 7,000,000 oysters were sent to market in 1876-77; in 1885 the numbers exceeded 70,000,000. On the other hand, the British oyster industry has declined, and the coast which furnished ancient Rome with oysters, and within a generation exported them to Paris, now ranks low in the list of oyster nurseries.—Public Opinion.

An African Mocking Bird.

A Kaffir vanished and groans were heard. He was searched for without result, but on the following night groans were still heard. The search continued and the man was found murdered. His murderer was arrested and executed, but the groans still continued, to the dismay of their auditors. At last they were traced to a mocking bird. That bird alone of living things had seen the deed of blood, and now from day to day reproduced the piteous moaning of its victim.—Saturday Review.

Something to Brag About.

Chicago newspapers are bragging considerably because, as they say, New York has dropped to the sixth place, judged by her miles of railroads, and because Illinois stands first, Iowa, Kansas, Texas, Pennsylvania, New York and Ohio follow in order.—New York Sun.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

It is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any free trader could employ now.—London Times.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

"The World Moves,"

Maintained Galileo, when his tormentors racked him for advocating the true system of Copernicus. Certain follies hold out, however, against the illumination of discovery and experience. There are hosts of people who, because they have adopted certain principles, continue to swallow them to their dying day in defiance of the laws of common sense. Mercury, drastic purgatives, super-potent narcotics and sedatives, though they have given ground before the irresistible progress of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a national, painless remedy for disorders of the liver, the stomach and the bowels, still continue to make ambulating apothecary shops of many stomachs. The symptoms of liver trouble are easily remediable without any abdominal disturbance with this beneficent alterative. So also are constipation, sick headache, heartburn and an inability to digest satisfactorily. It cures fever and ague, rheumatism and kidney trouble.

When we consider the patronage of this great office, [the presidency,] the allurements of power, the temptation to retain place once gained, and more than all, the availability a party finds in an incumbent whom a horde of office holders, with a zeal born of benefits and fostered by the hope of favors yet to come, stand ready to aid with money and trained political service, we recognize in the eligibility of the president for re-election a most serious danger to that calm, deliberate and intelligent political action, which must characterize a government by the people.—Grover Cleveland.

FOOD IN NORTHERN INDIA.

Women Who Work the Mill—Cooking Without Stove or Range.

Wheat is the chief food in Northern India, although rice and coarser grains are also largely used. Very early in the morning "the sound of the grinding is heard" in the houses of the natives. Some woman, a servant, a widow, or the mother of the family is grinding wheat for the day's consumption. Sometimes two women work the mill, which is a rude but serviceable contrivance, within the means of most families. The coarsely ground flour is kneaded with water into a mass of stiff dough, covered with a piece of muslin and set away.

Meanwhile the men, having repeated the prayer to the sun at the exact moment of its rising, go to their daily avocations. The children, if they wish, receive a little food that was left over from the dinner of the previous evening, and go to school or to play in the court yard. The women make the rooms tidy, bathe and dress, and await the return of the men. About noon they come, bathe by the well in the court yard, and perform worship by placing a little food or a flower before the family idol, burning a little incense, and muttering a few prayers, after which they repair to the place set apart and consecrated to the sacred act of eating. They sit on the floor with their knees near the chest, wearing only a single garment wrapped about them, which they wash themselves so that it shall not be contaminated by the touch of a man of low caste. Their other garments must not be worn when they eat, because they have been defiled in this way.

A metal plate is given to each man, a lota, or metal cup, filled with water is placed by his side, and the women bring the food and serve it out to their lords and masters. In the hot season a woman twirls one of the huge fans, or punkahs, in a very deft manner, creating a little breeze in the close hot room. When the men have finished and gone out to take their usual whiffs at the hookah, the women bring in the rest of the food and eat their breakfast by themselves.

They cook without the aid of a stove or range, and generally without even a chimney. Two or three sets of chulhas, which are merely little standards built of brick or mud, are in one corner of a little kitchen. The little kettles rest upon them. Fires of small sticks are kindled in these chulhas whenever wanted, the food is cooked quickly, and the fire immediately extinguished. Flat cakes, flattened out in the hands, are made of the wheaten dough and baken on an iron plate over the fire, first on one side, then on the other. It is reckoned a nice accomplishment to do this "just right," i. e., to have the cakes perfectly baked, but not burnt.

With these cakes, or chapatis, they serve stewed vegetables or a pulse, called dal, highly seasoned and enriched with ghi, or boiled butter, or oil. Their only beverage is cold water. They use no china, glass, spoons, knives, forks or chopsticks. They convey food to the mouth with the right hand alone, using pieces of the flat cakes as spoons to scoop up the stewed pulse. At the evening meal they have a little more variety; rice in some form, perhaps, with a curry of fish or vegetables, and a dessert of fruit or sweetmeats. They are extremely fond of sweetmeats, and have them in great variety. They are made of rice, sugar, flour, butter, cocoanut and other fruit. Some kinds are very good; but most of them are too heavy and oily to be digestible.

Some women smoke the hookah, and all of them chew pan a large portion of the time. This is composed of betelnut, a little shell lime, cardamon seeds, etc., wrapped in a pungent leaf. After chewing this awhile a blood red juice escapes, which colors the teeth and mouth in a very unpleasant manner.—Mrs. E. J. Humphrey in Demorest's Magazine.

The Montagnais of Canada.

It is a significant fact that, although even the faintest trace of Indian's blood predominates over that of the more effeminate yet conquering blood of Europeans, yet the pure blooded Indians have almost disappeared, while the half breeds now compose the Canadian tribes. The disappearance of the Indians must be due to some psychological influence rather than to any adverse material conditions. Even here, under the best attainable relations with civilization and the least possible change of habits, they are diminishing about as fast as our abused tribes. Scrofula and smallpox are their most common diseases, and they injure their health by unnecessary exposure, overloading on the carries, inordinate feasting and fasting, and excessive labor in running down reindeer and moose; and their losses are not made up by their small families.

Sickness is much dreaded, and if one or two die in a place any one else who is indisposed thinks he also is to die, and the others gather about and express the same opinion. Those writers err who assert that insanity and deformity are unknown among them; they have a superstition that an evil spirit is taking possession of such persons, to change them into a supernatural creature that will wander about the woods and devour men. They therefore strangle the demented and many of the ill formed.—C. H. Farnham in Harper's Magazine.

Feeding Young Fish.

Mr. F. Lugrin, of Geneva, has discovered a method of feeding young fish of the trout and salmonoid varieties. Great difficulty has hitherto been experienced in carrying the young fish through the first year of their existence, the artificial food not being sufficiently nutritious, often costly and involving constant care and attention. Mr. Lugrin's invention consists in a material which, when spread on the bottom of a tank, spontaneously produces myriads of minute organisms (daphniæ, cyclops, limnæ, etc.) When one tank is depleted the fish are driven off to another pasture similarly prepared. The first tank, at the end of a few weeks, is again swarming with organic life.

Explosive Naphtha Gas.

Two German experimenters find that the illuminating power of naphtha gas is reduced one-half by 20 per cent. of air. The mixture becomes explosive when it contains from about five to eighteen volumes of air to one of gas.—Arkansaw Traveler.

New England's Sabbath Day Houses.

Every one went to church in the colonial days of New England. Families living at a distance from the meeting house came prepared to spend the intermission between the morning and afternoon services in the "Sabbath day houses." These houses, according to a description published in Sanford's "History of Connecticut," were small log structures, twenty-five feet long, ten broad, and one story high. A chimney in the middle divided the whole space into two rooms, for the use of the two families who united in building the house. The furniture consisted of a few chairs, a table, plates, dishes, and some utensils for warming cooked food. On a shelf were a Bible and two or three religious books.

In winter, on Sunday morning, before starting for church, the mother of the family put up food for dinner, not forgetting a jug of cider. The family rode in a large two horse sleigh, stopped at the Sabbath house, kindled a fire and then went into the cold meeting house, where the minister preached in an overcoat, with a muffler about his neck and mittens on his hands. The women carried heated stones in their muffs, and the men drew bags over their feet. No chronicler informs us how the boys and girls managed to keep warm during the long service.

At the conclusion of the morning service the family hurried back to the warm room of the Sabbath house, where they took their dinner and drank their cider from a pewter mug. Thanks were then returned and the review of the sermon began. If the sermon failed to furnish sufficient matter to occupy the hour, a chapter in the Bible was read, or a few passages from a religious book. Singing and prayer sent them to the afternoon service in a devotional frame of mind, at the conclusion of which they returned to the Sabbath-day house, extinguished the fire, locked the door and started for home.—Youth's Companion.

Josephine's Ultra Luxurious Habits.

The Empress Josephine, the great Napoleon's wife, was a woman of the most ultra luxurious habits. Four to six times a day did she change her dress, and she never twice assumed any plain gown. Her weekly allowance of stockings was four dozen of silk in summer, and in winter two dozen of French silk hose and three dozen of the finest English cotton stockings. As for gloves and shoes, Mme. Bonaparte used up three dozen pairs a week, and she never wore any stockings that had been washed, nor donned more than once the same pair of gloves or shoes. The lace frills of her chemises cost $10 apiece. Every three months she exchanged her diamonds and other jewels, or had them newly set, according to the mutations of fashion.

Once a month, too, all the domestics in Josephine's household received fresh liveries, and every thirty days her wardrobe was divided among her maids of honor. Of these toilets the court lady had four, with an equal number of sets of jewelry—one for the Tuileries, one for St. Cloud, one for Malmaison and one for traveling. By touching certain springs she could command for her bath what perfumes her caprice required to mix with the water, the reservoirs always containing 12,000 francs' worth of the finest odors. By touching other springs a whole gallery of pictures and prints of a gay and vivacious character made its appearance, and when she wished to leave her bath she had but to touch a bell, when, by a mechanical contrivance, she was lifted into an elegant moderately warmed and perfumed bed, where she was nicely dried. Then, by another mechanical contrivance, she was lifted on to a splendid elastic sofa, which glided into the adjoining boudoir.—Once a Week.

Chinese Dog Skin Industry.

The rearing of dogs for their skins is pursued in China just as sheep farming is in Australia. There are thousands of small dog and goat farms scattered over the northern districts of Manchuria and Mongolia. Nature has provided a magnificent protection to withstand the cold of these northern latitudes, where the thermometer (Fahrenheit) goes down to 25 degs. below zero—that is, 57 degs. of frost—and it is doubtful if the dog skins in any other part of the world are to be compared with those that come from Manchuria or Mongolia, either in size, length of hair or quality. The fur is at its best during the winter, and the dog is killed before the thaw sets in, which is effected, not by the knife, which might injure the fur, but by strangulation.

It is difficult to understand how the farmers can rear the animals for the price they obtain for the hides. To provide a well made dog skin rug at least eight animals must be slaughtered, which at three taels per rug of eighty inches by sixty-three inches would allow not quite fifty-five cents per dog, including the sewing, choosing, etc., for the skins must fairly match in color. The flesh, however, is no doubt used for human food; the market value thereof enters largely into the farm's profit and loss account. When a girl is married she receives perhaps six dogs as her dowry.—London Standard.

Called Her a "School Lady."

"Don't call me a school girl. I just hate it," said a little miss just fresh from a Toronto boarding school the other day. I thought of the discussion over the term "shop girl," and of the preference some of the employes in our dry goods stores had expressed for the term "sales ladies." "Very well, my dear," said I, "I suppose you and the other little school ladies are real glad to have the summer holidays come." The little miss looked puzzled, teased and finally disgusted, and for twenty-four hours I called her a "school lady," till she begged for mercy and for a return to the good old term, "school girl." I wonder if there are any little school ladies in Buffalo.—Buffalo News.

Indians as Marksmen.

Generally speaking, the Indian is not as accurate a marksman as his white brother. He does not seem to understand how to use his gun sights to advantage. Still, he is far more successful in hunting, as, being thoroughly conversant with the habits and customs of different animals, he displays great ingenuity and skill in planning his attack and invariably brings down his game.—Pipe of Peace.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

"American wages for American workmen."—Republican motto.

A Minority Government.

The political situation in South Carolina was explained by Governor John P. Richardson of that state in a speech the other day, thus:

The great problem which God has given us to solve is not yet solved. We have now the rule of a minority of 400,000 over a majority of 600,000. No army at Austerlitz, Waterloo or Gettysburg could ever be wielded like that mass of 600,000 people. The only thing that stands to-day between us and their rule is a flimsy statute—the eight-box law—which depends for its effectiveness upon the unity of the white people.

It is a remarkable circumstance when the governor of a state has no hesitation in proclaiming that he represents the rule of a minority over the majority. Governor Richardson distinctly acknowledges that his state is kept solid for democracy and reform by successful fraud only.

"Reform" Steadily Advances.

In Chicago, Postmaster Judd's law partner is sending postal cards to all of Postmaster Judd's clerks and letter carriers, ordering them to call at his office. When they go, they find that he has been designated by the democratic national committee to receive subscriptions. He cross-examines them as to their salaries, and the amounts which they are expected to contribute. Meanwhile, Postmaster Judd professes ignorance of what is in progress. Great is Reform (big R) under the Cleveland administration.

Under Cleveland's "civil service reform" 733 democrats do the work in the New York custom house which 438 republicans formerly did.

Sad Drowning Accident.

Tuesday morning Aug. 28th, a party consisting of George Barnard and two sons, Fred and George W., Mrs. C. W. Smith and two daughters, Bertie and Edna, of 242 Lexington street, East Boston; Miss Jennie Mayer, Stella Hallet, Eddie Crowell and Clifton Bradford of Hyannis, went to sail in a boat owned by Captain Watson Bearse. The boat was in charge of George Barnard. While they were about three miles outside of Hyannis, Mass., harbor, near 12 o'clock, a flaw struck the boat, capsizing it, and it sunk at once. Captain Darius Hammond of the schooner William H. Lewis of Chatham saw the boat capsize, and went to their assistance. He succeeded in picking up seven of the party, but the other three, Bertie and Edna Smith and Freddie Barnard, were drowned. Their ages were respectively eleven, twelve and thirteen years. The bodies have not been recovered as yet.

The Henry George party of New York, who believe in absolute free trade and the abolition of all custom houses, have enthusiastically endorsed Cleveland and the bandanna.

The Philadelphia Times, democratic, which is warmly supporting the president and the Mills bill, said June 1st, 1886, that "free woollens and free trade follow free wool just as logically as frog follows tadpole." The republican party must kill the "tadpole."

The largest market for the purchase and sale of mules is St. Louis, where the trade reaches $6,000,000 a year. Atlanta [illegible] with a trade of $2,000,000.

DRINKING WARM BLOOD.

Consumptives Who Swallow a Pint Each Day—Of Doubtful Benefit.

She was a slight, pale girl, and though the air was balmy, a shiver ran through her frame. As she put the silver goblet, which anon had been filled with hot blood, down on the blood besmeared board it could be seen that the vessel was empty. The maiden with the pallid cheeks smacked her lips and then said, in a low, sweet voice, to the burly butcher before her:

"That blood tasted especially good to-day."

"Will you have another, miss?"

"Yes, I think I will."

The butcher disappeared, but he was back in an instant. "That will just make a pint today," he remarked, as he poured the dark life fluid, rich and reeking, into the girl's silver goblet. She drank it with apparent gusto. Then she turned, without speaking a word, left the gloomy building, and a moment later was whirling homeward in a carriage.

It was early morn. The sun had risen but a short span above the horizon, and its golden rays fell slantingly on the stock yards and on the ungainly dimensions of the slaughter house on Halsted and Forty-second streets, where the killing of cattle had just been resumed. The young lady with the consumptive look had merely done what a great many others in search of restored health have done before her, and are doing every day—drank the blood of freshly slaughtered animals in the belief that its invigorating, nourishing properties will cure them of their ills and that this healthy blood will take the place of the thin, serous fluid they themselves have lost. The young lady is the only daughter of wealthy parents living on Prairie avenue. She goes to the slaughter house every morning before breakfast and drinks from half a pint to a pint of blood.

"I guess it's doing her good," said the foreman, who had waited on her. "She doesn't look so pale now as she did a month ago. She was looking like a shadow, just ready to waste away, the first time I saw her. She told me she had been dissipating too much last winter, going to balls and parties and not getting her regular sleep, and living under too much excitement. She'll pull through, though, I have no doubt."

This young woman is one of a score or more who indulge regularly in the same practice. Oddly enough, it is not the large slaughter houses in the stock yards themselves, but the smaller ones outside the gates to which those debilitated or consumptive sufferers go as to a Mecca of promise. There are a half dozen slaughter houses on Archer avenue and Halsted street and the other thoroughfares around. They are away from the rough crush and bustle of the stock yards, uninfested by the whoop and yell of the cowboy and the coarse oaths of the drovers. To these the timid women in search of blood repair, and there they drink their fill. A few of them go there later in the day, but the most of them are on hand in the early morning. Men, too, and boys may be seen on the same errand. Some of the experiences had by the butchers at the slaughter houses with these queer customers are quite pathetic, some again the reverse.

"About three years ago," said the boss butcher at a huge establishment, "a lawyer began to come here regularly to drink beef's blood. I can't give you his name, although it is one well enough known in the city. He had been a hard worker and a high liver, and his mental and physical powers all of a sudden began to give way to an alarming extent. Symptoms which threatened consumption began to appear, and he consulted the most eminent physicians in town. They said he was overworked and needed rest. But they could not give him relief. He went to New York and put himself into the hands of a specialist. But his condition from bad became worse. He came back to Chicago. On the cars a man told him he ought to try blood at the slaughter houses. He gave up business altogether, bought himself a horse, practiced a great deal with dumb bells, and lived very plainly. Every morning he started from home at 5 o'clock and took a long ride on horseback. He came here regularly at 7 o'clock and drank from a half pint to a whole pint of fresh blood, took plenty of exercise at home and out of doors, and retired to bed early and at a regular hour. When I saw him first he looked like a man about to die—with hollow eyes, sunken cheeks and listless gait. Within six months he was strong, active, and full of life and vim. He resumed his business, and can again work as hard as ever without injuring himself in the least. But he is still taking plenty of exercise, and I see him every once in a while riding on a bicycle in the park."

"Have you known many instances of this kind?" was asked.

"Well, no. To tell you the truth about it, I don't think it was the blood that cured that lawyer. His altered manner of living is what did it. I remember the case of a lady who used to come to the slaughter house regularly and drink a pint of blood every day. It didn't do her a particle of good. I also knew the case of a young fellow, a student at one of the colleges, who had been taken with consumption. He was so weak that he had to be assisted up the stairs into the slaughter house. But it didn't help him. After awhile he stopped coming, and the next thing I heard of him he was dead. For persons who are really consumptive I don't believe any amount of blood would do. But persons who are simply debilitated, with proper diet and exercise and regular living, are much benefited by drinking blood."—Chicago Herald.

The Death of Cleopatra.

Dr. Viaud Grand-Marais, of Nantes, has been holding an inquest on the sudden death of Cleopatra. He rejects the theory that her death was caused by the bite of a viper. She was accustomed to test the effects of various poisons on her slaves, in order to ascertain which caused the easiest death. Having shown that no viper was found in the room of the fair suicide, that her body presented no traces of bites, and that her two maid servants were found dead or dying at the foot of her bed, he comes to the conclusion that her death was caused by carbonic oxide.—Bulletin General de Therapeutique.

No, Patti has no babies. The family have decided that they can't afford it. When they realized that it would cost the youngster £100 every time he wanted his mother to sing him to sleep, cash up, or no concert, they decided that no baby could stand it without mortgaging the nursery and cottage.—London Tid Bits.

Tobacco's Absorptive Qualities.

A leaf of tobacco laid for two hours within six feet of open kerosene will be found to be as rank as possible with the smell and flavor of the oil, and even when dried and pressed into heavy hogsheads will take the color from other articles in the hold of a ship, even from sugar.—New York World.

Murderers May Confess.

A despatch from St. John's N. B., says: The examination of the persons held for the murder of Mrs. Howes has been postponed until next week. Mr. Whitehead, who came from the scene of the murder Tuesday morning, says that Phillippin's sister has made statements to the authorities which fix the guilt upon Trafton and Phillippin. She says that Trafton came on Sunday morning and induced her brother to go with him to frighten the fishing party; that Trafton fired the fatal shot, although both men did more or less shooting, and that after the woman was killed Phillippin stopped firing, but Trafton seemed maddened and kept on until stopped. The girl is supposed to have made the confession to place the guilt on Trafton and save her brother. Mr. Whitehead says the scene of the murder bears evidence of deliberate planning. He showed several pieces of wood of trees which had been cut down by the prisoners to get a clear view of the river. It is believed that with the weight of evidence against them the prisoners will confess.

The Yellow Fever Scourge.

The yellow fever report from Jacksonville, Fla., shows twenty-one new cases for the twenty-four hours ending at 6 o'clock Tuesday evening, being well distributed in the city and suburbs.

It is learned that a sister of Mercy of St. Joseph, Rosa D. Lina, died at St. Luke's Tuesday night since the official report was issued.

A committee from the Citizen's Sanitary Association met representatives of the South Florida county boards of health Tuesday at Ocean Park. The result was that certain freights will be allowed to go out of the city under reasonable restrictions.

The opening of the route North permitted many to leave the city who had remained in hope that the epidemic would be stayed. Many are leaving for St. Mary's refuge camp on the government train daily, and officials and citizens have made up their minds to confront the situation and try to keep the fever in check and relieve the suffering until frost appears, which is hardly looked for under sixty days.

No general camp has yet been made for aid, but it will doubtless have to come soon. Nearly all the applicants for aid are colored people. The hospitals now are in good working condition and well filled with patients.

A Valuable Bustle.

S. M. Ballingsley, a wealthy business man and farmer of Bronanga, a small station near Nevada, Mo., and his wife, have been stopping at the New Albany Hotel, at Kansas City, for several days. They left Saturday morning for home. Chief Speers and the proprietors of the hotel subsequently received telegrams stating that Ballingsley had lost $1600 in the hotel. The clerk made a careful search of No. 45, the room they had occupied, but could find no money. Sergeant Boulware was assigned to the case, and after a careful examination of the employees of the house he decided that none of them had found the money, and another search of the room was begun. The money was finally found between the slats of the bed and the mattrass. It was done up in a strange fashion.

Around the long leather purse that contained the money a piece of coffee sack had been sewed as tight as twine could sew it. Around this was wrapped a towel which was also tightly sewed, and the whole was bound up in another towel loosely stitched together. Mr. Ballingsley arrived the next morning and got his money. He explained that his wife had done it up in that manner so that she could wear it as a bustle. In her hurry to catch the train that morning she forgot to put on her bustle and did not discover the fact until they had reached Nevada. "My wife was almost crazy," said Mr. Ballingsley. "Just as we stepped off the train at Nevada she slapped me in the face. 'Great heaven what did you hit me for?' I exclaimed. 'I didn't hit you,' she said; 'but I forgot the money.'"

We must now place our manufactures by the side of the agriculturist. * * Experience has taught me that manufactures are now as necessary to our independence as to our comfort.—Thomas Jefferson.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

There will be no free fish from Canada. The United States stood on its dignity in repudiating the unpatriotic attempt to grant away the rights that our New England fishermen have enjoyed for a century.

A party of ten recently made a successful ascent of Mt. Tacoma, 14,444 feet above the level of the sea, and a number of valuable photographic views were obtained. Nine hours were consumed in reaching the summit of the main peak of 10,000 feet.

Upon the success of our manufactures, as the handmaid of agriculture and commerce, depends in a great measure the independence of our country, and none can feel more sensibly than I do the necessity of encouraging them.—Andrew Jackson.

Congress have acted coldly, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

A Famous Doctor

Once said that the secret of good health consisted in keeping the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels open. Had this eminent physician lived in our day, and known the merits of Ayer's Pills as an aperient, he would certainly have recommended them, as so many of his distinguished successors are doing.

The celebrated Dr. Farnsworth, of Norwich, Conn., recommends Ayer's Pills as the best of all remedies for "Intermittent Fevers."

Dr. I. E. Fowler, of Bridgeport, Conn., says: "Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."

Dr. Mayhew, of New Bedford, Mass., says: "Having prescribed many thousands of Ayer's Pills, in my practice, I can unhesitatingly pronounce them the best cathartic in use."

The Massachusetts State Assayer, Dr. A. A. Hayes, certifies: "I have made a careful analysis of Ayer's Pills. They contain the active principles of well-known drugs, isolated from inert matter, which plan is, chemically speaking, of great importance to their usefulness. It insures activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. Ayer's Pills contain no metallic or mineral substance, but the virtues of vegetable remedies in skillful combination."

LIFE OF GEN. SHERIDAN.

A despatch from Nonquitt, Mass., Aug. 28 says: It is well known that the manuscript of General Sheridan's personal memories is in the hands of New York publishers. From the sale of the book it has been expected that Mrs. Sheridan would receive a large addition to her small resources. Her friends have learned with considerable anxiety that publishers at Springfield and elsewhere are preparing to issue unauthorized lives of the great soldier. They fear that these impositions may not only tend discredit of General Sheridan's career, but also to the financial injury of his widow. Colonel M. V. Sheridan has written a letter to John L. Johnson of Springfield, Mass., in which he says: "In answer to your inquiry whether there will be published an authentic history of General Sheridan's life, and, if so, when, I have the honor to inform you that the "Personal Memoirs of P. H. Sheridan," written by himself, will be published at New York, by December 1st, 1888. This will be the only authentic life of General Sheridan, and as he spent the best part of the four years preceding his death upon it, I believe it will be found a most interesting and creditable performance. Attempts are being made to impose on the public with pretended authentic lives of General Sheridan. These books are all frauds, as there is no manuscript in existence, except that in the memories already referred to, from which an authentic life could be printed, and no complete material, except that which is in the hands of the general's executors.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Michael J. Vaughan and daughter are visiting at Bar Harbor.

Ex-Patrolman Albert Parsons, formerly of this city, but now of Salem, Mass., is visiting friends here.

Mr. William P. Gardner and wife arrived home from the mountains on Wednesday, greatly recuperated in health.

Mrs. James McGlinchy of Portland, is visiting her mother, Mrs Dixon, of Court street.

Mr T. S. Wentworth, wife and son, of Somerville, Mass., are at their cottage at Newcastle, for a few weeks.

Mrs. Sewall Webber has closed her residence in this city, and will hereafter reside with her son in Boston.

Capt. J. G. Walker, chief of the bureau of navigation, is with his family at a cottage on Seavey's island.

Mr. John W. Emery, the popular insurance accountant, is passing a few days' vacation at Bar Harbor.

Dr. James R. May is passing a few weeks with a party of gentlemen who own and enjoy a portion of Isle au Haut, on the coast of Maine.

Mr. Edward S. Smart, who has been spending a few months with his parents in this city, returned to his labors in Boston this week, greatly benefitted by his prolonged rest.

Messrs. Hazlett, Philbrick, Walton, Ward, Boynton, and other members of the Rockingham bicycle club of this city, will attend the Buffalo tournament next week.

Hon. Alonzo P. Nute of Farmington is likely to be a prominent candidate for the nomination of representative to Congress by the republicans of this district. He is decidedly the best man yet mentioned in connection with the office.

Mr. R. F. Graves and wife of South Boston, are visiting in this city at the residence of Mr. Wiley Coleman. Mr. Graves carries on an extensive carriage painting business in South Boston, employing a large number of mechanics. This is his first visit to Portsmouth, and he intends to improve this opportunity by visiting all the points of interest in and around our city. Mrs. Graves is a native of this city, being a daughter of Mr. Emory Dresser, formerly city marshal of Portsmouth, but now on the police force of South Boston, and a niece of Mrs. Coleman.

Col. Charles A. Sinclair has a magnificent summer villa on the shore of Sorrento on Frenchman's bay, opposite Hancock point. From the piazzas is had an excellent view of Mount Desert island and adjacent mountains, and the opposite shores of the bay. The house, which is denominated a cottage, but from its construction and beauty might better be designated as a palace, was first seen by the owner last week, it having been built by contract under the supervision of a leading architect. Sorrento abounds in expensive summer houses. It is far enough removed from the ocean to be spared the discomforture of fogs but is near enough to the sea to have ever a cooling atmosphere.

DR. WEED'S CASE.

In the Weed case on Wednesday arguments were made for and against the accused, the judge made his charge, and the case was given to the jury, but no decision was rendered up to going to press.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

Chief Constructor Theodore D. Wilson visited the navy yard on Wednesday, the 29th inst.

The hauling out of the U. S. S. Portsmouth onto the railway, at the navy yard, was commenced on Wednesday, the 29th inst.

Rear Adm. J. E. Jouett, president of the naval board of inspection and survey, visited the navy yard on the 29th inst., receiving the customary salute.

AFFAIRS IN KITTERY.

KITTERY POINT, Aug. 29th.

A sloop yacht has been found about three miles outside the Isles of Shoals, on her beam ends. How she came there or what became of her crew we have not learned.

The daughters of Mrs. Johanna Lawry are passing a few weeks with her at the Point.

Messrs. Frank E. Lawry and J. A. Mace have bought a nice boat, which they will use in fishing.

There were about thirty-five sail in the lower harbor at the time of the gale last week. The storm made havoc in many of the cornfields around the town, and the apple trees also suffered a good deal.

There were a few mackerel taken with hooks off Duck island last Friday. They were very large, and there seemed to be plenty of them in the water; most of them stayed in the water, too, as they did not seem to care much about biting. They did not school any, so a seine would have been useless.

A steamboat which came down the river last Saturday afternoon, and passed up again after dark, had on board a band which gave the "Pointers" some good music; it sounded very fine across the water.

Mrs. Francena A. Lawry and a party of friends made a pleasant trip to York beach one day last week, and report a very enjoyable time. JAMBO.

AROUND HOME.

Pears' is the purest and best Soap made.

A large barkentine, flying the British flag, was towed to the Concord railroad wharf Wednesday morning last.

A large number of beach people attended "Humbug," by Roland Reed and company, at Music hall on Wednesday evening.

A new billiard-parlor is about to be opened in the Waldron block, opposite the Kearsarge house. It promises to be the finest arranged of any in the city.

Keep the ball a rolling. Another new tonsorial parlor has been opened in Franklin block, in one of the rooms formerly occupied by the Public Library.

The Emmet House, corner of State and Mulberry streets, owned by estate of the late John Donovan, has been purchased by Mr. George W. Randall.

Steamer Ice King, of Bath, was lying at Jones' wharf on Wednesday, in readiness to tow out a coal barge discharging at Concord wharf.

A branch of the "order of Elks" is about to be formed in this city, a sufficient number of gentlemen having signified their intention of becoming charter members.

"Humbug" and Roland Reed served to enthuse a good audience at Music hall, Wednesday evening. Mr. Reed is a comedian par excellence, and the company support him in a first-class manner.

A select company of young ladies from this city, have rented the finely located Pickering cottage at Concord Bluff, York beach, which they will occupy from Sept. 1st to the 15th.

The crew for the life-saving station at Rye beach were physically examined at the custom house in this city on Wednesday, Aug. 29th. They begin duty on Saturday, Sept. 1st.

The schooner C. B. Church with 1351 tons of coal, arrived at this port on the 28th inst., and the barge Scotia with 1735 tons of coal, arrived on the 29th inst., both to J. Albert Walker.

A two seated carriage containing two ladies and several children collided with Boynton's pop-beer wagon near the railroad crossing on Vaughan street, Wednesday forenoon, and smashed the front wheel of the carriage.

Mr. Emanual Charlesworth has on exhibition in the window of his store on Islington street a very fine collection of American and foreign birds. He considers it—and it doubtless is—the finest collection in the city.

The following-named persons are reported as likely to be named as candidates for nomination at the democratic senatorial convention of the Portsmouth district: Michael J. Griffin, David Urch, George E. Hodgdon, William Conn.

Howe Call, Esq., and Ex-Alderman Cook, are spoken of as likely to be the choice of the Independent Democratic club about to be formed here, as officers, in support of the election of Harrison and Morton, as president and vice president of the United States.

A large delegation went to Kittery, Wednesday evening, to the republican flag raising. Much enthusiasm was manifested at the fine speeches made by the several speakers. The Portsmouth band was in attendance, and furnished excellent music.

The 27th Maine Reg't will hold the annual reunion on Sept. 12th at Kittery Foreside. Hayes' hall has been engaged for the occasion. Dr. M. F. Wentworth of Kittery was colonel of this regement, and Mr. D. M. Shapleigh was a lieutenant in it.

A grand republican rally and clambake took place on Saturday afternoon at Wells, and was attended by about 1500 people. Hon. Geo. Goodwin presided, and speeches were made by Hon. H. H. Burbank of Saco, Rev. Mr. Morse of Wells, Dr. John C. Stewart of York, and Hon. Nathaniel Hobbs of North Berwick. The speeches were able, timely and convincing. The cheers for Harrison and Morton and Hon. Thomas B. Reed clearly showed that the men of old Wells are alive to the political questions of the hour.

William Kennedy, a lawyer, and Irin Van Wie, a prominent manufacturer, are doing good work for Harrison in central New York. Four years ago they were both on the stump for Cleveland.

At a meeting of the Maine Central railroad stockholders, held at Portland, Me., Thursday afternoon, Aug. 23d, it was voted to ratify the lease of the Ogdensburg road, unanimously. The whole number of votes cast was 27,993, out of a total of 35,935, more than the necessary two-thirds voting.

According to M. de Beaumont, the average number of words used by a cultivated person in conversation is 10,000. Democratic orators in their campaign speeches find that this is about 9500 too many for them.

The value of the real estate and personal property of California this year as returned by the local assessors is $1,083,333,328, which shows an increase of $175,213,848 over last year. This is exclusive of the railroads, which foot up about $50,000,000.

It is stated that William Scully, alias "Lord" Scully, the alien Illinois landlord, will offer his farms for sale and dispose of all his property in that state. By the enforcement of the alien land law Scully's system of "rack renting" has been broken up, his tenants refusing to pay rent.

Two Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul recently captivated the Sultan of Turkey. A poor mussulman of Constantinople had been condemned to death for some trifling offence. He had a large family and the sisters were moved to compassion by the distress of his eight children. They decided to visit abdul Hamid. He received them graciously, listened to their eloquent appeal, and sent them to the prison with a state officer that they might release the condemned man with their own hands. He further told them not to forget the way to his palace, as they would always be welcome.

The new number of the "Electic Magazine" now before us is noticeable among the magazines of the month for its variety and interest. Emile de Laveleye opens with a discussion of "The Future of Religion." "In Canning Tower" is the title of an article forecasting the details of the terrible struggle which will take place when two great ironclads of the most improved modern type meet in a sea-duel. Henri Rochefort discusses the Boulangist movement from the frienly radical standpoint. One of the most interesting papers of the number is by Frances Power Cobbe, "The Scientific Spirit of the Age," and it deplores and castigates the materialistic influence of scientific progress. H. M. Mozier finds "England's Real Peril" in the great competition in trade and commerce pushed by other nations. One of the most suggestive contributions is the account of the Co-operative Congress in England, which throws light on the only practicable solution to the labor question. "Mammoth Hunting in Siberia," and "Evolving the Camel," the latter by Grant Allen, are fascinating articles in popular science, and there are many other light and entertaining articles. Published by E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond street, New York; $5 per year, single number forty-five cents; trial subscription for three months, $1.

CITY OF PORTSMOUTH.

CITY MARSHAL'S OFFICE, July 14, 1888.

FREQUENT complaints having been brought to my notice that men and boys are in the habit of bathing in the waters exposed to the streets, highways and other public places, especially in Sagamore Creek near Lafayette road and Sagamore road, in violation of the city ordinances; notice is hereby given that all persons found offending in this particular will be prosecuted to the extent of the law.

JEFF. C. ROWE, City Marshal.

LICENSE YOUR DOGS.

SECTION 1. No dog shall be permitted to go at large or loose in this city until the owner or keeper of such dog, or the keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall have procured from the city marshal a license for such dog.

SECTION 5. It shall be the duty of the city marshal to cause all dogs to be killed which shall be found at large or loose within the city without a collar marked as required by law, and to cause all dogs so killed to be buried, and any person may lawfully kill any dog found within the limits of this city going at large contrary to the provisions of this chapter.

SECTION 6. In case any dog shall be found loose or going at large contrary to any of the foregoing provisions, or in case any dog not licensed shall be provided with a collar marked as required in this ordinance, the owner or keeper thereof or the head of the family or keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall upon conviction thereof be fined five dollars.

The above extracts from the city ordinances of the city will be strictly enforced.

Poisons of the Toilet.

The modern toilet artist deals in the strongest drugs, poisons and stimulants. She will offer you gentian and cocoa as fillips to the nervous force, and genteel "pick-me-ups," and women will take them, ignorant that they are spending life double tides, and using up in two or three brilliant years the nervous force that should carry them safely through a score. You are offered corrosive sublimate (under another and prettier name) as a face wash, sovereign for refining the complexion, and you may buy arsenic bonbons to produce the blanc mat admired in certain circles, and overlay your face with lead lotions and powders, which make short work of paralyzing the muscles and painting the dreaded "blue line" of lead poisoning on the gums and lips. Foolish girls see the dead white actress' complexion worn by venturesome creatures, who would sign their souls away, supposing them to own such things, for a new grace, and feel sure there can't be any harm in it, for she looks lovely, and says she never felt better in her life. But they do not see the terrible closing experience of such lives of folly, which are known only to doctors and agonized friends. Idiocy, dropsy, are the kindest finale, but death in some form is the penalty you must all pay who begin the arsenic habit. You hear that bismuth powders and lotions are harmless, and they appear so in nine cases out of ten. But the effect in the unlucky tenth case is so much like poisoning no one can tell the difference. But few stop to think that the sallow, deadened complexion left in a few years by the use of bismuth powders and washes is produced by atrophy of the skin vessels, and is, in fact, death at the surface.—Shirley Dare's Letter.

The Luxury of Today.

Now, the growth of luxury for the last half century has been very great and very general. We do not merely mean that the rate of living has advanced. This of itself is not necessarily to be deplored in any class, and in some classes is a matter for serious congratulation. That an agricultural laborer, for instance, should be able to procure more food, better clothing, better housing, and better education for his children than he could fifty years ago is a matter to rejoice over, and a state of things to secure by every proper means. What we mean is, that the scale of comfort deemed necessary by every class has enormously grown. Take the upper classes. The great houses throughout the country are administered in a style the increase of which is quite disproportionate to the growth of income of their owners. The expenditure on far fetched foods and most recherche wines, the most costly amusements, has vastly developed. And the tendency is ever upward. Young men beginning life try to start where their fathers left off. Some quarter of a century ago there was a discussion in the newspapers as to the prudence or otherwise of young persons in the upper classes marrying on an income of 800 a year. Three times that income would be now considered inadequate by the critics who conducted the discussion.—Quarterly Review.

San Francisco's Mint Chimney.

In 1856 the old mint chimney was taken down and the rubbish deposited on a vacant lot, where the vigilance committee had their fort (Fort Gunnybags), and near which they hanged Casey, Cora, Hetherington and Brace. Some men poking among this rubbish found gold sticking to the scattered bricks and mortar? An excitement was organized immediately, and for a few days the lot was alive with men and rockers, washing out the debris of the old mint chimney. How did the gold get into the brick and mortar? It flew up the chimney when melted in a sublimated form, and, being condensed into a solid before reaching the top, collected on the inside, as found. These city gold washings were as much of a novelty to many San Franciscans as they would be in New York, for the nearest gold mines are 150 miles distant from San Francisco, and thousands in that city had never been to them.—Prentice Mulford in New York Star.

Fashion in Canine Pets.

The fashion in pet dogs is as varying as in wearing apparel. A certain breed will be all the rage for a few years and then it is supplanted by another. For instance, two years ago the pug was the most popular pet in the canine family, but now his star is on the wane and he falls back to the rear of the procession. While the pug is a stylish looking dog and decidedly aristocratic in his behavior, he has quite a phlegmatic temperament; but since he has begun to run counter to fashion's decree he will degenerate and become as cor . as other dogs. Five or ten dollars will buy a fine pug pup now. Two years ago $50 would not purchase the same dog. One thing in the pug's favor will always make him a popular household pet—there has never yet been a case of hydrophobia from the bite of one of these little pets, and they are decidedly kind and affectionate to the children.—Globe-Democrat.

Female Street Car Conductors.

They have female street car conductors in Valparaiso, and the street cars are double deckers. The average Chilian is a rough character, haughty, arrogant, impertinent and abusive, and the country has more intemperance than any other in South America, and quarrels and murder. The young bloods flirt with the female conductors and make the cars a nuisance. These female conductors wear a uniform of blue flannel, with a Panama hat and white pinafore with many pockets, reaching from the breast to the ankles. The Chilian women are not pretty, and many of them are of a Saxon mixture. Criminals and castaway women wear a kind of nun costume, and are thus advertised. Women who have been false to their marriage vows sometimes go to a convent and whip themselves literally.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

To Have a Big Globe.

Students of the earth's surface will be anxious to see the huge globe that is to be exhibited next year in the Champs de Mars, Paris. It will rotate properly on an axis, and will be accurately constructed on a scale of one-millionth. Even at that it will be a tremendous thing and give considerable of an idea of the appearance of the world we live in. —Chicago Herald.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

"The World Moves,"

Maintained Galileo, when his tormentors racked him for advocating the true system of Copernicus. Certain follies hold out, however, against the illumination of discovery and experience. There are hosts of people who, because they have adopted certain principles, continue to swallow them to their dying day in defiance of the laws of common sense. Mercury, drastic purgatives, super-potent narcotics and sedatives, though they have given ground before the irresistible progress of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a national, painless remedy for disorders of the liver, the stomach and the bowels, still continue to make ambulating apothecary shops of many stomachs. The symptoms of liver trouble are easily remediable without any abdominal disturbance with this beneficent alterative. So also are constipation, sick headache, heartburn and an inability to digest satisfactorily. It cures fever and ague, rheumatism and kidney trouble.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. When we consider the patronage of this great office, [the presidency,] the allurements of power, the temptation to retain place once gained, and more than all, the availability a party finds in an incumbent whom a horde of office holders, with a zeal born of benefits and fostered by the hope of favors yet to come, stand ready to aid with money and trained political service, we recognize in the eligibility of the president for re-election a most serious danger to that calm, deliberate and intelligent political action, which must characterize a government by the people.—Grover Cleveland.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. SERVANT GIRLS FROM INDIA.

Queen Victoria Delighted with Them Factory Versus Kitchen.

Queen Victoria, according to Truth of London, has become perfectly delighted with the female domestics that one of the ladies of the royal household brought to her from Bombay several years ago. She has recently sent orders for servants enough to perform the work in Osborne, Balmoral and Windsor castles. It is said that these girls from "India's coral strand" represent all the virtues and none of the vices common to the average city domestic. They entertain no beaus in the kitchen, eat none of the choice meats left over from a meal, have no impecunious relatives to supply with sugar and spices, do not want to go to a picnic every week, and never give notice that they are going to leave just before house cleaning time. They are represented as quick to learn, while they consider obedience as a virtue. They soon acquire enough of the English language to enable them to understand all that is said to them about their work, but never learn the words necessary to use "in jawing back." They are scrupulously neat and orderly in doing their work. When it is completed they go to their own apartments and nothing is heard from them.

It is thought that the fashion of employing Indian servants will extend from palace to mansion and from there to smaller houses. With all the complaints about the difficulty of obtaining employment in Great Britain, most housekeepers have trouble in securing domestics. As a rule no girl will accept domestic service if she can obtain employment in a store, shop or factory. There has been so much said and written about higher occupations for women that few are willing to work on the ground floor of a house.

Female human nature is the same in America as in England. The disposition in both countries is to leave the occupations that are fairly remunerative and which offer constant employment for those where the pay is small and the tenure uncertain. Housework is considered as menial, while doing piecework in a factory is regarded as elevating. It is claimed that there is a certain independence about work in a factory that does not pertain to employment in a private house. The sort of independence that girls have in establishments where cloth is made into garments that are to be sold to a great clothing house has been shown in the various articles now being printed in the newspapers. An exhibit has also been made of the pay they receive. A better state of things exists in factories where wool and cotton are converted into cloth, and even in places where cloth is made into garments by the firms that sell them directly to customers, but in neither case is there as large pay, as good treatment, or as much leisure as can be found in a private house presided over by an intelligent woman.

In a factory a girl learns scarcely anything that will be of benefit to her if she ever has a house to keep of her own. In the house of another, managed as the home of a refined family, she will have an opportunity of learning almost everything that will be of advantage to her in after life. She can acquire the art of cooking, if she is deficient in it, learn how to take care of furniture and how to receive and entertain company. A man and a woman who have a few domestics take an interest in them and are ordinarily good friends to them. It is hardly to be expected that the overseer of fifty persons will take an interest in any of them.—Chicago Times.

Optimistic View of Life.

Putting aside the question of revealed religion, poets and philosophers have begun to see a dignity in human nature, a wisdom and beauty in life as we know it, and to abandon those dark and dangerous speculations which most commonly lead thought into gloom and despondency. Things exist according to fixed laws, some of which we have discovered and know to be just. We reason, therefore, that those laws which we have not yet penetrated, and may never penetrate, whose manifestations seem cruel and unjust, would, if properly understood, be found equally beneficent. Let us, therefore, obey those laws which we comprehend, bear with patience that which we control, hold fast to the happiness which comes in our way, and not trouble ourselves too much about the mysteries of our existence.

Especially let us recognize ourselves as a part of humanity. Let us be charitable and sympathetic, so that others will grant us similar favors and the sum of happiness be increased. Let us not curse men for faults for which from the nature of humanity they are not responsible. Let us rather study the causes of those faults and try if there be remedies for them. Let us consider that nations are only aggregations of single men, each of whom is bound by the same limitations as ourselves.—Charles Lotin Hildreth in American Magazine.

London and French Shopkeepers.

London shopkeepers expect their customers to know what they want and take it if they find it; French shopkeepers display more wares on their counters than they have got on their shelves in the hope of tempting weak human nature—the weak feminine nature—to buy what is shown, whether needed or not. In a London shop a customer will always be treated with great civility; in a French shop a customer will not be treated at all—she will simply be endured. Something of this passive disrespect of the customer is to be encountered in those great private shopping institutions of England, the co-operative stores. A set off for its unpleasantness in this case, however, is the undoubted cheapness of the articles, which are actually sold at wholesale rates.—Olive Logan in Boston Transcript.

To Stop a Dog Fight.

A certain means of stopping a dog fight is showering something over the dogs that will produce sneezing. Be his will ever so good, the motion of sneezing involuntarily opens a dog's jaws. Pepper answers very well, but snuff is probably the best, as it can be used ad libitum, and will certainly produce the effect if enough is used. In a large kennel a supply of snuff should always be kept on hand.—Forest and Stream.

WEARERS OF GLASS EYES.

How Artificial Eyes Are Made and Who Uses Them—Facts of Interest.

Upward of 5,000 New Yorkers wear artificial eyes, and of this goodly number the majority are ladies, whose sole ambition to supersede the works of the Creator is centered in the hope of becoming attractive. Artificial eyes may be classified into two distinct kinds, viz., glass and composition. Until recently those who had the misfortune to lose an eye have provided themselves with artificial ones of glass to hide the deformity. Eyes are to a man what the vestibule door is to the house—an indication of what is inside. The idealistic part of the glass eye contains without doubt more fact than fiction.

Oculists and opticians say that thousands who make use of this valuable and important artifice show no evidence except to an expert of any impaired sight. The glass eyes which are manufactured in this country are really made of glass. They have many defects, among which may be mentioned their liability to be broken, and the hard pressure of their edges upon the fleshy parts. A fall or blow will often break them, or they will sometimes crack spontaneously, and in addition to the loss of the artificial eye, the patient's eyelids are frequently wounded. This accounts for the fact of children being rarely provided with glass eyes on account of them not being able to handle them without danger.

The composition eye, which is made of a substance resembling celluloid, is now in universal demand. It is much worn by ladies and children, as it prevents a distortion of the face. After the human eye is once impaired and total blindness sets in, the face will be distorted if no artificial eye is worn, by the falling of the eyelids. The composition eyes are imported from Germany, and have destroyed the market of the glass specimens which are exclusively manufactured in this country. Some of these are remarkable for close imitation, while others are beautiful specimens of art. They are generally worn by those who have an injured eye extracted, but the majority of artificial eye wearers are recruited from the ranks of the fair sex, who perchance are squinted or possessed of some other trifling ocular deformity.

In certain diseases of the eye it becomes necessary to extract the orb so affected. as the eyes are so intimately connected through their nervous structures that one diseased eye will ultimately ruin the other by sympathetic ophthalmia. The operation of removal is known as "enuclication," by which the muscles are left behind to assist in moving the artificial eyes.

These are not round, as is popularly supposed, but shaped like a shell, and cause little or no trouble in being introduced. They are generally removed at night and the parts washed with water or lotion. They generally last three years, aster which they lose their polish and become unfit for wear. New ones are then introduced after the same fashion, and when once accustomed to this routine the wearer experiences very little inconvenience in their adjustment. The composition eyes possess the advantage of lightness, and the composition may be trimmed with a penknife or a file to adjust it accurately and comfortably to the parts. No artificial eye is of perpetual duration, because by its incessant movement it loses its smooth surface.

One of the largest manufacturers of glass eyes in this country said to the writer a few days ago: "It is surprising to think of the vast number of persons who wear glass eyes. The largest percentage, of course, are ladies, who annually expend large sums in the purchase of those transluscent optics, and unless a person thoroughly experienced in handling those eyes no other could discover that they are imitations. Glass eyes cost all the way from $8 to $35 each, but composition eyes which are imported cost extravagant sums, though some may be purchased at comparatively low prices, depending, of course, on the quality of the material. You know cattle also wear glass eyes, and thousands of men find themselves the possessors of horses and other animals ornamented with those eyes which they purchased on the supposition that they were free from defects."

The insertion of artificial eyes requires great skill on the part of the operator, as the comfort and stability of the artificial orb to the patient are dependent on the process of transformation. The eye is taken between the forefinger and thumb of the right hand, while the other hand is placed on the forehead and its extremities used to raise the upper lid. It is then introduced under the upper eyelid, the lower one is drawn down by the disengaged fingers, and behind this the piece at once places itself.

In extracting a glass or composition eye the easiest way is to catch hold of it between the fingers and draw it outward. Should any difficulty be experienced the head of a pin or some blunt instrument inserted under the head at once removes the obstacle. This is where the folly of using glass eyes becomes apparent, for if not allowed to rest or fall on a handkerchief or some soft material they break, and their replacement at frequent intervals costs a considerable amount.

Glass eye making requires judgment in the selection of proper glass. This is composed of sand, soda, saltpeter, potash, lime and chloride of lead. All these ingredients are put into a melting pot for a period of twenty hours and subjected to a heat of 1,600 degs. The sand and other chemicals then unite in forming a liquid. The glass blower then uses an iron pipe heated enough to make the glass stick to it. This is stirred in a circular direction until a ball is formed. The pupils, which are made in the same manner, from glass of different shades and colors, are now inserted into this globular mass, and allowed to cool, after which the congealed substance is paired off in any form or manner required.—Joseph W. Gavan in New York Press.

The Flavor of Milk.

Milk is altered both in taste and appearance by the character of the food supplied to the cows. It is colored by madder and saffron, scented by plants of the onion tribe, and changed in taste by such articles as turnips. Certain food may give it medicinal properties, and milk thus medicated is proposed as a method of treating disease.—Arkansaw Traveler.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

The Suits Against the Concord Railroad.

The Portsmouth correspondent of the Boston Advertiser says:

The directors of the Concord railroad are not alarmed at the multiplicity of or amount claimed in the suits of the Manchester & Lawrence railroad. The managing director says that after the court has passed upon the legal question raised by the demurrer an examination of the books of the Concord road will show that, if the contract was legal and sums can be recovered thereunder, a large balance is due from the Manchester & Lawrence to the Concord road. The result of the suit is hopefully regarded by the Concord directors as likely to add to their surplus at least $500,000. These suits seem to be instigated by a new set of men, who have of late become owners of the stock in the Manchester & Lawrence road. If the former directors had remained in office, there is little likelihood that the actions would have been begun.

The litigating owners of the Manchester & Lawrence road will perhaps ascertain that there is many a long day between instituting an action at law against a railroad, and obtaining a judgment. There is probably no likelihood of these cases being tried before a jury. If the demurrer is overruled, and the Concord road is told that "notwithstanding you have been naughty you must come to time," there must be a thorough investigation of complicated accounts such as the books of railways which have to keep their surplus within a compass, and make reports which do not afford much information, are apt to show. When the points of law in these cases have been passed upon by the supreme court, the figures can be ascertained perhaps better by the parties themselves or some competent referee, and the way out of the litigation will be simple and apparent.

It is Just So.

The Dover Democrat, commenting on Cleveland's demand that he be granted extraordinary powers of retaliation against Canada, well says:

A year ago last March, Congress by law gave Cleveland the authority and power to offset and avenge the outrages of Canada upon our fishermen by retaliation in kind, in our own waters and sea ports, the only sensible thing that could be done. But from that time down to to-day, he has never lifted a finger to enforce that law, although the Canadian outrages have continued just the same as though the law of Congress had never been enacted at all. He has stood perfectly still and seen our vessels captured, our seaman insulted, robbed and imprisoned by the Canadian satellites of England, and never done one single thing to prevent it, or protect those seamen or obtain redress for the outrages upon them.

This is the solemn and indisputable truth. And now he has broken out anew and pretends he wants more authority, enough to lock up our great railroads and arteries of internal commerce, which have not the least thing under heaven to do with the fishery question in any way, shape or manner, for the purpose of retaliation upon Canada. We don't believe a word he says. He only wants to change the tariff issue which he himself forced into this political campaign, and substitute a great war issue or retaliation squabble with England to excite the patriotism of the country in his behalf upon which he can ride into the presidency for another term. That's all there is of it, and it proves him as arrant demagogue instead of a statesman.

THEY SOON GROW OLD.

They soon grow old who grope for gold
In marts where all is bought and sold:
Who live for self, and on some shelf
In darkened vaults hoard up their pelf,
Cankered and crusted o'er with mold;
For them their youth itself is old.

Queer Binding for Books.

Extravagance in binding has frequently furnished an opening for the display of fantastic tricks and fads. In a bookseller's catalogue was once an advertisement of a Latin copy of Apuleius' "Golden Ass," bound in the skin of an ass. A book relating to Jeffrey Hudson, the celebrated dwarf, was bound in a piece of the silk waistcoat of Charles I. Fox's historical works were bound in fox skin, and Bacon's works were dressed out in hog skin. One offspring of the French revolution was the grim humor of binding books in human skin. France was not alone in this practice. In various parts of England the skin of murderers has been tanned and used to bind books. The public library of Bury St. Edmands has a book containing the account of the trial of a man for murder bound in his own skin. Eccentricities of binding in such as skins of cats, crocodile, mole, seal, wolf, tiger, bear, etc., abound. The use of cloth in binding is one of comparatively recent date. In 1835 Archibald Leighton introduced cloth for covers, the first books so bound being Byron's complete works.—Providence Journal.

The Alaskan Damsel's Doll.

The dusky damsel of Alaska has an ivory doll. It is carved from walrus tusk any length from one to six inches, with nose carved, and eyes, eyebrows and mouth of black enamel. Even the inch-long baby has features carefully made. She has also a doll of wood, six or eight inches long, with its face carved and a curious ornament just below the corners of the mouth. This is a blue bead, and is in imitation of the fashion of her tribe, of making in the lower lip an opening like a button hole, through which any desired ornament may be thrust. None of the Alaska dolls have joints, but this unnatural stiffness has apparently not been altogether satisfactory to the small damsels, for some are carved in a sitting posture.

The most humble doll is simply a stick with a head carved on the end. But the most elaborate of all Indian dolls I have seen belongs also to Alaska. It is carved from dark colored wood, with mouth open, showing three white teeth, and it has real hair, in locks six inches long, stuck into holes in the wooden head, with the drollest "patchy" effect.—Olive Thorne Miller in St. Nicholas.

Visions of the Future.

Has any great invention ever been made that did not have a forecast in the visions of some humorist? When, fifty years ago, we read the fun of Sir John Mandeville and of his trumpet, that held his frozen words until he reached Italy, where they thawed out and blew away in his exact tones, to his amazement, who conceived that we were close to the discovery of a little instrument that would bottle up language and song, and free it after the lapse of days, years or ages? Our steam travel was foreguessed, also, in the same way by Newton, and air navigation has been a jocose dream since the "Arabian Nights." Our imagination can probably never reach farther than our capacity to realize; the wonder is that it can reach as far.—Globe-Democrat.

Emancipation Among the Cherokees.

Among other events showing the progress of emancipation, the act of the national council of Cherokees has been overlooked. Professor Foster writes to The Century recalling the fact that this tribe did, on the 18th day of February, 1863, pass a decree of emancipation. "Be it enacted by the national council, That all negro and other slaves within the lands of the Cherokee nation be, and they are hereby, emancipated from slavery; and any person or persons who may have been held in slavery are hereby declared to be free forever." This act is remarkable from the pro-slavery sentiment which was known to predominate in the Indian tribes, although never as strong among the Cherokees as among the Creeks.—Globe-Democrat.

The Famous Bahia Meteorite.

The famous Bahia or Bendego meteorite was landed in Rio de Janeiro on June 15, and is now in the collection of the Brazilian National museum. The transportation of this great mass of iron, whose weight was variously estimated from six to nine tons, and which has been found to weigh 5,871 kilograms, was rendered possible by the recent completion of a line of railroad passing within 115 kilometers of the Bendego creek, where it has lain since the unsuccessful attempt to remove it to Bahia in 1785.—Chicago Herald.

The Results of "Cheapness."

I heard a milliner girl who worked in one of our great bazars where things are "so cheap" say once: "There's no encouragement in this establishment for a girl to do good, conscientious work. The girl that is best paid and most praised by the forewoman is the one who rushes the most thread through the most ribbon trimming and cloth and makes the hat or bonnet just hang together."—Prentice Mulford in New York Star.

New Hampshire Items.

John Higgins and Charles M. Armstrong were on Aug. 29th released from the New Hampshire state prison, in which each had served two years, but were at once arrested, Higgins for burglary and assault with intent to kill in Salem, Mass., and Armstrong for burglary in Strafford, this state.

The steamers Lamprey and Eagle, two excursion steamers, running between Lake Village and the Weirs to the Veterans' reunion, collided on the evening of Aug. 29th, and the latter's bow was badly smashed. Two or three on the Eagle were injured, including Mrs. Frank French of Laconia, who was taken home. Both steamers were heavily loaded with passengers, and it was thought at one time the Eagle would sink, but she managed to reach Lake Village.

James Whitehouse of Dover died on the 28th inst., in the house where he was born August 31, 1816. He was a brick mason by trade, and leaves a widow and two sons. He was commissioned a captain in the New Hampshire militia on April 25th, 1839, and served with it many years. He was the democratic candidate for mayor of Dover in 1883 and 1887, being defeated each time. He held many minor offices.

CHARLES E. SIMPSON

British affection for Cleveland, which, in some cases, was temporarily alienated by his bellicose message, is rapidly becoming restored as the real purport of the document comes to be understood. It does not take our English neighbors long to see the difference between a genuine state paper and a campaign flyer.

The Boston Globe says, referring to Mr. Cleveland's handsome contribution in behalf of his re-election, "After a government employee has earned his salary and drawn it, every dollar of it is his own, to do with what he likes." That statement will be regared as important, if true, by many a government employe who has been given to understand that quite a portion of the dollars of his salary properly belongs the democratic campaign fund.

May do for a stupid boy's excuse; but what can be said for the parent who sees his child languishing daily and fails to recognize the want of a tonic and blood-purifier? Formerly, a course of bitters, or sulphur and molasses, was the rule in well-regulated families; but now all intelligent households keep Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which is at once pleasant to the taste, and the most searching and effective blood medicine ever discovered.

Nathan S. Cleveland, 27 E. Canton st., Boston, writes: "My daughter, now 21 years old, was in perfect health until a year ago when she began to complain of fatigue, headache, debility, dizziness, indigestion, and loss of appetite. I concluded that all her complaints originated in impure blood, and induced her to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine soon restored her blood-making organs to healthy action, and in due time reëstablished her former health. I find Ayer's Sarsaparilla a most valuable remedy for the lassitude and debility incident to spring time."

J. Castright, Brooklyn Power Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "As a Spring Medicine, I find a splendid substitute for the old-time compounds in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, with a few doses of Ayer's Pills. After their use, I feel fresher and stronger to go through the summer."

MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS.

In Board of Mayor and Aldermen, Aug. 30th, Mayor Hodgdon in the chair:

Absent, Ald. Casey.

Claim of John Locke of Newcastle, for damages for injury to a horse, was referred to committee on claims.

Communication from Mark H. Wentworth, relating to the Pleasant street reservoir, was laid on the table.

Bonds of Policeman Smart and Reagan were approved.

Bills to the amount of $500 were ordered to be paid.

The bill providing for the construction of two or more schoolhouses, sent up from the Common Council the previous week, was passed. The Mayor, and Aldermen Urch, Priest and Littlefield were appointed as the committee on behalf of the board of aldermen, provided for in the bill.

Request of Mrs. Bowles for the removal of a tree on Dennett street, was referred to the committee on streets, with power.

Anderson & Junkins were granted leave to encumber Market street for building purposes.

Adjourned to Monday afternoon, Sept. 3d, at three o'clock, the board voting to meet at that time for the purpose of inspecting a proposed site for a reservoir in the southwest part of the city.

"RATS."

Messrs. W. W. McIntire and E. Washington Brown were for several days this week engaged in repairing the bellows of the organ in the Universalist church, and a tough job they had of it. A rat, possibly of musical tastes but certainly of large size and corresponding appetite, had made its nest in the bellows, and eaten up every bit of the leather, gnawed deeply into the wood wherever two pieces were joined, probably to get the glue, and committed other depredations in the interior of the organ. No wonder the instrument wouldn't go.

SHOULD BE CARED FOR.

"Black Jack" Russell, a fisherman who is said by the rivermen to be so badly affected in his mind as not to be fit to be at large, was capsized from a dory on Thursday afternoon, near Liberty bridge. He had a lot of bedding and kitchen utensils in the dory at the time; nobody knew where he was going, and he did not appear to know himself. He managed to scramble back into the dory, which was half filled with water, and was just pushing out from the wharf when some of the river men interfered and prevented him; they had to use some force, at which he was so incensed that he at once hurried to the police station to enter a complaint for assault, and was there detained.

THE PATRIARCHS' BANNER.

Through the courtesy of Capt. Albert E. Rand of Canton Senter, Patriarchs Militant, I. O. O. F., we had on Thursday the pleasure of examining the fine banner which was accepted that evening by the Canton from the Pettibone Manufacturing Co., of Cincinnati. The banner, which is of silk, and embellished with the appropriate designs, is mounted upon a cross-bar of polished brass with rings of the same, and to each end of the bar is attached a gold and scarlet cord with heavy gold bullion tassels. The staff is surmounted with a gilded globe bearing a gold crown. The front of the banner is of white silk, with a purple silk velvet lambrequin trimmed with gold lace, fringe and tassels, with the words "Canton Senter, No. 19," in gold letters across the top. On the sides of the banner are the words, "Mustered Jan. 20, 1887;" at the bottom, "Portsmouth I. O. O. F.," and the initials "P" and „M" in old English letters, embroidered in gold in the lower corners.

The escutcheon shield in the centre of the banner has the top of black silk velvet, with a gold-embroidered eye and rays of light, and three links, the peace quarter of blue silk velvet bearing a silver embroidered lamb couchant, and the war quarter of scarlet silk velvet bearing a gold embroidered lion rampant; chevron, cloth of gold with motto, "Pax Aut Bellum" in scarlet silk; degree quarter, purple silk velvet with eight gold crossed crooks and swords.

The back of the banner is of scarlet silk trimmed with gold lace and fringe. The escutcheon shield is of cloth of gold having across the top the words "Patriarchs Militant" in old English letters. In the centre a purple silk velvet Norman shield bearing the motto "Justitia Universalis" on a scarlet band.

DR. WEED'S CASE.

The jury came in at seven o'clock A. M. on the 30th, after an all night session. The verdict was sealed, and not opened until nine o'clock, when the court convened. The jury found the prisoner not guilty, and he was discharged from further custody. A large crowd was in the room, and the prisoner was warmly congratulated by his friends on the result.

MUSIC HALL.

The Manchester Union of Aug. 30th says:

Pat Rooney, the inimitable and unequalled in his line, surrounded by a better and stronger company than ever before, was the attraction at the opera house last evening. Of course Rooney was the central figure, and he presented his eccentric ways and dances to the great amusement of the audience, but with the present company supporting him he has rivals in popular favor, noticeably in the persons of little Kate Rooney and the Quaker City quartet. Miss Katie has much improved in voice and acting since last seen in this city, and the quartet last night fully sustained its previous excellent reputation. "Pat's New Wardrobe" is a pleasing card, and will prove popular with those who enjoy an evening of "fun now and then."

The music by the Music hall orchestra on Wednesday evening of this week was worthy of special commendation; it was excellent. The orchestra now numbers more instruments than ever before, and will prove a great attraction to lovers of good music during the amusement season now just commenced.

BASE BALL.

At Bangor, Aug. 29th, the Portsmouth club defeated the Manchesters fifteen to ten.

POLICE COURT---BATCHELDER J.

THURSDAY, Aug. 30th.

James Swift, Henry Simmons and George Robinson, for drunkenness, were each fined $3, costs $6.90. County farm for the lot, to work it out.

Eugene Powers, another drunk, was allowed to depart on his promise to rid the town of his presence at once.

HARRISON VETERANS.

A meeting of men who in 1840 voted for Wm. Henry Harrison for president of the United States, was called in Dover for Wednesday afternoon of this week, to organize, and make arrangements for attending the republican rally at South Berwick on Thursday, Sept. 6th, when Hon. James G. Blaine and others will address the meeting. There was a goodly gathering of veterans at the time appointed, and the meeting organized by choosing Rev. James Thurston chairman and Joseph A. Peirce secretary. By vote of the meeting, the chair appointed C. H. Horton, Thomas Spurlin, John B. Bruce and Joseph A. Pierce a committee to take measures to carry out the objects of the meeting, and report at an adjourned meeting.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Colby Lowd and wife, of Boston, are visiting Mrs. Lowd's sister, Mrs. S. E. Baker of Fleet street.

Mrs. John S. Bennett and daughters, of State street, arrived home on Thursday from Tamworth, where they have passed the "warm" season.

Capt. Samuel H. Pillsbury of Biddeford, formerly of Kittery, was in this city Thursday last, coming from Gloucester in a cutter yacht in which he the previous day made the trip from Biddeford to Gloucester.

Hon. Lot M. Morrill, United States senator from Vermont, who is a guest of Hon. H. P. Houghton at Little Boar's Head, was in town on Thursday.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

The United States training-ship Saratoga is being rapidly stripped; all her spars have been sent down. The crew will probably be transferred to temporary quarters on board the Constitution this week, to be later sent on board the Constellation, which will arrive here shortly for the purpose of receiving them.

The training ships Portsmouth and Saratoga, at this navy yard, are put out of commission.

From the Portsmouth, Comdr. Edwin White, Lieut. Comdr. William H. Parker, Lieut. W. H. Turner, Surgeon Dwight Dickinson, Boatswain Woodward Carter and Carpenter W. W. Richardson, are detached and placed on waiting orders; Passed Asst. Paymaster John C. Sullivan is detached, ordered to settle accounts, and then await orders; Lieut. L. G. C. Salter, Gunner T. B. Watkins and Sailmaker John J. Byrne are ordered from the Portsmouth to the Constellation.

From the Saratoga, Lieut. William H. Everett, Ensign Armisted Rust, Surgeon W. G. Farwell, Asst. Surgeon R. P. Crandall, Gunner M. K. Henderson, Carpenter A. C. Burroughs and Sailmaker Frank Watson are detached, and placed on waiting orders; Lieut. David Peacock, Ensign P. W. Hourigan and Boatswain William A. Cooper, are ordered from the Saratoga to the Constellation.

LOST.

On Sagamore road, Thursday night, a light Spring Overcoat. The finder will be suitably rewarded on leaving it at Stearns', Goat island, Newcastle.

Pears' is the purest and best Soap made.

The second annual parade of the Portsmouth fire department will take place on Wednesday, Sept. 19th.

Wm. R. Brown, a Dover stable keeper who was badly injured while attempting to stop a runaway horse owned in this city, some days ago, died Aug. 30th, at the age of fifty-four years. He was a native of this city, but had lived in Dover thirty years.

The republican delegates from Farmington to the first district congressional convention have been instructed to vote for Hon. Alonzo Nute as the republican candidate from this district. Mr. Nute is a square republican—and of course a protectionist—is an ex-soldier, and if nominated will poll the full party strength, which is ample to secure his election.

Workmen were on Wednesday and Thursday of this week engaged in taking down and removing a large elm tree from in front of the Ball house on State street.

The hotel Wentworth, Newcastle, closes for the season on Monday, Sept. 3d.

Rosemary Cottage in Eliot will be kept open through September.

Ther was a democratic flag raising and mass meeting in South Berwick on the evening of Aug. 28th, the flag being hoisted on Central square, and B. F. Chadbourne of Biddeford and T. M. Patterson of Colorado speaking in unbounded praise of Cleveland, and with absolute certainty of his re-election. The republicans of South Berwick ran out a flag larger and much handsomer than the democratic one, the same evening.

The Pepperrell house at Kittery Point has had a most successful season. A large number of guests remain for September.

The Kittery republicans hoisted four campaign flags on the evening of Aug. 29th, instead of three as had been announced; and over 2000 people listened to the speeches, which were good ones.

The hotel Park Field, at Kittery Point, has been a favorite resort all through the season, and the guests seem to be in no haste to depart.

MARITIME NOTES.

The coal barges Sunrise and Scotia were at anchor in the lower harbor on Thursday, awaiting their turn to be discharged. These barges were once proud ships, which ploughed the seas of every clime, propelled by clouds of snowy canvas, but are now moved on their coastwise trips only by means of powerful tugs. The transportation of coal by this method to this port has largely increased of late.

Steamer Minneola, with a large party from Haverhill, Mass., arrived here at two o'clock Thursday afternoon, and after an hour's stay started on her return. She had a band of music on board.

A large crowd went out to the Shoals by the steamer Oceanic on Thursday; there will not be many more "excursion rate" days this season, and the people are taking advantage of those that yet remain.

Joseph H. Jameson on Thursday received fares of fish as follows: From schooner Spring Chicken, 2000 lbs.; from the Jessie, 3000; Alice, 2500; Alice Lee, 1000; and a considerable quantity from the shore boats.

The steam yacht Gypsey, belonging to Mr. Starr, is hauled up at Kittery Point to have some repairs made to her shaft.

The judges in the race from Annisquam to the Isles of Shoals and return, sailed several weeks ago, have just made public their report, which gives first prize, $30, to the Black Cloud; second prize, $20, to the Hazard; third prize, $15, to the Mignon. Owing to a misunderstanding the judges neglected to take the time at the finish.

The British court of enquiry at San Francisco into the cause of the collision between the British steamship Oceanic and the American steamship City of Chester, by which the latter was sunk and fifteen lives lost, has exonerated the officers of the Oceanic from blame. The court says the collision can only be attributed to a strong tide carrying the City of Chester across the Oceanic's bows.

The Norwegian steamer Bratsberg, bound from Cape Breton for Montreal with 1700 tons of coal and two lady passengers, was wrecked near Cape a la Baleine, Gulf of St. Lawrence, Aug. 27th, and fifteen of her crew lost. The captain, the two passengers and two of the crew, escaped with their lives.

The strike on the Peoria, Decatur & Evansville road is ended.

Samuel Dicerstall of Chelsea, Mass., a watchman in the rubber works there, while walking from Chelsea to Revere on the track of the Eastern division of the Boston & Maine railroad, on the evening of Aug. 28th, stepped from one track to the other to avoid a train bound from this city to Boston, and was struck and instantly killed by a train moving the other way. A companion, Jacob Shirby, nineteen years old, was also struck, but though badly and perhaps fatally injured was not at once killed.

The motion of the Maine Central railroad for a temporary injunction to prevent the Postal Telegraph Cable company from erecting a line from Mattawamkeag to Vanceboro', has been denied by Judge Libby.

It is stated that there is much smuggling from the provinces into Maine, and that practical free trade is the rule with dutiable articles coming over the line. The reform administration long since displaced the inspector of customs in upper New Hampshire, with a view of reducing the surplus to be derived from Canadian imports over our northern boundary.

The Reveil du Maroc, a journal of Tangiers, Morocco, urges the powers to send ships to the coast towns to prevent the massacre of Jews and Christians. Nothing, it says, will stay the present atrocities but the intervention of some civilized power.

Mrs. Brooks and Miss Brooks, mother and sister of Hugh M. Brooks, alias Maxwell, who was recently hanged at St. Louis, sailed for Liverpool from New York on Aug. 29th, on the steamship Britannic of the White Star line.

Eviction of settlers on railroad lands in Kansas led to the assination of an evicter.

A Lesson in Grammar.

Careless habits of speech are among the prominent faults of our young people, even those young people who have advantages of schools and intelligent home surroundings. Recognizing this, the professor of English literature at Wellesley college has prepared a list of "words, phrases, and expressions to be avoided," from which the young (and old) readers will receive many serviceable hints: Guess, for suppose or think. Fix, for arrange or prepare. Ride and drive, interchangeably. (Americanism.) Real, as an adverb, in expressions real good for really or very good, etc. Some or any, in an adverbial sense; e. g., "I have studied some," for somewhat. "I have not studied any," for at all. Some ten days, for about ten days. Not as I know, for not that I know. Storms, for it rains or snows moderately. Try an experiment, for make an experiment. Singular subject with contracted plural verb; e. g., "She don't skate well." Plural pronoun with singular antecedent: "Every man or woman should do their duty;" or, "If you look any one straight in the face they will flinch." Expect, for suspect. First rate as an adverb. Nice, indiscriminately. (Real nice, may be doubly faulty.) Had rather, for would rather. Had better, for would better. Right away, for immediately. Party, for person. Promise, for assure. Posted, for informed. Post graduate, for graduate. Depot, for station. Stopping, for staying. Try and do, for try to do. Try and go, for try to go. Cunning, for small, dainty. Cute, for acute. Funny, for odd or unusual. Above, for foregoing, more than or beyond. Does it look good enough, for well enough. Somebody else's for somebody's else. Like I do, for as I do. Not as good as, for not so good as. Feel badly, for feel bad. Feel good, for feel well. Between seven, for among seven. Seldom or ever, for seldom if ever, or seldom or never. Taste and smell of, when used transitively. Illustration: We taste a dish which tastes of pepper. More than you think for, for more than you think. These kind, for this kind. Nicely, in response to an inquiry for health. Healthy, for wholesome. Just as soon, for just as lief. Kind of, to indicate a moderate degree. The matter of, for the matter with.—Boston Transcript.

A Scout in Active Service.

The scout of the novel and the show is a very picturesque, kind fellow, thoroughly reckless, a dead shot, the proprietor of a varied selection of scalps, and showing in his moral character that combination of "half angel and half Lucifer" of which Joaquin Miller delights to sing. Like Samson of old, his strength is in hair, and his long flowing locks are the admiration of frontier women and the envy of frontier men. He is always clad in buckskin, fringed and stamped with grotesque designs, while his flowing locks are surmounted with a sombrero that it would take three days to walk round the brim. Such is the eastern conception; now for southwestern reality.

The United States scout in active service wears his hair cut short, in soldier fashion, because he has to sleep on the ground for weeks at a time, and if he wore long and flowing locks they would give him considerable trouble by affording a choice variety of insects a refuge and a dwelling place. He has no collection of scalps. In five years' experience, during which I met nearly every scout of note in New Mexico and in Arizona, I never found one of them with a single scalp except his own. Then, again, outside of some town in which they wanted with a pardonable vanity to show off, I never saw one of them in a buckskin suit. It is too warm in summer and not warm enough in winter. The scout is a good shot, but that is a virtue he shares in common with nearly every man and boy on the frontier.—Con A. Mahony in Inter Ocean.

The Policeman of Mexico.

While returning in the evening to my hotel I stopped at the beautiful park called the Plaza de Zaragoza, which is spread out in almost tropical beauty before the new cathedral. It is filled with orange trees and pecan trees, and is sweet with the odor of pomegranates and acacia blooms. There I found hosts of children playing along the graveled walks. Their chief amusement seemed to consist in throwing twigs and pebbles slyly at the policeman, who, however, did not deign to notice them. The Mexican policeman is usually dressed all in white, with a blue cap, and instead of an ugly club he carries a bright saber. He does not walk about at night from block to block, seeing that all is secure, as our policemen are supposed to do, but after a certain hour of the night he seats himself flat upon the pavement at a street corner, and with his saber drawn and his lantern between his knees patiently waits the Mexican cry of "Watch!" which notifies him when he is needed. The Mexican policeman is therefore a harmless, good natured man, and consequently a favorite with the children.—"R. M. Y." in St. Louis Republic.

Mechanical Art in Poetry.

Poetry is a more mechanical art than most people believe. Fred Latham, who is a cousin of Lord Tennyson, has told me than when the laureate is writing a poem he constructs a rhyming dictionary of his own, thus: A, b, c, d, e, f, g, h, i, j, k, l, m, n, o, p, q, r, s, t, u, v, w, x, y, z.

Then he has written a line, say:

Where Claribel low lieth—

He starts down the alphabet hunting for a rhyme, getting "buyeth," "crieth," "dieth," "lieth," "sigheth," "tieth," "tryeth," "vieth," and so on, out of which of course it is the easiest possible thing to get the line—

The oak tree, thick leaved, ambrosial sigheth, when the proper time comes to introduce that verse into the poem. Usually Lord Tennyson conceals the art by which he gets to his rhymes by putting the manufactured line first and letting the second one carry the real burden of the thought, as any one who will read "Locksley Hall" critically will see.—Henry Dees in Chicago News.

The Nightingale's Song

The nightingale, it is said, has sixteen different beginnings and closes, with many intermediate notes, while other birds have but four or five changes.—Once a Week.

Every manufacturer encouraged in our country makes part of a market for provisions within ourselves, and saves so much money to the country as must otherwise be exported to pay for the manufactures he supplies.—Benj. Franklin.

The great interests of an agricultural, commercial and manufacturing nation are so linked in union together that no permanent cause of prosperity to one of them can operate without extending its influence to the others.—John Quincy Adams.

The hat makers of Lyons, France, have gone on strik .

Grover Cleveland has done more to advance the cause of free trade than any Prime Minister of England has done.—London Spectator.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

"The World Moves."

Maintained Galileo, when his tormentors racked him for advocating the true system of Copernicus. Certain follies hold out, however, against the illumination of discovery and experience. There are hosts of people who, because they have adopted certain principles, continue to swallow them to their stifling day in defiance of the laws of common sense. Mercury, drastic purgatives, super-potent narcotics and sedatives, though they have given ground before the irresistible progress of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a national, painless remedy for disorders of the liver, the stomach and the bowels, still continue to make ambulating apothecary shops of many stomachs. The symptoms of liver trouble are easily remediable without any abdominal disturbance with this beneficent alterative. So also are constipation, sick headache, heartburn and an inability to digest satisfactorily. It cures fever and ague, rheumatism and kidney trouble.

It is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any free trader could employ now.—London Times.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

Aunt Rachael's Bitters.

The undeniable fact that these Bitters are composed in the main of Speer's Grape Juice, with Peruvian bark, snake root, etc., analyzed and recommended to invalids and the medical profession, by the best chemists in the United States, cannot fail in inspiring confidence in the use of these Malarial Bitters.

The American election is infinitely more important to Englishmen than their own internal politics just at this juncture. * * * The main question at issue is English free trade against the continental system of protection.—London Times.

Found Dead.

Last evening a person giving the name of G. R. Thompson registered at Hunt's Hotel, and desired to be called in season to take the 12 P. M. train for Chicago. Being unable to awaken him, the room was entered by means of the ventilator over the dood, when the gentleman was found to be dead. He was advertising agent for Sulpher Bitters, which has an extensive sale. The coroner returned a verdict of death from heart disease. His body will be sent east immediately.—Cin. Commercial.

Scrofula, in the blood, corrupts and contaminates every tissue and fibre in the whole body; but whether appearing in the form of swellings, erysipelas, or running sores, the malignant poisons of this disease are completely eradicated by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

Hay Fever.

I have suffered greatly from periodical returns of hay fever. Covert & Cheever, Druggists, suggested Ely's Cream Balm. I used it during a severe attack. I can cheerfully testify as to the immediate and continued relief obtained by its use. I heartily recommend it to those suffering from this or kindred complaints.—(Rev.) H. A. Smith, Clinton, Wis.

Mr. Cleveland has taken his stand on free trade, * * and on that broad question Mr. Cleveland's candidature naturally and necessarily carries English sympathy.—London Globe.

Why Adamson's Balsam is so Perfect a Medicine. Because it is a scientifically ordered compound, of great potency, the product of years of study, observation and experience in the treatment of throat and lung diseases.

When our manfactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C Calhoun.

Congress have repeatedly, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

The president has subscribed $10,000 to the fund to re-elect Grover Cleveland as president. He subscribed $50 for the relief of the sufferers by the South Carolina earthquake.

DON'T SCOLD

a man for groaning when he has Rheumatism or Neuralgia. The pain is simply awful. No torture in the ancient times was more painful than these twin diseases. But—oughtn't a man to be blamed if, having Rheumatism or Neuralgia, he wont use Ath-lo-pho-ros, when it has cured thousands who have suffered in the same way? It has cured hundreds after physicians have pronounced them incurable.

"The skill of five physicians could not cure me of Rheumatism which had settled in the hips, neck and shoulders. So intense was the pain that sleep was almost impossible. The first dose of Athlophoros gave me relief, and the third enabled me to sleep for four and a half hours without waking. I continued its use, and am now well."

When we consider the patronage of this great office, [the presidency,] the allurements of power, the temptation to retain place once gained, and more than all, the availability a party finds in an incumbent whom a horde of office holders, with a zeal born of benefits and fostered by the hope of favors yet to come, stand ready to aid with money and trained political service, we recognize in the eligibility of the president for re-election a most serious danger to that calm, deliberate and intelligent political action, which must characterize a government by the people.—Grover Cleveland.

My Wife Said

To me last night: How much do you suppose we have paid out for doctors and medicine in the last year? I told her I die not know. To doctors I have paid nothing, and nve dollars' worth of Sulpher Bitters has kept health in our family.

Be Sure

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

NOTIONS ABOUT THE SEA.

Popular Proverbs and Sayings Concerning the Ocean—Maritime Expressions.

Improvements in the vehicles, instruments and modes of navigation have robbed the sea of much of its terrible character, but we shall, nevertheless, find existing among the peoples of both continents, as shown by their popular proverbs and sayings, a wholesome fear of the sea, a recognition of its terrible power, as well as many curious notions about the watery element, its inhabitants and its characteristics.

The saying of Dr. Johnson, "No man will be a sailor who has contrivance enough to get himself into a jail," is more than paralleled by proverbs current among European nations. An old French maxim was: "He who trusts himself on the sea is either a fool, or he is poor, or he wants to die." One of the alternatives serves as a poor excuse to the Spaniard, who says: "Better walk poor than to sail rich." In the same spirit is conceived the Italian proverb, "Praise the sea, but stay on shore." "He who would learn to pray should go to sea," says a well known proverb, and "He who does not venture upon the sea, knows not what God is," replies that most hardy and adventuresome of maritime nations, the Dutch. The Russians say, "When you walk, pray once; when you go to sea, pray twice; when you go to be married, pray three times."

These sayings outline in a general way the dangerous character of the sea, and its treacherous nature, its instability and its immensity, are pointed out by other proverbs and aphorisms.

"The sea makes some rich, others poor," is a general proposition enunciated in a Provencal adage, but the American proverb, "Work with me and I will nourish you; look out for me or I will drown you," teaches the uncertain nature of the sea life, and we may be disposed to heed the warning embodied in the Turkish maxim, "Trust not the discourse of the great, the duration of a calm at sea, the lucidity of the fleeting day, the vigor of thy horse, or the speech of woman." The gentle sex is classed with the treacherous element in other proverbs, current among many nations. Woman, however, is often the greater sufferer from the dangerous nature of the sailor's calling, and a Tamil proverb says, "The wife of the shipmaster is in a lucky situation so long as the ship is safe; if it is lost, she must beg. "The sea has no branches (to cling to), therefore it is better to stay on shore," said the German woodsman, and the French rustic agrees with him: "Admire the sea as much as you will, but don't stir from the cow sheds." The Arab fears the sea today much as he did in the Fifteenth century, when he declared that the hand of Satan rose from the bosom of the "sea of darkness" to seize his frail bark. "It is better," says he, "to hear the belchings of the camel than the prayers of the fish," and he declares the obstinate and dangerous character of the stormy sea in the adage, "The sea has a tender stomach, but a head hard as wood." "In traveling," says an old French proverb, "take the sea, but creep to the shore," and an older saying from a facetious work a century old concludes thus: "The ship is a fool, for it moves continually; the sailor is a fool, for he changes his mind with every breeze; the water is a fool, for it is never still; the wind is a fool, for it blows without ceasing. Let us make an end at once of navigation."

Concerning the tides, waves and salt water, there have been many curious sayings as well as strange superstitions. "That which goes with the ebb comes back with the flood," is another way of expressing a well known sailor adage that "What comes by starboard goes by larboard." Another French proverb expressive of extreme defiance of difficulties: "To brave dangers as the leeward tide does the wind." What a beautiful idea is that conveyed by the Sanscrit sentence: "It is the poets and not the ordinary men who rejoice in beautiful poetical expressions; the influence of the rays of the moon swells the sea, but not the brook."

The use of maritime expressions is much more common even among landsmen far from the sound of the sea than it is usually supposed to be. The Dutch are proverbially addicted to the use of sea language, their inheritance from the sea robbers of the Sixteenth century, and Mr. Clark Russell has shown that the English language borrows many of its most expressive phrases from the sailors. We say a couple are "spliced," a young man is the "main stay" of the family, an interloper "puts his oar in," the member from Podunk "steers through," a man is "hard up," we are frequently "taken aback," a toper is "slewed," a loafer "spins a yarn," you must "try the other tack," etc., etc., all sea expressions beyond a doubt. "Under false colors" would be said of a ship, as well as of a traitor.—F. S. Bassett in Globe-Democrat.

Herr Schoenweg's Discovery.

Securite, the new flameless explosive, is the invention of Herr Schoenweg, and has been used in Germany for two years past. It is composed of a nitrated hydrocarbon in combination with certain oxidizing agents, which is rendered flameless by the addition of a certain proportion of an organic salt. It emits a spark in exploding, but this spark is harmless, not possessing sufficient energy to explode inflammable gases or coal dust. By the action of the organic salt the spark is almost instantly extinguished. In the tests mentioned, the flameless "securite" was exploded in vessels containing the most highly explosive mixture of gas and air, and, in some cases, this combined with coal dust, but while gunpowder invariably causes their explosion, the flameless "securite" did not ignite the gas or the coal dust, and it was demonstrated to be safe, even under more severe tests and conditions than are ever present in mining operations.—Detroit Free Press.

Down in Georgia.

Three Yankee girls are here teaching school, and I'll bet that some of our widowers will marry them before the year closes. Away back before the war, when Yankee girls used to come south and teach school, our widowers married them as fast as they came. They were smart, self reliant and economical, and that is the kind of a wife a widower

The Story of the Rose.

The name rose comes directly from the Latin, and through the Latin from the Greek. In its first form it is supposed to have been derived from the color red. In its different forms it has given its name to many lands. Syria or Suristan is thought to be derived from the name of a beautiful and delicate species of rose, the surl, which grows in that country. Gulistan comes from the Persian name, gul, rose, and Rhodes, the island made so famous by the valiant defense against the Turks by the Knights of St. John, means the land or the place of roses. The rose has popularly been supposed to be indigenous to oriental countries. "Born in the east, it has been diffused like the sunlight all over the world." Æsop told the gardener of his master Xanthus that "the earth is a stepmother to those plants incorporated into her soil, but a mother to those which are her own free product."

Where the wild rose flourishes, there all other roses will grow. And the wild rose, in spite of so much prating to the contrary, seems to be indigenous to all the world, in the temperate zones, except Australia and South America. These countries are among the youngest continents of our earth geologically and the Rosaceæ are the latest comers in time. It had not become rose time with them when man came. The Rosaceæ includes, besides roses, most of the hardy fruit trees and plants, the apple, peach, pear, plum, raspberry, strawberry, blackberry, as well as many ornamental shrubs.—Sophie B. Herrick in The Cosmopolitan.

Bravery of Benedict Arnold.

Now, as Burgoyne retreated to the British "great redoubt," leaving nearly all his cannon on the field, Gen. Ten Broeck threw 3,000 fresh New York militia into the American advance line.

Here the unrestrained ambition of Gen. Arnold showed itself in a series of daring achievements which touch the reader of history with admiration and pity. Refused a command in the morning by Gen. Gates, he could no longer keep in the rear. Mounted on a fine, brown horse, he led first a brigade at the right and then one at the left in impetuous charges on the British position.

"I'll soon put an end to it," he cried, and the soldiers followed him with enthusiasm. Riding up to Col. Latimer's Connecticut regiment, he accosted them:

"Ah! my old friends from New London and Norwich! Come on, boys; if the day is long enough we will have them all in hell before night!"

While charging over the rail breastworks on the British right Arnold received a wound in the same leg that had been struck at Quebec. As he fell under his horse, he shouted: "Go on, boys!"

They "went on," capturing the key of the English position and killing Col. Breymann. The spot is now known as Burgoyne's, or more properly Breymann's hill. The irony of fate gave Gates, in the rear, the laurels of victory, and destined Arnold, wounded, at the head of the American troops, to an infamous memory. Gates did not even mention Arnold in reporting the battle.—C. H. Crandall in American Magazine.

Cloaks on the Installment Plan.

"You would be surprised," said one of these enterprising and somewhat grasping merchants the other day, "at the variety of people who have dealings with us. We have sold to dry goods clerks who were working for $1,000 a year sealskin cloaks for their wives which cost them as high as $400. Sometimes it takes three years to pay for them, but they will have them. The women are extravagant, or one of the neighbors has a cloak, and the poor man has no peace at home until he gets one for his pretty but foolish and ambitious wife. Last winter we sold seventy-five sealskin sacks on the installment plan, and in a great many cases the wives made the purchases unknown to their husbands and saved the money to pay for them out of their allowance for household expenses. We have ladies come here for their fancy bonnets, and in many cases for their dresses, which they never could get if they had to wait until they saved money to pay cash for them. We have a number of cases on our books where articles of dress are either worn out or have become old style and the women are still paying the regular installments on their cost. They must pay or they can't get any more goods, and they know that, and are accordingly very prompt and regular in their payments."—Chicago Herald.

Germs in Flour Barrels.

The total disregard of the public as to sanitary precautions regarding their food is well illustrated by the indifference with which they accept the guaranteed cleanliness of barrels in which flour is furnished. Perhaps they are unaware that fully two-thirds of the flour barrels have been bought up from all parts of the city and various surroundings. A barrel may have been lying in a damp cellar probably containing a pile of disease breeding rags, or molding in some musty garret room or other unpleasant place, is bought up by the enterprising miller, and is again used as a receptacle for flour. The insufficient cleaning it receives is inadequate to destroy any germs it no doubt contains. A liberal use of the scraper is sufficient to give the outside a brand new appearance.—J. J Ring in Globe-Democrat.

Sheep of the World.

The numbers of sheep kept by the principal sheep raising nations of the world are almost past enumeration. It is computed that in Russia there are at least 50,000,000, in Germany 24,000,000, in France 25,000,000, while Spain has 22,000,000, Hungary 14,000,000, Turkey 16,000,000, and Great Britain 22,000,000. In Africa the Algerians raise 10,000,000, and Cape Colony produces 11,000,000. Uruguay, in South America, has over 20,000,000, while the Argentine Confederation has more than 70,000,000. The numbers in Australia are variously estimated between 75,000,000 and 125,000,000, and in the United States there are at least 40,000,000.—Globe Democrat.

Defenders of American Industry.

We are uncompromisingly in favor of the American system of protection; we protest against its destruction as proposed by the president and his party. They serve the interests of Europe; we will support the interests of America. We accept the issue, and confidently appeal to the people for their judgement. The protective system must be maintained. Its abandonment has always been followed by general disaster to all interests except those of the usurer and the sheriff.—Republican National Platform, 1888.

An Ungracious Snub of a Life-Long Democrat.

George Steele of Gloucester, Mass., is a life-long democrat. His father and grandfather were always of that faith. Mr. Steele, as president of the American Fishery Union, desired to present the interests of the fishermen to Mr. Bayard, and in April wrote to Mr. Bayard asking him to fix a time convenient for him to hear their statement. On the second of May, Mr. Bayard wrote a very cold reply, stating that the interests of the association had "already received abundant consideration on the part of the president and the department of state." It was only a few days before that the secretary of state, who addressed Mr. Steele with a formal "Sir!" wrote to the Hon. Lionel Sackville West, British minister, a personal letter beginning with a "Dear Mr. West," stating that he took pleasure in handing him a memorandum embodying the results of informal talks with Sir Ambrose Shea, upon a proposition made on behalf of the Dominion and the Province of Newfoundland, and adding "If this suits he will be happy to confirm the arrangement by an exchange of notes," etc., etc. While Mr. Bayard signs his official letter to his brother democrat his "obedient servant," his personal note to the British Lionel is ended with the assurance "My dear Mr. West, that he very sincerely," etc. Mr. West will not be able to vote for Mr. Cleveland, and Mr. Steele, while able to do so, will see him blamed first.

High License in Minnesota.

The St. Paul Pioneer Press reviews the first year of high license in Minnesota, and the system has proved all that its friends claimed for it. There are in the state only 1597 saloons now, against 2806 when the law went into effect. A decrease in the consumption of liquor is shown in nearly every county. Low groggeries have been closed up, and the liquor business is under better police supervision. Under the old system the average cost of a license was about $300, and the total approximate income was about $850,000. Under high license the average cost of permission to sell is about $650, and the total approximate income is about $1,100,000.

The secretary of the treasury has given permission to the Canadian Pacific railroad to ship goods in bond from California to Chicago, New York and Boston. This was before the retaliation move of the president, when every request of our English cousins was only too promptly acceded to. It was also before Chairman Brice of the democratic national committee resigned his directorship in the Canadian Pacific. But it was not before the commission of the outrages by the Canadians on our fishermen, which—coupled with the rejection by the republican senate of the Cleveland-Bayard surrender of American rights—has so stirred up the patriotic wrath of Mr. Cleveland at last that nothing short of ber-r-lud can appease it.

Alvah W. Sulloway of Franklin has returned from his European visit. Everywhere in England Mr. Sulloway was warmly received by the British manufacturers of hosiery, who endorsed with grateful commendatory remarks his efforts toward establishing free trade. Al. says he has always been politically in fa-stockings at a lower price than the rate of labor paid in New Hampshire would allow the manufacturers to make and sell their products. He of course, sees now that the true democratic way is to import all our foot wear, and let the hosiery manufacturers of the Granite state retire from business, sell their machinery to the junk dealers, and go into politics for a living.

The New York Sun's London correspondent says: "The Grand Trunk people here say they will spend money enough to buy Congress, if necessary to defeat any legislation hostile to their interests in connection with the transit trade of the United States." The present Congress is no great shakes, it must be confessed, with its democratic majority; but the British would-be purchasers of the concern would find, should they attempt to strike a bargain, that it is not quite so much in the market as the reiterated assertions of the democratic papers have led them to suppose.

Gen. Samuel D. Leavitt announces his intention of resigning the office of collector of customs at Eastport, Maine. The fact is, Sam's office is so near the line that he finds it difficult to keep up with the administration in its changes of front toward the people of the Provinces.

The U. S. S. Ossipee, which maintained the dignity of the home squadron for a short time at Halifax, has since the retaliation buncombe message been directed to return to the placid waters of Narragansett bay, and keep out of the way of the provincial projectiles.

The "Atlantic Monthly" for September is notable for the opening chapters of a serial novel by Arthur Sherburne Hardy. The story takes it title, "Passe Rose," from the name of the heroine, a French girl of remarkable beauty, and begins in a way to enlist the heartiest interest. Miss Murfree (Charles Egbert Craddock) finishes a generous installment of her story "The Despot of Broomsedge Cove," and Frances E. Wadleigh supplies a short story, "Mistah Fahnah," in parts very close to facts. "A week in Wales" is a series of fresh travel sketches by Mrs. Julia C. R. Dorr. Mrs. Lillie B. Chase Wyman adds a new paper to her "Studies of Factory Life," this time giving several touching instances of hardship among the women. Two papers of much historical interest are Dr. A. P. Peabody's account of "Boston Mobs before the Revolution" (in which Crispus Attucks loses his claim to be counted a martyr in the cause of popular liberty,) and "The First Year of the Continental Congress," in which John Fiske describes with admirable brevity and distinctness the Lexington and Concord fight, the battle of Bunker Hill, and the character of Washington. H. C. Merwin furnishes a curiosly interesting paper on Daniel Drawbaugh, a claimant of the original invention of the telephone. Mrs. Olive Thorne Miller scribes the "Home Life of the Redstart." William Cranston Lawton gives the concluding paper on "The Prometheus of Æschylus." The number also contains careful reviews of Mr. Stedman's and Miss Hutchinson's "Library of American Literature" and Mrs. Custer's "Tenting on the Plains," two bright little essays in the Contributors' club, and several pages of brief descriptions of New Books. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

An unknown thief was shot dead in Lynn, Mass., on the morning of the 31st inst., while attempting with two companions to rob Price & Amerige's grocery store. Mr. Price shot him.

Mr. Durand, ex-speaker of the Connecticut legislature, and a long-time democrat, who voted for Mr. Cleveland in 1884, has declared himself for Harrison and Morton and the principles of protection to American industries and producers. Mr. Durand has written a letter to the republican town committee of Ansonia, concerning his secession from the free-trade democratic party. He is closely identified with the Osborne & Cheesman Co., manufacturers of metal and web goods, and assigns the free-trade tendencies of the Cleveland and Thurman party as his reason for his change of faith.

Fifty-six Portuguese women, from Fayal, Azores islands, on the Portuguese brig Neptune, for Boston, were landed at Halifax, N. S., and came across country by rail. Had the brig taken them to Boston they would not have been allowed to land, as they had previously been engaged to enter service in the United States.

A suit for $5000 has been begun by the Pennsylvania company against the Baltimore & Ohio railroad company and the bridge across Arthur Kill on the ground that the structure obstructs navigation.

Cleveland is rated worth less than $200,000. Harrison's worldly goods are valued at a sum even less than that. Belva Lockwood is not rich, nor is Candidate Fisk of the Prohibitionists, though he is probably worth more than any of the others. Candidate Curtis of the American party is reputed to be worth $2,000,000.

Goes right to the heart of

Dirt and Filth

Pearline makes everything as clean as possible, in less time, with less labor, with less wear and tear on yourself or the objects cleaned, and at less expense than anything else known. And this accounts for its wonderful growth and popularity. Used all over the United States. Every woman who does her own work will appreciate its wonderful aid by giving it one fair trial. Every woman who keeps a servant should supply that servant with PEARLINE—the result will be a better servant, better work and more of it, and a mistress better satisfied.

Beware Peddlers and some unscrupulous grocers are offering imitations which they claim to be Pearline, or "the same as Pearline." It's false—they are not, and besides are dangerous. PEARLINE is never peddled, but sold by all good grocers.

Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

Phosphates in Baking Powders.

Prof. H. C. White, State Chemist, of Georgia, gave this subject attention, and wrote: "I have been familiar for a number of years with the general character of Prof. Hosford's phosphatic preparations. Recent examinations made by me of his baking powder show exactly what is claimed for it. When mixed with water a double phosphate is formed and remains in the bread when baked. In ordinary cream of tartar baking powders the substance left in the bread after rising is rochelle salts—a double tartrate. The phosphates are useful substances in animal nutrition and growth, the phosphatic power is, therefore, preferable to the others, so far as healthfulness is concerned."

"Did n't know 't was Loaded"

May do for a stupid boy's excuse; but what can be said for the parent who sees his child languishing daily and fails to recognize the want of a tonic and blood-purifier? Formerly, a course of bitters, or sulphur and molasses, was the rule in well-regulated families; but now all intelligent households keep Ayer's Sarsaparilla, which is at once pleasant to the taste, and the most searching and effective blood medicine ever discovered.

Nathan S. Cleveland, 27 E. Canton st., Boston, writes: "My daughter, now 21 years old, was in perfect health until a year ago when she began to complain of fatigue, headache, debility, dizziness, indigestion, and loss of appetite. I concluded that all her complaints originated in impure blood, and induced her to take Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This medicine soon restored her blood-making organs to healthy action, and in due time reëstablished her former health. I find Ayer's Sarsaparilla a most valuable remedy for the lassitude and debility incident to spring time."

J. Castright, Brooklyn Power Co., Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "As a Spring Medicine, I find a splendid substitute for the old-time compounds in Ayer's Sarsaparilla, with a few doses of Ayer's Pills. After their use, I feel fresher and stronger to go through the summer."

OBITUARY.

The death is announced at San Diego, Cal., of Colonel George Marston, an old New Hampshire politician and soldier. He was born at Sandown in 1824. Under President Pierce he received an appointment as clerk in the United States treasury department at Washington, where he served during all of Pierce's and a portion of Buchanan's administrations. He then held for a term the position of doorkeeper of the house of representatives. During the war he served as paymaster in the army, with the rank of major; and after the war he was for several years chief accountant on the Portsmouth navy yard, and later was collector of internal revenue in Georgia and Texas. He went to San Diego, Cal., in 1886, and remained there till his death. He resided in this city for several years in early life, and was one of the pupils of the late Wm. C. Harris.

The superintendent of the fire alarm will strike the following numbered boxes during the regular monthly test to-day: 32, 35, 46, "No school signal," and 23.

LOST.

On Sagamore road, Thursday night, a light Spring Overcoat. The finder will be suitably rewarded on leaving it at Stearns', Goat island, Newcastle.

SEEMING DISSATISFACTION.

The Dover Democrat of Aug. 28th (and the following days of this week) contained the following, under the heading of "Democratic Meeting:"

There will be a meeting of the anti-Cleveland straight and true democrats of Strafford county at the American house in Dover, on Tuesday, Sept. 4th, 1888, at eleven o'clock in the forenoon, for consultation in regard to the best method to be pursued in the coming election. All those who believe in the sound fundamental principles of democracy, and that the present administration does not correctly represent and administer those principles, are cordially invited to attend and participate in the deliberations.

This call purported to be "Per order of two Strafford county members of the democratic state committee," and would seem to indicate that democratic dissatisfaction on the Cocheco has not been blown away by the tardy presidential bluster over the fishery question.

PERSONAL.

Prof. Charles A. Davis and wife, who have passed the summer with Mr. Davis' relatives in this city, left for Alma, Michigan, on Monday, Aug. 27th.

Mr. Oliver Pillsbury of Milwaukee, Wis., is visiting his sister, Mrs. A. J. Fitts of Maplewood avenue, this city.

Miss Minnie Paddock, who has for several weeks been visiting Miss Ella Brown, of State street, returned to her home in West Newton, Mass., on Friday last.

Mrs. George Butler, of Atkinson street, returned with her family from a tour in the White mountains, on Wednesday, the 29th ult.

Hon. Frank Jones, with a party of friends, arrived at Bar Harbor last Thursday evening.

Mrs. Thomas J. Coburn, formerly of the Rockingham house, this city, but for many years past a resident of Europe, died in Leipsic, Germany, Aug. 2d.

Mrs. D. M. Benjamin and son, who have been passing a number of weeks in this city, left for their home in Milwaukee, Wis., on Thursday last.

Mrs. W. E. Cate and family, of this city, are visiting Mrs. George M. Gray of Dover.

Misses May and Julia Worthen, of Lowell, Mass., are visiting at Mr. John Nutter's in this city for several weeks.

Mrs. H. H. Howes and Mrs. Reed and daughter, of Bath, Me., are visiting Mrs. C. N. Osgood of Salter street.

MARITIME NOTES.

The schooner Mary Willey towed down to the lower harbor Thursday evening, on her way to Bangor, via Portland.

The lighthouse supply steamer Myrtle brought a load of lumber to Newcastle on Wednesday of this week, for the construction of a new walk to the Fort Point light from the lightkeeper's house.

The steamer Undine, Capt. Duncan, carried a large number of excursionists to Newcastle on Thursday. The new boat is quite a favorite on the river. No more beautiful trip can be enjoyed than the passage between this city and Pocahontas point affords in these lovely days.

To-morrow will afford the last chance this year, for a Sunday trip to the Shoals by the steamer Oceanic; half-fare rates that day.

BASE BALL.

The exhibition game at the Maine state fair in Bangor on the forenoon of Aug. 30th, between the Lowells and Portsmouths of the New England league, was won by the following score:

Innings	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Portsmouths	0	1	1	0	0	0	0	1	1	— 4

Earned runs—Lowells, 0; Portsmouth, 3. Two base hits—Guinasso, Rudderham. Three base hit—Guinasso. Home runs—Daly, 2. Passed balls, Guinasso, Kittredge. Wild pitches—McDermott, 2. Stolen bases—Shinnick, Leighton. First base on balls—Toffling, Shinnick. Hit by pitched ball—Leighton, Murray. Batteries—McDermott and Kittredge, Sullivan and Guinasso. Hits—Lowell, 7; Portsmouth, 5. Errors—Lowell, 4; Portsmouth, 4. Umpire—Morton L. Harrison.

This afternoon the Worcester and Portsmouth clubs play a championship game on the South street grounds; game called at 3:30 o'clock.

Pears' is the purest and best Soap made.

A coaching party from Manchester-by-the-sea, Mass., arrived at the Rockingham house shortly before six o'clock Friday evening.

The Portsmouth Directory for 1888, published by W. A. Greenough & Co. of Boston, has been issued, and is now for sale by Mercer Goodrich; price $1.50. It contains a large amount of valuable information not given in any previous work of the kind.

Frank W. Hackett, Esq., of this city, will address the republicans of Portsmouth and vicinity at the headquarters of the Republican club on Congress street next Monday evening at 8:15 o'clock, on the issues of the presidential campaign. A cordial invitation is extended to all, to attend.

Israel Marden, Esq., an old and well tried democrat, and formerly city marshal of Portsmouth, to which position he was elected by the city councils upon the advent of the democratic party to power, expresses himself in favor of the election of Harrison. Mr. Marden says that another Cleveland administration would enable England to place the United States in the same condition as Ireland.

The collector of internal revenue for conclusion that is not advisable to openly defy the law—not even to shield liquor dealers in prohibition states—if we may judge from the following from the Bangor Whig and Courier: "State Constable Partridge has been to Portsmouth, N. H., where he saw the books of the collector of internal revenue and learned who in Belfast held a United States license. Friday Mr. Partridge swore out twelve warrants against Belfast liquor sellers, and served them himself."

The Newcastle delegates to the republican conventions are as follows: State, Jessie O. White, John W. Amazeen; Congressional, John E. Yeaton, B. F. Curtis; Councillor, Fred Bell, Herman White; Senatorial, Albert H. White, William P. Pool; County, John E. Yeaton, Charles A. Card.

There was a grand illumination at York beach—or at what was York beach before the railroad shifted the name a mile or two to the eastward, and called York beach by its merely local name of Long beach—on the evening of Aug. 28th. The Sea View, Garrison and Beach houses, hotels Bartlett and Decatur, Sea Cottage, with the boarding houses, stores, and most of the private cottages, were brilliant with Japanese lanterns, transparences and flags, and colored fires in profusion added to the brilliancy of the scene.

HOOD'S
COMPOUND EXTRACT
SARSAPARILLA
TRADE MARK

The importance of purifying the blood cannot be overestimated, for without pure blood you cannot enjoy good health.

At this season nearly every one needs a good medicine to purify, vitalize, and enrich the blood, and we ask you to try Hood's Peculiar Sarsaparilla. It strengthens and builds up the system, creates an appetite, and tones the digestion, while it eradicates disease. The peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation of the vegetable remedies used give to Hood's Sarsaparilla peculiar curative powers. No other medicine has such a record of wonderful cures. If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other instead. It is a Peculiar Medicine, and is worthy your confidence.

JAS. T. KUBBE, D. J. FLANDERS.

RAILROAD ITEMS.

It is stated in political circles that the Boston & Maine railroad managers have abandoned all hopes of securing any legislation next summer favorable to their interests. Several of their most efficient workers have been given to understand that they were at liberty to tender their services to the Concord road, and of these quite a number are reported to have enrolled themselves under the Pearson banner.

The Boston and Maine railroad will run a special train from this city to South Berwick, via Dover, on Thursday, the 6th inst., when Hon. James G Blaine will speak there, provided enough passengers are guaranteed to warrant it. One fare will pay for the round trip, and a numerous party should attend from this city to listen to the greatest of American statesmen.

The hotel Pocahontas, at Gerrish's island, had about seventy guests on Thursday last. Mr. Mitchell made no mistake in his enlargement of the hotel, which gives him a more roomy house and a far better dining room than when he first leased this attractive seaside resort.

An excursion of over 600 people from Concord and Manchester, with Gordon's full band, visited York beach Aug. 28th, and made things pleasantly lively all through the day.

CITY OF PORTSMOUTH.

CITY MARSHAL'S OFFICE, July 14, 1888.

FREQUENT complaints having been brought to my notice that men and boys are in the habit of bathing in the waters exposed to the streets, highways and other public places, especially in Sagamore Creek near Lafayette road and Sagamore road, in violation of the city ordinances; notice is hereby given that all persons found offending in this particular will be prosecuted to the extent of the law.

JEFF. C. ROWE, City Marshal.

LICENSE YOUR DOGS.

SECTION 1. No dog shall be permitted to go at large or loose in this city until the owner or keeper of such dog, or the keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall have procured from the city marshal a license for such dog.

SECTION 5. It shall be the duty of the city marshal to cause all dogs to be killed which shall be found at large or loose within the city without a collar marked as required by law, and to cause all dogs so killed to be buried, and any person may lawfully kill any dog found within the limits of this city going at large contrary to the provisions of this chapter.

SECTION 6. In case any dog shall be found loose or going at large contrary to any of the foregoing provisions, or in case any dog not licensed shall be provided with a collar marked as required in this ordinance, the owner or keeper thereof or the head of the family or keeper of the house or place where such dog is kept or harbored, shall upon conviction thereof be fined five dollars.

The above extracts from the city ordinances of the city will be strictly enforced.

PHILOSOPHY OF MARRIAGE

We passed the night on the Wittenburg, sleeping on the moss, between two decayed logs, with balsam boughs thrust into the ground and meeting and forming a canopy over us. In coming off the mountain in the morning we ran upon a huge porcupine, and I learned for the first time that the tail of a porcupine goes with a spring like a trap. It seems to be a set lock, and you no sooner touch with the weight of a hair one of the quills than the tail leaps up in the most surprising manner, and the laugh is not on your side. The beast cantered along the path in my front, and I threw myself upon him, shielded by my roll of blankets. He submitted quietly to the indignity, and lay very still under my blankets, with his broad tail pressed close to the ground. This I proceeded to investigate, but had not fairly made a beginning when it went off like a trap, and my hand and wrist were full of quills. This caused me to let up on the creature, when it lumbered away till it tumbled down a precipice.

The quills were quickly removed from my hand, and we gave chase. When we came up to him he had wedged himself in between the rocks so that he presented only a back bristling with quills, with the tail lying in ambush below. He had chosen his position well, and seemed to defy us. After amusing ourselves by repeatedly springing his tail and receiving the quills in a rotten stick, we made a slip noose out of a spruce root, and after much maneuvering got it over his head and led him forth. In what a peevish, injured tone the creature did complain of our unfair tactics! He protested and protested, and whimpered and scolded like some infirm old man tormented by boys. His game after we led him forth was to keep himself as much as possible in the shape of a ball, but with two sticks and the cord we finally threw him over on his back and exposed his quilless and vulnerable under side, when he fairly surrendered and seemed to say, "Now you may do with me as you like." His great chisel like teeth, which are quite as formidable as those of the woodchuck, he does not appear to use at all in his defense, but relies entirely upon his quills, and when those fail him he is done for.—John Burroughs in The Century.

How Thread Is Numbered.

Everybody knows the sizes of thread. Every seamstress knows whether she wants No. 30 or 60 or 120, and knows, when she hears the number, about what is the size of the strand referred to; but how the numbers happen to be what they are, and just what they mean, not one person in a thousand knows. And yet it is a simple matter to explain, was the information accorded to a reporter by an employe of one of the largest spool cotton manufactories in the United States. When 840 yards of yarn weigh 7,000 grains, a pound of cotton, the yarn is No. 1. If 1,680 yards weigh a pound, it will be No. 2 yarn. For No. 50 yarn it would take 50 multiplied by 840 yards to weigh a pound. This is the whole of the yarn measurement. The early manufactured thread was three cord, and the thread took its number from the number of the yarn from which it was made. No. 60 yarn made No. 60 thread, though in point of fact the actual caliber of No. 60 thread would equal No. 20 yarn, being three 60 strands.

When the sewing machine came into the market as the great consumer, unreasoning in its work and inexorable in its demands for mechanical accuracy, six cord cotton had to be made as a smoother product. As thread numbers were already established, they were not altered for the new article, and No. 60 six cord and No. 60 three cord are identical in size as well as in number. To affect this the six cord has to be made of yarn twice as firm as that demanded by the three cord. The No. 60 six cord would be six strands of No. 120 yarn. Three cord spool cotton is the same number as the yarn it is made of. Six cord spool cotton is made of yarn that is double its number. As simple a thing as thread is there are 3,000 different kinds made.—New York Mail.

Coal in Ancient Times.

Pliny, in his natural history, describes anthracites found in Africa as a black schistose useful in medicine, but no mention is made of its inflammability. Jet was called black amber—succinum nigrum. When Roman traders told of the burning of amber for fuel by the natives on the shores of the Black sea, it is supposed the material was a variety of lignite, and not amber as reported.

Coal was probably used in China as fuel long before it was known in the western world. About the middle of the Thirteenth century a Venetian traveler and writer, Marcus Paulus Venetus, gives the following account:

"Through the whole province of Cathay, black stones are dug out of the mountains, which being put in the fire burn like wood, and when kindled continue to burn for a long time. * * * If lighted in the evening they keep alive the whole night."

The ancient Britons made use of coal to a certain extent. Stone hammers have been found in coal croppings, and the name—formerly "cole"—is of British origin. After the conquest the Romans began to use it, for coal cinders have been found in Roman walls, and Roman coins in beds of cinders. But coal was not brought into general use until the reign of Charles I, in 1625.—Henry G. Hanks in Overland Monthly.

No Scarcity of Salt.

It is said on the best authority that 30,000,000 bushels of salt are consumed in this country. The average American gets away with fifty pounds of salt every year. The quantity taken at a time is so small that a person hardly notices it, but a year's consumption of salt by one person is almost a bushel. An Englishman gets along on twenty-two pounds a year, and in France an ordinary man swallows eighteen pounds between New Year's day and December. If calculations amount anything there is no danger of a scarcity of the saline article, for a famous statistician has declared that if all the salt in the ocean were piled together, it would make a bulk equal to 80,000,000 cubic miles. He never saw all this salt, but he says it is there, and all that need be done is to get it safely ashore.—Current Literature.

Forty-one years ago a young man of Rhode Island asked a young woman of the same state to marry him. She said "No." The young man went about his business, but he kept his eye on the woman, and from time to time renewed his suit, she refusing offer after offer. He persevered, and his constancy was rewarded a short time ago, when she accepted and married him. He was then seventy-two years old and she sixty-one.

Grover Cleveland has done more to advance the cause of free trade than any Prime Minister of England has done.—London Spectator

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

"The World Moves."

Maintained Galileo, when his tormentors racked him for advocating the true system of Copernicus. Certain follies hold out, however, against the illumination of discovery and experience. There are hosts of people who, because they have adopted certain principles, continue to swallow them to their dying day in defiance of the laws of common sense. Mercury, drastic purgatives, super-potent narcotics and sedatives, though they have given ground before the irresistible progress of Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a national, painless remedy for disorders of the liver, the stomach and the bowels, still continue to make ambulating apothecary shops of many stomachs. The symptoms of liver trouble are easily remediable without any abdominal disturbance with this beneficent alterative. So also are constipation, sick headache, heartburn and an inability to digest satisfactorily. It cures fever and ague, rheumatism and kidney trouble.

It is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any free trader could employ now.—London Times.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

Aunt Rachael's Bitters.

The undeniable fact that these Bitters are composed in the main of Speer's Grape Juice, with Peruvian bark, snake root, etc., analyzed and recommended to invalids and the medical profession, by the best chemists in the United States, cannot fail in inspiring confidence in the use of these Malarial Bitters.

The American election is infinitely more important to Englishmen than their own internal politics just at this juncture. * * * The main question at issue is English free trade against the continental system of protection.—London Times.

Found Dead.

Last evening a person giving the name of G. R. Thompson registered at Hunt's Hotel, and desired to be called in season to take the 12 P. M. train for Chicago. Being unable to awaken him, the room was entered by means of the ventilator over the dood, when the gentleman was found to be dead. He was advertising agent for Sulpher Bitters, which has an extensive sale. The coroner returned a verdict of death from heart disease. His body will be sent east immediately.—Cin. Commercial.

Scrofula, in the blood, corrupts and contaminates every tissue and fibre in the whole body; but whether appearing in the form of swellings, erysipelas, or running sores, the malignant poisons of this disease are completely eradicated by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

Hay Fever.

I have suffered greatly from periodical returns of hay fever. Covert & Cheever, Druggists, suggested Ely's Cream Balm. I used it during a severe attack. I can cheerfully testify as to the immediate and continued relief obtained by its use. I heartily recommend it to those suffering from this or kindred complaints.—(Rev.) H. A. Smith, Clinton, Wis.

Mr. Cleveland has taken his stand on free trade, * * and on that broad question Mr. Cleveland's candidature naturally and necessarily carries English sympathy.—London Globe.

Why Adamson's Balsam is so Perfect a Medicine. Because it is a scientifically ordered compound, of great potency, the product of years of study, observation and experience in the treatment of throat and lung diseases.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

Congress have repeatedly, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

The president has subscribed $10,000 to the fund to re-elect Grover Cleveland as president. He subscribed $50 for the Twenty bags containing $50,000 were being conveyed by two men in a cab from one of the London banks recently, when the bottom of the cab gave way and all the bags fell into the street. It was a minute or so before the men could attract the attention of the driver and get him to stop, and the bags were left some distance behind. They were all there, however, when the men hurried back. There were few persons on the street at the time.

When we consider the patronage of this great office, [the presidency,] the allurements of power, the temptation to retain place once gained, and more than all, the availability a party finds in an incumbent whom a horde of office holders, with a zeal born of benefits and fostered by the hope of favors yet to come, stand ready to aid with money and trained political service, we recognize in the eligibility of the president for re-election a most serious danger to that calm, deliberate and intelligent political action, which must characterize a government by the people.—Grover Cleveland.

ACTORS AND ACTRESSES.

Working for Starvation Wages—Seamy Side of Stage Life.

Under the supervision of Albert Ellery Berg, the dramatic critic, a series of interesting investigations have been made this summer of the condition of the members of the theatrical profession. The results of the work are extremely disappointing to all lovers of the stage. It appears that during at least three months of each year three-fourths of the profession are either idle or gaining a bare subsistence in other industries, and that the other fourth find employment in such huge spectacles as "Nero" in Staten Island and "The Fall of Babylon" in Cincinnati; in "summer snaps" and in the numerous low concert halls, dime museums and music gardens of the larger cities.

All of these classes were carefully investigated by Mr. Berg and his colleagues. Nearly every case presented the most pitiable features. A majority of the profession lived with, or rather upon, parents, relatives and friends. But few were content with the enforced idleness, and tried to make a livelihood during the dull season. Among the vocations temporarily pursued were waiting in restaurants and saloons, bartending, horse car driving and conducting, "running privileges" at excursions, picnic groves, baseball grounds and country fairs, button covering, making ladies' underwear, "sweat tailoring," barber business, news stands, canvassing, embroidering, laundering, dressmaking and housekeeping. Hardly one of these paid more than enough to keep body and soul together. In one case three actresses rooming together in a single large apartment supported themselves by making petticoats and chemises. Working twelve hours a day, the three combined made only $11 a week. Their room rent was $5 per week, and the remainder, $6, had to supply food, needles, thread, car fares and medicine.

A number who support themselves by "sweat tailoring" during the summer made a slightly better report, earning on an average $5 a week. Waiter girls in both restaurants and saloons do better, receiving from $8 to $5 as wages and at least as much more in the form of tips.

Those who obtain employment in dramatic work make a very bad showing. Of those employed in "Nero" at Staten Island and "The Fall of Babylon" in Cincinnati, four-fifths have had more or less experience upon the boards. A few have held prominent places; these include women who have been unsuccessful stars, leading ladies in very hard luck, and young actresses who have neglected or failed to save any money during the season, and who are too proud to beg or borrow and too moral to use other means to obtain an income. The great majority are chorus girls, members of the ballet and women of one year's dramatic experience. The general salary paid is $2 a week. The average, $3.75.

Of those who go out on what they term a "summer snap," but few do well enough to pay for board and transportation, much less have a clear profit. To this class "walking railroad ties" is no figure of speech, but a horrible reality. Of thirty companies which left New York in July twenty-eight, numbering over 400 souls, were stranded on the road penniless, and begged or borrowed their fare home or were sent there by the generosity of kindly strangers. The few concerns that succeed (if success can be applied to their efforts) are those which play "commonwealth" (i. e., are co-operative in character) and make some town their headquarters where country board is cheap and where no legitimate companies ever come. By playing a night in this village and that, by "assisting" churches, lodges and other societies in benefits, they manage to pay their board and washing bills and get home in time for the regular season.

Perhaps the hardest lot of all is of those who play during the summer in concert halls and dime museums. Hardly a watering place exists upon the continent but what has its "free and easies," "open air theatres" and free variety shows. Here the romance and picturesqueness of stage life disappear and all the brutalizing features are multiplied and magnified. The performer is an adjunct to the bar; his or her art a spiritual free lunch to the drinker. In nearly every case they are expected to drink with patrons, to be introduced to any one who knows the proprietor or bartender, and to listen in silence to the reeking vulgarity which alcohol pours from human lips. The pay in these places ranges from $5 to $12 per week, and the performance runs from noon to midnight. The place being "open air," the strain upon the voice is far greater than in closed buildings, and finally produces that huskiness or painful falsetto so familiar to patrons of the circus. If the dime museums are better than the open air concerns so far as the behavior of the audience and the work of the vocal organs are concerned, they are more destructive to the health of the performer. The performances are usually given each hour from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m. The halls are close, poorly ventilated, hot and dirty; the dressing rooms vile, and the conveniences for the actors nil. The wages paid are the same as those in the open air temples of amusement.

Mr. Berg shows that the mutual helpfulness and generosity which so characterize the dramatic profession is an organic necessity, and that without it, under the circumstances above detailed, hundreds, if not more, of actors and actresses would be starved every summer or forced into the almshouse. Even as it is, their condition during never less than one quarter of the year verges upon pauperism. Mr. Berg's investigations will destroy the last vestige of the once popular belief that an actor's life is a happy one.—New York Cor. Globe-Democrat.

Antiquity of Artesian Wells.

The artesian well was known to the agriculturist ages ago. The Chinese, the Hindoos and the Egyptians must have learned to develop "blind springs," and from this beginning went on experimenting with rude dug and piped wells, which in favorable situations brought the water to the surface. In the heart of the Sahara, in Asia Minor and in Persia, travelers find unmistakable evidence that flowing wells were obtained long before the province of Artois gave its name "Artesian" to those artificial well springs.—Charles H. Shinn in Overland Monthly.

ORIGIN OF ASTRONOMY.

Older Than the First Records of any Nation—Interesting Data.

When did astronomy have its beginnings on the earth? There have been many learned attempts to answer this question. They all have led to the conclusion that long before the historic period there was a large common stock of knowledge; so large, in fact, that one distinguished writer finds it simplest to ascribe the origin of astronomy to the teaching of an extinct race: "Ce peuple ancien qui nous a tout appris—excepte son nom et son existence," his commentator adds.

Astronomy is older than the first records of any nation. In order that the records might exist, it was first necessary to divide the years and times by astronomical observations. On the other hand, I believe the travelers of today have found no tribe so degraded as to be without some knowledge of the sort.

It is extremely doubtful if animals notice special celestial bodies. Birds seem to be inspired by the approach of day and not by the actual presence of the sun. It is a question whether dogs "bay the moon" or only the moon's light. A friend maintains that her King Charles spaniel watched the progress of an occultation of Venus by the crescent moon with the most vivid interest. This is the only case which I have been able to collect in which the attention of animals has been even supposed to have been held by a celestial phenomenon. The actions of the most ignorant savages during a total solar eclipse, compared with those of animals, throw much light on the question of whereabouts in the scale of intelligence the attention begins to be directed to extra terrestrial occurrences. The savages are appalled by the disappearance of the sun itself, while animals seem to be concerned with the advent of darkness simply.

I am told that the Eskimos of Smith's sound have names for a score or more of stars, and that their long sledge journeys are safely made by the guidance of these stars alone. I have myself seen a Polynesian islander embark on a canoe, without compass or chart, bound for an island three days' sail distant. His course would need to be so accurately laid that at the end of his three days he should find himself within four or five miles of his haven; if he passed the low coral island at a greater distance, it could not be seen from his frail craft. There can be little doubt but that he used the sun by day and the stars by night to hold his course direct.

There must have been centuries during which such knowledge was passed from man to man by word of mouth, woven into tales and learned as a part of the lore of the sailor, the hunter or the tiller of the soil. No one can say how early this knowledge of the sky was put into the formal shape of maps, globes or catalogues. Eudoxus is said to have constructed a celestial globe B. C. 366. Globes would naturally precede maps, and maps mere lists or catalogues.

The prototype of all sidereal catalogues is the Almagest of Ptolemy (A. D. 150), which includes not only the observations of Ptolemy, but those of the great Hipparchus (B. C. 127). It contains the description of 1,022 stars, their positions, and their brightness. Here we meet for the first time the name magnitude of a star. Ptolemy divides all the stars into magnitudes—degrees of brightness. Sirius, Capella, are of the first magnitude; the faintest stars visible to the eye are of the sixth. But Ptolemy has gone further, and divides each magnitude into three parts. The moderns divide each class into ten parts, that is, decimally.—Edward S. Holden in The Century.

Gotham's Chinese Restaurant.

Unlike Americans, the Chinese do not generally pay by the dishes ordered, but by the tables or spreads, called by the Chinese "Gzuh." A first class spread includes about forty courses, and it takes two days to finish the feast. It costs $50. A second class spread, with twenty-eight courses, costs $40. A third class spread, with eighteen courses, costs $35. The cheapest spread contains eight courses for $8. This is the lowest price for which a man can order a formal dinner in a first class Chinese restaurant. But then the spread is made for any number of people within twelve.

If a man simply wants to eat a short meal for himself and a friend or two, he can get ready made dishes of fish, chicken, duck, pigs' feet, rice, tea, etc., cheaper than in any other restaurant, besides many dishes peculiar to Chinatown. The prices run from five to twenty-five cents. The foods are all chopped in small pieces, rendering knives and forks unnecessary. The Chinese table implements are chopsticks, of ebony or ivory, a tiny little tea cup, and a porcelain spoon.—Wong Chin Foo in The Cosmopolitan.

Manufacture of India Paper.

India paper, which the Chinese call lehi, is made from hemp, mulberry bark, cotton, bamboo, rice straw, barley straw, and from the interior membrane of silk worm cocoons. Sometimes the whole of the stalks of a year's growth are used. The pulp is mixed, after it has been prepared, with a given proportion of vegetable gum called hotong in China. The paper is molded in molds made of fine bamboo filament. Those sheets, sixty feet in length, which the Chinese are said to make, are supposed to be fabricated by artfully joining several small sheets at the moment of laying the paper. India paper, being too thin to bear handling or any strain, is mounted on vellum, which serves as a lining to it, and the white borders of which set it off as a frame would do. The sheets are kept in a dry place, far away from the fire, and may be preserved for years.—San Francisco Chronicle.

Food for a Locomotive.

It will, perhaps, interest some readers to know how much fuel a locomotive burns. This, of course, depends upon the quality of fuel, work done, speed and character of the road. On freight trains an average consumption may be taken at about one to one and one-half pounds of coal consumed per car per mile. With passenger trains, the cars of which are heavier and the speed higher, the coal consumption is greater. A freight train of thirty cars, at a speed of thirty miles per hour, would therefore burn from 900 to 1,500 pounds of coal an hour.—Scribner's.

Editorial Amenities.

The summer's heat at Concord has not been conducive to editorial fraternizing. Mr. Metcalf, who edits the organ of the democracy at the capital, has been stirring up Mr. Lyford, who does the political pyrotechnics of the Monitor, upon the question of how much Lyford has been paid as bank commissioner. The correspondent of the Boston Record says:

Editor Metcalf has never forgiven Mr. Lyford for his change of politics, and he never fails to give him a dig in the People when he can. Latterly, Mr. Metcalf's sarcastic pen has been unusually quiet. People in Concord lay this largely to the effect of the awful roasting which Col. True L. Norris gave the Concord editor in the Portsmouth Times not long since. The Portsmouth Times is owned by Charles Sinclair, Frank Jones' son-in-law, and Norris is editor. As for the People and Patriot of Concord, it is the old democratic stand-by among the newspapers of the state.

The Democratic Press Association publishes the People. The spectacle of one New Hampshire democratic editor jumping upon and grinding his heels into another New Hampshire democratic editor brought a joy too deep for words among republicans. The Times' attack upon Editor Metcalf was a savage one. It told of all the places where Editor Metcalf has tried his hand at newspaper work, and made him out a modern Wandering Jew, upon whom was ever potent the awful curse of "Move on, Metcalf, move on." It seems safe to say that the title of the "Wandering Jew of New Hampshire Politics," will be Editor Metcalf's peculiar property from this time on.

Mr. Metcalf, if our memory serves us faithfully, once attempted to discipline our genial neighbor of Foster's Democrat, whom he accused of getting over the party traces and pulling away from the team. If there is any especial trait in Bro. Foster's character which is admired alike by political friend and foe, it is his stalwart independence, which never knuckles to party dictation. It leads but never follows. Mr. Metcalf perhaps ignores the younger and more effervescent blood in the fraternity. But this element is always being heard from, and the attempt to sit upon it is likely to prove a dangerous experiment.

Don't Kill the Old Hens.

When hens are shedding feathers they often stop laying and grow fat. Most people consider fat a sign of health. The fattening of moulting hens however, as with some people produces debility rather than health. Many of the worst cases of roupe are contracted, while the hens are moulting.

The food of moulting hens, if largely vegetable is fatforming, and not required for growing feathers. Therefore corn-fed hens get very fat. They need more nitrogen and phosphate elements in their food when moulting, which if not supplied they stop laying, because the growing feathers have used all, and left no nitrogenous matter to form eggs. At this season, killing old hens and relying on young pullets is a great mistake; where people have a few hens and late pullets. Because, if properly fed the hens will have their new plumage and lay well all winter; while the pullets unless specially treated may not commence laying until spring, when high prices for eggs have fallen one-half. Again, an old hen's egg will hatch a more vigorous chicken than a pullett's egg.

John R. Jones, Suffield, Conn, a breeder of prize winning mottled Javas, says: "I find Sheridan's Condition Powder fed once daily in the food, very valuable for moulting hens. I have used it for two years for exhibition birds. It assists in growing new feathers, makes the combs a bright red, and gives a rich gloss to the plumage. It will also make hens lay and the eggs hatch well. I find when other egg-foods are used in quantities to force egg production the eggs do not hatch."

The above is the experience of many people in using Sheridan's Powder. If fed to young pullets now as directed, they will begin to lay before six months old. Commence at once using Sheridan's Powder. It helps old hens through moulting, and gets the pullets in laying winter. Therefore be ready to get all you can.

I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House St., Boston, Mass., sole makers of Sheridan's Condition Powder to make hens lay, will send to any address for one two-cent stamp, testimontals with full information how to make a few hens pay well; also how to obtain Sheridan's powder.

RAILROAD ITEMS.

The three o'clock train from the eastward for Boston, Saturday afternoon, had on fourteen passenger cars, all of which were packed with people, the aisles being jammed with persons who were unable to get seats.

"Citizens excursion" to the White mountains to-morrow; low rates; see advertisement.

At Portland, Me., Aug. 31st., Judge Walton in the superior judicial court issued a final decree discharging Receiver S. J. Anderson of the Portland & Ogdensburg railroad. George E. B. Jackson was appointed to examine the accounts of the receiver, and report upon the confirmation of that report. A like discharge will now be obtained in the courts of New Hampshire, and then the Maine Central railroad will assume the management of the Portland & Ogdensburg railway.

Fresh halibut now comes from Seattle, Washington territory, to Boston, over the Northern Pacific railroad, in refrigerator cars.

BASE BALL.

The Boston Sunday Globe of the 2d inst. says: "The New England league will wind up the season next Saturday. Lowell will surely take the championship. Worcester will most likely come in second, Manchester third and Portsmouth fourth. It has been hard work to keep the league together, and nothing in the world did it but the desire of the managers to reserve their players, that they might get a market for their men next spring."

The game of ball between the Electric club of this city and the South Berwick club, at Great Works last Thursday, was very interesting, and was won by the Electrics, who have played fourteen games this season, and won them all. The score was as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Electrics	1	0	2	1	0	0	1	2	0	—7
South Berwicks	0	0	2	0	0	0	2	0	0	—4

Struck out, by Lynes 12, by Rowell 13. Time of game, 1 hour 35 minutes. Umpire, W. Dow.

The Electrics reply to the Strawberry blanks, that "boys should be seen and not heard."

MARITIME NOTES.

The schooner Agnes E. Downs, of this port, took sixty barrels of mackerel off Boon Island on the 30th ult., and salted them. The schooner Albert Woodbury, of this port, has completed repairs at Gloucester, after her battering by the great storm, and sailed last Thursday, mackereling.

The ship Granite State, of this port, Ross master, now at Hong Kong, has been chartered to load at Manila for a port north of Hatteras.

The steamer Undine made her last Sunday trip for the year, between this city, Newcastle, Kittery Point and the Pocahontas hotel landing, on the 2d inst. On the same date the steamer Oceanic made her last Sunday trips between this city and the Isles of Shoals.

A bill has passed Congress ordering a survey of the Cocheco river from the wharves in Dover to the junction with the Salmon Falls river, to see what the cost would be to deepen and widen it to

The excursion steamer Minnehaha, from the Merrimac with a party of eighty-four passengers, arrived at this port Sunday afternoon, and started back after a stay of several hours. They reported thick weather and a smooth sea outside.

Gen. Butler, in his Boston speech, placed the blame for the president's blunders about the tariff, not upon Cleveland, but upon the people who "by a hurrah lifted into the great office of president a man who had no training for the place."

Congressman Gallinger appears to have properly estimated Public Printer Benedict as one of the biggest official frauds the Cleveland administration has fastened upon the country. The doctor seems to have lost sight of Garland and Pension Commissioner Black.

Canton Senter, Patriarchs Militant, I. O. O. F., of this city, is making preparations to entertain Grand Canton Wilder of Concord, Grand Canton Ridgely of Manchester, Canton A of Nashua, and Canton Gen. Stark of Suncook on Thursday, Sept. 13th. The exercises of the day will consist mainly of a short parade about the city; steamboat ride down the harbor and outside of Whale's-back, and back to Fort Constitution, where a clambake will be served; games of various kinds, etc. Grand Canton Unity of Salem, Mass., is expected to stop over in Portsmouth on that day on the way home from a pilgrimage to Portland, Bangor, Lewiston and Bath, Me., to join in the festivities.

A gentleman, a life-long democrat of Kittery, says that the democrats of that town instead of throwing 300 or 400 votes at the approaching election, in his opinion will not cast more than 100 votes, if they even reach that number.

The light of an apparently large fire in the direction of South Berwick was visible in this city at 2:30 o'clock this morning.

Dr. Nathan B. Chase, for twenty-five years past a prominent physician of Holyoke, Mass., died Aug. 28th, aged seventy-five years. He was a cousin of the late Chief Justice Salmon P. Chase, and was born on the old Chase homestead at Cornish, this state; he practised medicine for a number of years in Newmarket, and during the war served as surgeon of a New York regiment. He leaves a wife and four grown children.

Dr. Charles T. Trafton died in South Berwick on Saturday, Aug. 25th, at the age of sixty-six years. He graduated at Waterville, Me., in 1846, and married the only daughter of the late Dea. Palmer Walker of Kennebunk; he succeeded his father, who was a distinguished physician in South Berwick, was a successful practitioner, and was highly esteemed by his fellow townsmen.

It is Absurd

For people to expect a cure for Indigestion, unless they refrain from eating what is unwholesome; but if anything will sharpen the appetite and give tone to the digestive organs, it is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Thousands all over the land testify to the merits of this medicine.

Mrs. Sarah Burroughs, of 248 Eighth street, South Boston, writes: "My husband has taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for Dyspepsia and torpid liver, and has been greatly benefited."

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla, is just the time to test the wonderful, labor-saving, and economical qualities of Pyle's Pearline.

Because then the wash is largest, the work most oppressive, and the articles to be washed most delicate. PEARLINE is as harmless as pure castile soap. It does away with most of the rubbing—hence it does away with those portions of the washing which ruin both your health and your clothes, and relieves this hardest of women's work of most of its drudgery. PEARLINE is the latest improvement in the way of soap, and, until something better is discovered, it behooves every woman who has to do with washing or cleaning, to supply herself or her servants with this wonderful cleanser, which, although yet in its infancy, is used by millions of families.

Sold everywhere. Manufactured only by JAMES PYLE, New York.

THE MAJOR HAS A SET-BACK.

The caucuses of the democratic party were held in wards one, two and four of this city, (comprising the 24th senatorial district of New Hampshire,) on Friday evening of last week. The caucuses were devoid of interest, save as to the choice of delegates to the senatorial convention. There was a lively canvass in regard to these delegates.

In wards one and two the choice made was in opposition to the nomination of Major Urch for senator, and in favor of Mayor Hodgdon or some other man. The major of course carried his own ward—ward four—beating that representative democrat, Capt. Marcy, (who flies the bandanna of Thurman but ignores Cleveland,) by a majority of one or two votes.

The question of who is to be senator from this district will be decided this week. The only orders issued from the commandant's office last week in regard to the matter were that it was better to see to the delegates before than after the caucuses, and that the delegations were not to be favorable to the nomination of the South End boss.

Whether we must now regard the major as a squeezed lemon, or whether, like a compressed rubber ball, he will soon rebound to his former position, we can judge better when the next democratic mayoralty caucus shall have been held.

We understand that the Major undertook to openly rebuke Capt. Marcy in the ward four caucus, alleging that the captain had induced the mayor to leave Urch's name off the list of the committee upon streets. This was not a good card for the Major. A politician who undertakes to manage the local democratic party should know better. The honest captain subscribes to the doctrines and the campaign fund of the party, but he never interferes in matters of patronage or the emoluments of office. Others see to that.

We confess as to being somewhat mixed up as to who is running the democratic party of this city just at present. The foregoing in regard to the democratic caucuses was written under the impression that the fight was between Major Urch and the democratic dictator of this section; and now we are told that the major was the dictator's candidate, and that his defeat was the result of a wholesale "kick" against the "one man power." It is none of our funeral, anyway; it is "a very pretty quarrel as it stands; we should only spoil it by trying to explain it."

In ward two, of ninety-five votes thrown, ninety-three were against the delegates favorable to the major; and not only this, but a resolution was passed instructing the delegates to vote and work in the convention against the major's nomination, specifying him by name.

In ward one nobody was allowed the privilege of voting by ballot, but a committee of five was appointed to bring in a list of names to be voted for by acclamation, which resulted in the choice of the following: State, Dennis J. Carroll, Moses H. Goodrich, Ira C. Seymour, Isaac Furber, James A. Corey, Daniel Littlefield; congressional, Albion Littlefield, Abram Kay, William Morrissey, Henry R. Stoddard, Theodore G. Perkins, Daniel Mason; councillor, Samuel Spinney, Samuel P. Treadwell, Fred F. Moses, Edward Watkins, Samuel R. Gardner, Thomas Morrissey; senatorial, Nathan W. Lear, Daniel Sullivan, Fred J. Haddock, Benjamin F. Canney, Cornelius O'Keefe, James McCarthy; county, William Conn, John S. Whidden, James Quinn, Daniel Casey, Samuel Maddock, Patrick Lindley.

WHAT BECAME OF IT!

Messrs. Editors: Very much to his regret and surprise, the undersigned was made, about a week since, the recipient by the mayor of this city of the following information, viz.: "That he (the mayor) had not been able to find the certificate of the 3000 shares of Portsmouth & Dover railroad stock belonging to the city." The city holds, I believe, some 300 shares above the 3000 named, but the sentence quoted is verbatim. Now, why did the mayor make this statement to one entirely outside of public affairs, one with whom he was but ed, unless it was his desire and belief that it would be made public?

However that may be, the writer well knows that in a matter of this importance, which concerns every citizen, he is bound by every obligation to make it public, or become accessory to a concealment. To be sure there was no mistake, the writer two days ago, and again one hour previous to this writing (Saturday afternoon) enquired of the mayor if the missing certificate had been found, and in both cases received the answer, "Not Yet." The citizens of course will make their own comments.

MARK H. WENTWORTH.

TAKE CARE OF HIM.

"Black Jack" Russell, the demented fisherman who has already been several times referred to in this paper, on Sunday morning last had all his household goods—bedding, chairs, tables, kitchen utensils, etc.,—in the street in front of his residence on Hancock street, and told passers-by that he was going to move that forenoon "into the place on State street where Henry F. Wendell used to keep an auction store." The man is evidently as crazy as a coot, and should be taken care of before he kills himself or somebody else, kindles a big fire, or does some other damage for which he could not be held responsible. He has no relatives here to look after him, but there should be power somewhere to do it, and it should be done immediately.

Y. W. C. T. U.

The annual meeting of the Young Woman's Christian Temperance Union will be held in their hall on Market street, Thursday evening, Sept. 6th. A full attendance is desired, as officers for the ensuing year are to be elected, and other important business transacted.

A GOOD CANDIDATE.

With Hon. Charles E. Batchelder in Congress this district would be represented by an able man and an accomplished lawyer, a patriotic citizen and a consistent republican. He is a representative of a class of men just coming into political prominence,—men who were too young to bear arms during the war of the rebellion and engage actively in the strife of the battle field, but old enough when thirteen years of age to be filled with the patriotic desire to enlist and fight in behalf of the imperilled Union. Paternal authority detered him from the life of a soldier, but could not diminish or curb the patriotism of the lad. With voice and pen, with head and heart, the boy entered the ranks of the loyal workers for the preservation of the country, who did so much at home for the comfort and encouragement of the fighting men in the field that victory was made possible. He has profitted however by the terrible lessons of the war, and well knows the value of honesty, wisdom and prudence.

Born and reared in the country, educated in a college and disciplined in the profession of the law, he is eminently qualified to represent the various interests of our people, rich and poor, in the councils of the Nation. He has been tested in many positions of public and private trust, and has proved faithful and efficient. A man so capable, trusted and popular at home, can safely be entrusted with larger interests at the national capital. Portsmouth has a right to ask the favorable consideration of the congressional convention in behalf of the young and brilliant lawyer she offers as a candidate for congressional honors. M.

ACCIDENTAL.

George F. Martin, engineer at the pumping station of the Portsmouth Aqueduct Co. at the Plains, on Friday night started to ride out to his work on a freight train. About one o'clock Saturday morning the engineer of a freight train bound to this city from the westward saw a man lying beside the track at Emery's crossing, this side of the Plains, and on arriving at the station here made a report, and a shifting engine was sent out and brought in the man, who proved to be Martin. He was taken to the Cottage Hospital, where it was found that his skull was fractured and three ribs broken, no doubt caused by his jumping from the outward bound freight. On Sunday it was stated that he was apparently doing well, and good hopes were entertained of his recovery.

MUSIC HALL.

The only Pat Rooney and his own selected company, including Katie Rooney and other favorites, at Music hall to-morrow evening, in "Pat's New Wardrobe." Tickets at Goodrich's.

"A Postage Stamp" is the name of one of the funniest farce comedies ever written, which will be presented at Music hall on Friday evening, Sept. 7th. The company carries all of its special scenery, and the piece is presented with a cast of exceptional excellence. Songs, dances and specialties are interspersed, and every assurance for a splendid entertainment is guaranteed. The company also carries what is claimed to be the finest band and orchestra travelling in America. The uniforms are a fac simile of those of the Imperial Prussian Black Hussars, and are the handsomest on exhibition in the country. The sale of seats will begin Tuesday morning at Goodrich's.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Harry T. Sears, of Boston, is passing a few days with Mr. Edwin R. Pearson of Broad street.

Hon. Charles Levi Woodbury arrived in this city on Saturday, and remains at when he leaves for the Glen house, White mountains, where his sisters are stopping, to pass several weeks.

Hon. Moses H. Goodrich and wife, of Vaughan street, go to Walpole, Mass., this week, to visit their daughter, Mrs. Willard I. Lewis.

Mr. George Bilbruck and wife start for the White mountains this morning, to pass several weeks.

Mrs. Josiah F. Adams of this city, and her grand-daughter, Miss Alice A. Reinewald, are visiting in Gonic, this state.

Mr. Frank J. Philbrick and wife leave this morning for Buffalo, N. Y., to attend the bicycle tournament there, and pass two weeks in Buffalo and other places.

Mr. John A. Broderick of Boston passed Sunday in this city, where Mrs. Broderick and child have been on a visit for a week or more.

Mr. Frank H. Meloon and family, of Court street, have gone to Newcastle to pass several weeks in Mr. Meloon's cottage there.

Mr. Josiah H. Morrison arrived home Saturday evening from the mountains, where he had passed a short time for the benefit of his health.

Mr. Henry M. Gardner of this city is going one trip in the brick schooner Chilion between this port and Boston. He has been sailing during the season in the Estella.

The public schools commence their fall term to-day.

Frank W. Hackett, Esq., will this evening at 8:15 o'clock discuss the political issues of the campaign from the republican standpoint, at the headquarters on Congress street. All are invited.

Miss L. H. Anderson will reopen her school on Summer street Monday, Sept. 10th.

Rev. Lee H. Fisher and wife arrived home on Thursday evening of last week, and took up their residence in the Universalist parsonage on Daniel street. Mr. Fisher occupied the pulpit of the Universalist church on Sunday, the subject of his sermon being "Summer gleanings." Rev. John A. Hainer, pastor of the Court street Christian church, arrived home last Friday evening from a vacation of several weeks in Maine, and services in that church were resumed Sunday.

Thirty barrels of "algæ" or Irish moss, well cured at the beach at Kittery Point, were brought to the Spring market landing on Saturday for transhipment, as usual for several years.

Another spring comes bubbling up alongside that which recently burst forth at the Spring market landing. Alderman Seymour expresses an intention of obtaining the consent of the mayor and board of aldermen to placing an iron pipe there, so as to make the cool water

Rev. Dr. Peabody's very interesting historical address delivered at the recent anniversary celebration of the Unitarian Sunday school, has been printed, and is for sale by M. Goodrich.

A Gypsey camp was pitched beside the Greenland road, where it passes through Great swamp, on Sunday.

The Wentworth house orchestra came up from Newcastle on Sunday afternoon, and took the train for Boston.

The Unitarian Sunday school, which has been suspended during the heated term, or what would have been the heated term had there been any this year, will resume its sessions next Sunday afternoon, at the usual time and place.

The Whale's-back foghorn commenced giving forth its musical tones about noon on Sunday, and kept it up the rest of the day.

NAVY YARD ITEMS.

The U. S. S. Portsmouth is stuck on the ways at the head of the dry-dock basin at the navy yard, owing to the rotten condition of the hauling-out ways. The hydraulic is also crippled, though not wholly useless.

Two of the new boilers of the U. S. S. Kearsarge were tested with steam last week; everything was satisfactory, and the boilers are now being lagged. The ship is expected to be ready for a trial the last of this month.

The steam launch now in course of construction at this navy yard for the training station is progressing fairly; the engines are being built at the yard, but the boiler will come from some other place. This "launch" is quite a boat, being ten or twelve feet longer than the Emerald.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "One Hundred Doses One Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly. Do not be induced to buy other preparations, but be sure to get the Peculiar Medicine,

HAWAIIAN ISLANDS' LEPROSY.

The Only Hope of the Native Race—The Lepers' Colony.

London Spectator.

It is now more than half a century since leprosy was introduced into the Hawaiian Islands. It would be quite impossible to point with certainty to the original case, but it is generally understood that the seed of the dreadful malady came from Asia, and came in the person of an ill fated foreigner. He may or may not have been aware of the incalculable injury he was about to inflict upon a nation that had been, until the arrival of Capt. Cook, in 1790, almost entirely free from the numerous contagious diseases that prevail among civilized communities; but the life he led in Hawaii was such as to speedily communicate this mortal disease, and it was not long before its unmistakable symptoms were developing in every quarter of the kingdom. Leprosy develops slowly; one may be a leper for months or even years before the symptoms of the disease begin to discover themselves and at last become externally evident. Then they are unmistakable; but by this time great mischief may have been done, and done innocently enough, perhaps; for the leper will have but recently become conscious of his state. Thus leprosy spread through the kingdom, and spread to such an alarming degree that it became necessary to take public action in the matter.

The disease is acknowledged by the medical world to be incurable. It has ever been so considered; and as yet, though a thousand experiments have been tried, the most hopeful of the scientists have abandoned the field in despair. The Mosaic law was explicit in regard to the treatment of those afflicted by leprosy: they were to be set apart, without the gates, and to walk alone, crying, "Unclean! unclean!" Their garments were to be burned, their houses cleansed, and all direct communication between the clean and the unclean was expressly prohibited. In like manner, segregation was considered to be the only hope of the Hawaiian race. A suitable spot was sought to which the lepers might be removed, where they might be tenderly cared for and jealously guarded, and there they were to end their miserable days. The prospect of life banishment alarmed the natives, both the sick and the hale; they were not, and they still are not, afraid of the disease. They are a most affectionate people: they love their friends with a love passing the love of woman; moreover, they are fearless of death—at heart they are fatalists.

When the health agent of the government went forth in search of the afflicted, hoping to gather them together, house them, feed them and clothe them at the government expense, he found great difficulty in securing any of them. At the approach of this health officer the lepers would be secreted by friends, who were willing to brave possible contagion rather than part with those so dear to them. Sometimes the unfortunates were surprised and given into the hands of the police, who were to have charge of them until they could be shipped to the new settlement. Eye witnesses of the heart-rending scenes that followed these captures will not soon forget the agony of the final partings. Terrible as was the emergency, the voice of the government could justly say, with Hamlet:

I must be cruel only to be kind.

It was a question of saving the remnant of the nation at the price of the hopeless few. The little lowland at our feet was found to be, by all odds, the most desirable locality in the whole group for a settlement such as was proposed.

There are few white people on the Island of Molokai. This lowland was seldom, perhaps never, visited; certainly, there was no necessity of its being visited by those who were not concerned in the welfare of the natives. There was ample sustenance both on land and sea; fishers were living among the foam crested rocks; the husbandman would find an immediate market for his produce, and he was alike fearless and hospitably disposed. Indeed, all things considered, no better refuge for the leper could be found; and so the little lowland under the great windward cliff of Molokai was speedily and permanently secured. Transportation began immediately, and for twenty years it has continued; it has continued in spite of the pitiful protestations of friends and relations, and in spite of the first instinct of humanity—the natural appeal of the sympathetic. It has continued—it must continue until the last vestige of leprosy has disappeared from the kingdom.—"The Lepers of Molokai."

New York's Chinese Laundrymen.

The Chinese tailors make the laundrymen their blouses and short petticoats, to save them from what they would consider the misery of wearing the tight fitting American trousers that prevent ventilation. The doctors bring their cases of Chi-Mayo, Neu Teah fa, Sin gooeeh, and countless other herbs, to prevent the washees from having the gout, dyspepsia, spiz and other kindred diseases that are co-existent with western civilization, and that were unknown to Chinamen until they began to feed like Christians, Yet, notwithstanding the merits of Chinese drugs, the Chinamen kept getting more funereal in face and qualmish in stomach, and continued to turn yellower in skin, until Mr. Wa Kee, an enterprising Hong Kong merchant, imported a cargo of all manner of curious canned, dried and preserved fruit from the far off "land of many flowers." Then the New York Chinamen began to revive, as the plants of an Egyptian desert brighten up after a refreshing shower.—Wong Chin Foo in The Cosmopolitan.

Bursting of Steam Boilers.

The boiler bursting record is a large and growing one. Over 200, all undoubtedly supposed safe, exploded during the past year. The invention of the safety seam steam boiler, which opens at the joints, and puts out the fire before the pressure reaches the bursting point, must save many lives in a year's time. More than 700 persons were stricken down, without warning, by boiler explosions within our country during the past year. More than half these persons were killed outright, and many of the remainder were maimed for life.—Boston Transcript.

When used according to directions, Ayer's Ague Cure is warranted to eradicate from the system fever and ague, intermittent, remittent, and bilious fevers, and all malarial diseases. Try it.

We shall be much mistaken if the effect of this state communication [President Cleveland's message] will not be to strengthen considerably the case of free traders in all parts of the world. It will be regarded as a step in the right direction by all who believe in the soundness of free-trade principles.—London Post.

Grover Cleveland has done more to advance the cause of free trade than any Prime Minister of England has done.—London Spectator.

The president is careful to state that he frankly declares his indifference to the charge of favoring free trade. His policy, he says, may be called by that or another name, but it is the policy he recommends to Congress, and which, he does not affect to deny, must alter the terms on which foreigners have access to the American market.—London Saturday Review.

The Biting Tongue.

Slander attacks us from behind. The bite is rarely felt unless it is malignant and persistent. Disease, too, often steals upon us through a vital channel. The air we breathe affects the lungs—if it be malarious it enters the blood, if it change too quickly in the temperature it produces disease of the throat, &c. Whether Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is taken to prevent or to remedy the various forms of disease produced by miasma, such as intermittent fever, dumb ague, ague cake or billious remittent, it is and ever has proved to be an effective and thorough remedy—one which does not only ameliorate the symptoms of the maladies of this type, but eradicates their cause. Dyspepsia, liver complaint, rheumatism, bladder and kidney troubles are among the humanity-afflicting troubles which it promptly relieves and ultimately removes.

It is certain that the arguments which President Cleveland urges are those which Cobden used to employ forty-five years ago, and which any free trader could employ now.—London Times.

Aunt Rachae"s Bitters.

The undeniable fact that these Bitters are composed in the main of Speer's Grape Juice, with Peruvian bark, snake root, etc., analyzed and recommended to invalids and the medical profession, by the best chemists in the United States, cannot fail in inspiring confidence in the use of these Malarial Bitters.

The American election is infinitely more important to Englishmen than their own internal politics just at this juncture. * * * The main question at issue is English free trade against the continental system of protection.—London Times.

Found Dead.

Last evening a person giving the name of G. R. Thompson registered at Hunt's Hotel, and desired to be called in season to take the 12 P. M. train for Chicago. Being unable to awaken him, the room was entered by means of the ventilator over the door, when the gentleman was found to be dead. He was advertising agent for Sulpher Bitters, which has an extensive sale. The coroner returned a verdict of death from heart disease. His body will be sent east immediately.—Cin. Commercial.

Our manufactures require the systematic and fostering care of the government. * * Equally important it is to provide at home a market for our raw materials.—James Monroe.

A Good Appetite

Is essential to good health; but at this season it is often lost, owing to the poverty or impurity of the blood, derangement of the digestive organs, and the weakening effect of the changing season. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a wonderful medicine for creating an appetite, toning the digestion, and giving strength to the whole system. Now is the time to take it. Be sure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla.

An extensive domestic market for the surplus produce of the soil is of the first consequence. It is, of all things, that which most effectually conduces to a flourishing state of agriculture.—Alexander Hamilton.

Disorders of the stomach, liver, and kidneys, can be cured by restoring the blood to a healthy condition, through the vitalizing and cleansing action of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. It is the safest, most powerful, and most highly concentrated alterative available to the public.

Hay Fever.

I have suffered greatly from periodical returns of hay fever. Covert & Cheever, Druggists, suggested Ely's Cream Balm. I used it during a severe attack. I can cheerfully testify as to the immediate and continued relief obtained by its use. I heartily recommend it to those suffering from this or kindred complaints.—(Rev.) H. A. Smith, Clinton, Wis.

Mr. Cleveland has taken his stand on free trade, * * and on that broad question Mr. Cleveland's candidature naturally and necessarily carries English sympathy.—London Globe.

Why Adamson's Balsam is so Perfect a Medicine. Because it is a scientifically ordered compound, of great potency, the product of years of study, observation and experience in the treatment of throat and lung diseases.

When our manufactures are grown to a certain proportion, as they will under the fostering care of the government, * * the farmer will find a ready market for his surplus produce, and, what is of almost equal consequence, a certain and cheap supply for all his wants.—John C. Calhoun.

Congress have repeatedly, and no without success, directed their attention to the encouragement of manufactures. The object is of too much consequence not to insure a continuance of their efforts in every way which shall appear eligible.—George Washington.

OH! MY HEAD.

The pain from Neuralgia and its companion disease Rheumatism is excruciating. Thousands who could be quickly cured are needlessly suffering. Ath-lo-pho-ros will do for others what it did for the following parties:

Williamsport, Ind., Oct. 8, 1887.

Having been afflicted with neuralgia for the past four years, and trying almost everything, but to no avail, I finally heard of Athlophoros. After taking one bottle I found it to be helping me, and after taking four bottles of Athlophoros and one of Pills, I found that I was entirely well. I think the medicine is positively a sure cure.

CHAUNCEY B. RENDICK,
Mt. Carmel, Ill., Dec. 28, 1887.

I have used Athlophoros in my family and find it to be the greatest medicine for neuralgia in existence and having had the benefit fastened upon me for the past 10 years I know whereof I speak. MRS. JULIA GRILLPOE.

When we consider the patronage of this great office, [the presidency,] the allurements of power, the temptation to retain place ones gained, and more than all, the availability a party finds in an incumbent whom a horde of office holders, with a zeal born of benefits and fostered by the hope of favors yet to come, stand ready to aid with money and trained political service, we recognize in the eligibility of the president for re-election a most serious danger to that calm, deliberate and intelligent political action, which must characterize a government by the people.—Grover Cleveland.

INSECT GEM HUNTERS.

Garnets and Other Precious Stones Brought to the Surface by Ants.

"There is the original garnet mine, and the miner as well," said my companion, as we were riding among the mountains of New Mexico.

Following the direction of his glance I saw a tall, well formed Navajo Indian standing motionless by what appeared to be a small sand heap. Wishing to investigate we drew nearer and found that the statesque native was watching one of the many ant hills that dot the country through New Mexico and Arizona as well.

As we approached he hardly looked up, appearing indifferent after the fashion of his race, and his object was still an enigma, at least to me. The Navajo tribe had never produced a naturalist, and it was hardly possible that he had been studying the habits of the active insects. Perhaps he was trying to collect enough for dinner—Indians have been known to eat rats.

But the Indian was, after all, a close observer, and was reaping his reward, for when I asked him what he was doing he held out a small bag, the contents of which I turned upon my hand—garnets, small but good, in great numbers, bits of quartz that gleamed like diamonds, here a bit of turquoise, large quantities of olivine, and a single gem, an emerald, of but little value, but an emerald after all.

An ant hill was a curious place from which to take such a strange assortment, but, as my friend had suggested, this was the original mine, and the real miners were the ants. In piling up their dome like houses they brought out the minute gems one by one and placed them among the bits of sand, where they gleamed and flashed as if inviting collection.

The Indians had discovered their value, and in this way did their mining, allowing the ants to do all the work and taking the gems as fast as they were brought up. The stones found in this way range in size from the head of a pin to a large pea, and, besides the ones mentioned, rubies have been taken from the heaps. These stolen gems are sold in Ione and used in various kinds of jewelry. Nearly every ant hill is examined in this way and the mound gone over, often the ants being watched and the gems taken from them as soon as brought up.

Whether the little insects have a liking for glistening objects it is difficult to determine, but, from the fact that so many gems are brought to the surface, there would seem to be reason to suppose they had. It would be extremely difficult to name an industry followed by man that did not have its prototype in the lower animal kingdom. Our humble friends have their trades, their seeming arts and sciences, just as we have. Hence, we need not be surprised if we find miners whose work compares favorably with that of human beings.

In an ant family that I have been watching for some time, well up in the Sierra Madre mountains, southern California, the work is carried on in a very methodical manner, the workers apparently being protected by soldier ants, with huge heads and powerful jaws.

For some time I watched these miners at work, noticing the regularity with which each ant seemed to deposit its load in the same spot, and finally I allowed the sun to pass through my hand glass and form a bright spot at the entrance of the mine. A worker soon passed under it, and, feeling the fierce heat, evidently rushed below with the news, for almost immediately out came a horde of big jawed fighters, who darted about, biting at the sun spot, and showing by their actions that they had determined to attack the foe, whatever it was, and when I placed my magnifying glass upon the ground they rushed at it in great fury, fastening their jaws upon the silver case and refusing to be torn away—even parting with their heads, that remained for a long time clinging to the glass.—Golden Days.

Measurement of Human Beings.

Dr. Edward Hitchcock, Jr., of Cornell university, read a paper on the uses of physical measurement to the individual. In the attempts to establish anthropometry on a scientific basis the weight of individuals was first taken as a standard, but this had to be abandoned, and he thought we could now say with a certain degree of exactness that human measures increase with the height. It is extremely difficult, if not indeed practically impossible, to secure the exact dimensions of any man. Especially is this so when it is attempted to obtain the measurements of the chest and shoulders. Six experts might examine the same individuals, and their measurements would probably all differ. The testing of lung capacity is very variable, some individuals giving results which are of value, while others do not use the thoracic muscles at all, but simply bring into play the muscles of the pharynx. Some foreign countries, recognizing the difficulties in the way of obtaining exact measurements of parts which were liable to vary, had adopted the length and breadth of the head, ear, foot and finger, and the height of a man in the sitting position, as the best, making use of them in descriptions of criminals.—Science.

Over-Dressing of Children.

A spirt of unwholesome rivalry is engendered in children by the absurdly rich way in which many parents overdress them. They sacrifice their own appearance in order to lavish money on the little ones, and the only result is to make the children proud, vain, selfish, and, when old enough, disappointed with the position in life in which they find themselves. Not long ago I noticed in a car a pretty little girl, clad in a cont of silk plush, trimmed with chinchilla. She had pretty new boots and silk stockings, one or two rings and a gold necklet and chain. "A pretty child," I said to the conductor. "Yes, sir. She is mine. That's her mother," he answered, pointing to a common looking woman rather poorly dressed in a dingy brown suit made of some cheap goods.—Julian Magnus in The Epoch.

How Paris Enjoys Herself.

Every inch of open ground in Paris is made available, and the tiniest park has its benches free, and the more aristocratic chairs, which may be had for two or three sous an hour. The beautiful Bois de Bologne, rapidly recovering from the destruction and desolation of the last days of the Communal war, has its groups scattered in the shade of thicket or tree over all the 2,700 acres, while a constant stream of carriages in the main roads and of bicyclists wherever they are allowed pours through all day long, though notably larger and more brilliant in the afternoon. Here, as everywhere else, every possible provision is made for enjoyment. The cafes plan ingeniously to make the most of the plot of ground at side or front, and the little gardens are marvels of art. A glass of sugar water or cup of coffee gives right to space as long as a drop lingers, and by early evening every place is filled.

That there is a working Paris is very certain, but the fact is so disguised that playing Paris seems the only tangible thing, and watching these throngs that come and go one wonders when and how the work is done. Wandering acrobats, who lay their strip of carpet in any vacant space, and are instantly surrounded by a group eager to be entertained; jugglers of all grades, Punch and Judy shows, puppet shows, trained dogs, and a thousand other varieties of amusement are before one at every turn, and when these lesser means fail, there is the Trocadero, with its enormous concert hall, its beautiful corridor, where one may walk or linger to gaze at the rushing cascade, the innumerable colored lights, and the gay throng which pours through it till midnight. The lower end of the Champs Elysees and the gardens of the Tuileries are lined with attractions less pretentious but apparently as popular, and turn where one will, from the stately Odeon to the smallest cafe chantant on the narrowest and most obscure of streets, it is always Paris, amusing itself to its utmost bent, and well content so long as the stimulus continues.—Helen Campbell's Paris Letter.

Sinking an Artesian Well.

In attempting to decide as to when an artesian well will succeed this general principle must be borne in mind: Water that falls on the earth's surface either flows off in rills and streams, or evaporates, or sinks into the earth. That which sinks flows downward until it meets a non-porous stratum; it follows the surface of this, still downward and onward, to break out at the base of some ravine or slope as a spring, or to fill some hidden reservoir. When, as it sometimes happens, the reservoir is large, its pressure forces springs to the surface, far out in the valley, or even out at sea. At the foot of canyons and in the lower levels of small valleys it is always reasonable to bore for artesian water, but first, the fountain head must be higher; second, the surface water dips toward the well; third, the porous and non-porous strata must alternate.

The ordinary diagrams of artesian basins are insufficient, for they make the supply appear in narrow veins, which is more rare. The real artesian basin is best illustrated by a pile of saucers with porous paper placed between them. The water fills between and rises to the rim. The nearer the center of a basin a well is the deeper it has to extend to strike water. Artesian wells are not always flowing wells.

Thousand of wells that are rightly called artesian bring the water from deep strata nearly to the surface, but require some pumping. The ideal well is, of course, the flowing well, delivering its supply like a fountain at the surface or higher. Once put down, an artesian well is, of course, complete and requires no further expense to run it and nothing for repairs.—Charles H. Shinn in Overland Monthly.

Doing the Wrong Thing.

Wesley, my colored man of all work, possesses in a wonderful degree the ability to understand just what you don't say. One day I called him to the garden gate and pointing down a walk on either side of which grew some shrubbery, said:

"Wesley, I want you to trim the shrubbery on the left hand side of this walk."

"Yes, 'um."

"Yes, 'um."

A few hours later he came to say the work was done. I went to the gate and found the shrubbery on the right hand closely cut while the left remained untouched. "Wesley," I said angrily, didn't I tell you to trim the left hand side and not the right?"

"Yes, um, but I begun at ter sen' uo the walk."—Detroit Free Press.

A New Seaman's Log.

Official trials of a new form of log have recently been made on board some of the French torpedo boats. The log is made of bronze, of cylindro-conical form, and weighs about 5.5 pounds. It is provided with a hollow tube running down its center, which is connected by a canvas covered india rubber tube to a pressure gauge on board. When the ship is under weigh the flow of the water past the log establishes a partial vacuum in the tube and causes the pointer of the pressure gauge to move over its dial, which is graduated to give the speed of the vessel from four up to twenty-five knots.—Detroit Free Press.

Ericsson, the Noted Inventor.

Engineer Ericsson, although 85 years old, is as brusquely youthful as ever. I asked him once to what he attributed his surprising mental and physical juvenility, which enables him still to work out the most intricate problems and to spend many consecutive hours daily perfecting his great solar engine, which stands in his back yard and is the mystery of the neighbors. His reply was in effect that hard working and plain living conducted on an unvarying system were all the secret. He eats every day precisely the same amount at precisely the same hours, and to this rule there is no exception.—The Epoch.

S. S. S. FOR THE BLOOD. TRADE MARK

FRED'S MILL, TEXAS, June 20, 1888—The Swift Specific Company, Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: One of my children was troubled with rheumatism and boils for about two years. We gave her various kinds of medicine, but without profit, and began to despair of curing her at all. I was persuaded to try your Swift's Specific. After she had used several bottles the diseases all disappeared, and she is now a hale, hearty and healthy girl twelve years old. Another child has just become afflicted in the same way, and I am using the S. S. S. and anticipate a prompt and permanent cure. N. C. WIGGONS.

RED HILL, MO., July 7, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: Our little girl when but three weeks old broke out with eczema. We tried the prescriptions from several good doctors, but without any special benefit. We tried S. S. S., and by the time one bottle was gone her head began to heal, and by the time she had taken six bottles she was completely cured. Now she has a full and heavy head of hair—a robust, hearty child. I feel it but my duty to make this statement. Respectfully, H. T. SHOPE.

CHATTANOOGA, TENN., June 27, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: In 1866 I contracted blood poison, and at once sought a physician, who treated me for several months. By his advice I went to Crab Orchard Springs, Ky., where his course of treatment was carefully observed. I recovered, as I thought, but the next spring pimples began to appear on my face and body. These gradually increased to sores and running ulcers. I was advised to try S. S. S., and immediately after taking it I commenced to improve, slowly at first, but more rapidly afterwards, and soon nothing was left to tell of my trouble. My blood is now thoroughly cleansed, and my system free from taint, and I owe my present condition—a perfect cure—to your medicine. Cheerfully give this statement that others who have suffered as I have may reap the same benefit. HENRY M. BURR, 24 West Ninth St.

HOMER, LA., May 26, 1888—The Swift Specific Co., Atlanta, Ga.—Gentlemen: About two years ago my general health gave way entirely. I was so debilitated that I almost despaired of ever feeling well again. All that the physicians done for me brought no permanent relief. Friends insisted that I should give S. S. S. a fair trial, although I thought it would be throwing away money. After taking a thorough course, my health and strength returned, and I must say that S. S. S. alone cured me, as I discarded all others while using it. As a tonic I can most heartily recommend it; for general debility, it certainly is a specific. W. P. BIRMONG, J. P.

HOMER, LA.—I know Mr. W. F. Bridges, and will say that his statement is correct. JOSEPH SHELTON, Druggist.

If you have made up your mind to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla do not be induced to take any other. Hood's Sarsaparilla is a peculiar medicine, possessing, by virtue of its peculiar combination, proportion, and preparation, curative power superior to any other article. A Boston lady who knew what she wanted, and whose example is worthy imitation, tells her experience below:

To Get

"In one store where I went to buy Hood's Sarsaparilla the clerk tried to induce me buy their own instead of Hood's; he told me their's would last longer; that I might take it on ten days' trial; that if I did not like it I need not pay anything, etc. But he could not prevail on me to change. I told him I knew what Hood's Sarsaparilla was. I had taken it, was satisfied with it, and did not want any other.

Hood's

When I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla I was feeling real miserable, suffering a great deal with dyspepsia, and so weak that at times I could hardly stand. I looked, and had for some time, like a person in consumption. Hood's Sarsaparilla did me so much good that I wonder at myself sometimes, and my friends frequently speak of it." MRS. ELLA A. GOFF, 61 Terrace Street, Boston.

Disastrous Fire In Baltimore.

An entire block in Baltimore, one of the finest in the city, was burned Sept. 2d, entailing a loss of $1,500,000. By an explosion in a wholesale drug store the building was piled in ruins, burying eight firemen, seven of whom were killed or afterward burned to death; it is feared that other lives may have also been lost. Many persons were less seriously injured.

Quick Work.

At Guide Rock, Neb., a man named John Baker, while feeding a threshing machine, was accidentally cut on the hand by a boy who was assisting in the work. Baker seized the boy and thrust him into the machine, feet first. His screams called the other men to his rescue, but not in time to save his life; so they seized Baker, and despite his appeals for mercy hung him to a portion of the machine.

A gang of horse thieves in Missouri were surrounded by vigilantes recently, and a fight ensued, lasting twelve minutes. At the end of that time the entire gang of seventeen outlaws were dead; three vigilantes were killed and nine wounded.

Don't Kill the Old Hens.

When hens are shedding feathers they often stop laying and grow fat. Most people consider fat a sign of health. The fattening of moulting hens however, as with some people produces debility rather than health. Many of the worst cases of roupe are contracted, while the hens are moulting.

The food of moulting hens, if largely vegetable is fatforming, and not required for growing feathers. Therefore corn-fed hens get very fat. They need more nitrogen and phosphate elements in their food when moulting, which if not supplied they stop laying, because the growing feathers have used all, and left no nitrogenous matter to form eggs. At this season, killing old hens and relying on young pullets is a great mistake; where people have a few hens and late pullets. Because, if properly fed the hens will have their new plumage and lay well all winter; while the pullets unless specially treated may not commence laying until spring, when high prices for eggs have fallen one-half. Again, an old hen's egg will hatch a more vigorous chicken than a pullet's egg.

John R. Jones, Suffield, Conn, a breeder of prize winning mottled Javas, says: "I find Sheridan's Condition Powder fed once daily in the food, very valuable for moulting hens. I have used it for two years for exhibition birds. It assists in growing new feathers, makes the combs a bright red, and gives a rich gloss to the plumage. It will also make hens lay and the eggs hatch well. I find when other egg-foods are used in quantities to force egg production the eggs do not hatch."

The above is the experience of many people in using Sheridan's Powder. If fed to young pullets now as directed, they will begin to lay before six months old. Commence at once using Sheridan's Powder. It helps old hens through moulting, and gets the pullets in laying trim before the season of high prices. Eggs will sell very high this fall and winter. Therefore be ready to get all you can.

I. S. Johnson & Co., 22 Custom House St., Boston, Mass., sole makers of Sheridan's Condition Powder to make hens lay, will send to any address for one two-cent stamp, testimontals with full information how to make a few hens pay well; also how to obtain Sheridan's powder.

Wine Purified by Electricity.

Captain Winchell, a well-known New York newspaper writer, lately returned from a two years' trip in Florida, has been sojourning in Passaic for the past week. He dropped into Mr. Alfred Speer's wine vaults one day this week, and became enthusiastic over the purity and great popularity of his wines. Mr. Speer has achieved a success that is marvellous, and he is justly entitled to a reputation well earned after a long and experienced career.

Over thirty-two years ago, Mr. Speer, knowing the famous reputation of the grape vines of which the genuine port wine is made from the Douro valley, in Portugal, obtained at considerable expense 5,000 of the vines, which he set out. He had great trouble in acclimating the vines, and finally, after eight years of much trouble and labor got 200 to survive successful cultivation, all the others died. From these he obtained cuttings, and he has propagated and

The Oporto grape is a small black variety, very much in the shape and appearance of our native wild grape, sometimes called frost grapes. They are only fit for making wine, being too small for table use. As they contain iron and other medicinal properties, giving the wine a dark color and body, it has become valuable to physicians, who have always recommended it to invalids and others, when it could be obtained pure. An article labelled port wine is extensively sold, but it is a dangerous liquid, and more injurious than beneficial, when adulterated with logwood and a hundred other drugs that are used to counterfeit the genuine article.

Mr. Speer also makes a specialty of unfermented grape juice from this Oporto grape, for communion surposes, which he refines by electricity—a recent discovery of his own—which destroys the germ that scientists decide is the cause of fermentation, and the means by which alcohol is produced in wine. He also fumigates his barrels with sulphur and by his process produces a pure, nutritious, unfermented wine, that has neither the taste nor smell of alcohol.

His wines are sold in Dresden, Vienna, and other parts of Europe, and are recommended by all leading physicians in this country. Dr. Cyrus Edson, sanitary superintendent of New York city, recommends it as one of the best and purest brands of wine that he uses. Doctors D. W. Bliss, of Washington, our late President Garfield's physician, J. G. Ambler, A. S. Cozner, and others speak of it in the highest terms.

Mr. Speer, while showing Captain Winchell through his vaults, brought him to a musty looking apartment, from which the cobwebs hung in such profusion as to almost impede locomotion. Here choice wines, thirty years old, were sampled from dingy and dirty looking bottles. While tasting some twenty years' old port, Mr. Speer told a story about the late lamented Horace Greeley, who had received some bottles of Scuppernong wine, made from the native grape in South Carolina, which Mr. Greeley asked Mr. Speer to open and give his opinion of. Mr. Speer, is drawing out the plugs, as the bottles were stopped with plugs instead of corks, saw that they were made of pitch pine, and knew that the pitch would destroy the flavor. Handing a glass of the wine to Mr. Greeley, the latter smacked his lips, and said, "Speer, what a funny taste it has. Take it away. I want my turpentine pure."—Passaic Daily News.

As might be expected, the Portsmouth delegation to the republican congressional convention will vote for the nomination of Judge Batchelder as candidate for Congress from this district. The delegates met last week and voted to act as a unit for the man who should receive the majority of the votes of the delegates there assembled. A vote was accordingly taken, which demonstrated the fact that Charles E. Batchelder, Esq., was the decided favorite of the meeting. The Portsmouth delegation is, therefore, a unit in favor of the nomination of our popular young townsman. The judge's popularity is by no means confined to his own city or county. He has many friends and supporters in every part of the district, and stands as good a chance for the nomination as either of the other candidates. It is certain that Judge Batchelder would develope more strength at the polls in this county, where the fight will be decisive, than any other gentlemrn yet named as a candidate for Congress from this district. He is young enough to receive the enthusiastic support of the younger class of voters, and yet mature and experienced enough to have gained the respect and confidence of men who have borne the heat and burden of many a political contest. The judge is a straight forward republican, a good organizer and a skillful leader; his nomination by the convention would develope the latent strength of the party in this county, and result in the defeat of the apostle of free trade who now misrepresents this district.

The glare seen off to the northward by persons in this city between two and three o'clock Monday morning, was caused by the burning of a large barn in Eliot.

Caucuses of the republican and democratic parties of Eliot were both inadventently called to meet in the town hall on Saturday evening at the same hour, but no unpleasantness resulted, the democrats courteously conceding the first session to the republicans on it appearing that the latter had the prior claim. Timothy Dame, Esq., a republican who caucus as the candidate of that party for representative to the legislature.

Langton Bros. (Charles and Pa[illegible] M. Langton) of Kittery receive [illegible] week from Canada a carload of lambs, numbering 200 or more to a car. Their sons, Chester and Elmer Langton, dress about sixty lambs a week for the refrigerator company of Dover; the rest of those received are sold to Brackett, of Portsmouth.

The barn of Mr. Solomon Staples of Eliot was burned early Monday morning, 3d inst. All the animals were saved, but the barn and its other contents, including about fifty tons of hay, farm tools, etc., were totally destroyed; no insurance on the hay or tools; small insurance on building. Mr. Staples has been a heavy loser from fire, first and last. Several years ago a barn on the same site as the one burned Monday morning was destroyed by a fire kindled by lightning; and about two years since his house was burned, it was supposed by a spark from the engine of the Pullman train. Monday morning's fire is supposed to have been set by a tramp, one of that fraternity having been seen hanging around that neighborhood Sunday evening.

A lady in this city who has been married thirty-one years has only been twice absent from her family during that period, and only for a few days each time.

The democrats of York held a caucus in the town hall on Thursday evening of last week, and nominated Charles W. Junkins as their candidate for representative to the legislature.

All freight houses and repair shops of the Boston & Maine railroad in Massachusetts were closed on Monday, "Labor day" in that state, by order of General Manager Forber.

At Concord, to-day, the next governor of New Hampshire will be nominated, by the republican state convention.

It is Absurd

For people to expect a cure for Indigestion, unless they refrain from eating what is unwholesome; but if anything will sharpen the appetite and give tone to the digestive organs, it is Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Thousands all over the land testify to the merits of this medicine.

Mrs. Sarah Burroughs, of 248 Eighth street, South Boston, writes: "My husband has taken Ayer's Sarsaparilla, for Dyspepsia and torpid liver, and has been greatly benefited."

A Confirmed Dyspeptic.

C. Canterbury, of 141 Franklin st., Boston, Mass., writes, that, suffering for years from Indigestion, he was at last induced to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla and, by its use, was entirely cured.

Mrs. Joseph Aubin, of High street, Holyoke, Mass., suffered for over a year from Dyspepsia, so that she could not eat substantial food, became very weak, and was unable to care for her family. Neither the medicines prescribed by physicians, nor any of the remedies advertised for the cure of Dyspepsia, helped her, until she commenced the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. "Three bottles of this medicine," she writes, "cured me."

MUSIC HALL.

This evening the inimitable Pat Rooney and his selected company will unfold "Pat's New Wardrobe" to the theatre-goers of this city, at Music hall. Pat Rooney, Katie Rooney and others of the company, are all favorites. Tickets at Goodrich's; see advertisement.

STRUCK THE BRIDGE.

Two young men, with a sloop yacht from South Boston, sailed from Annisquam, Mass., Monday morning, reached this port between nine and ten o'clock in the evening, and having lost their anchor attempted to make fast at the navy yard. Being prevented in this, they started in search of some other wharf, and the flood tide soon took them to Portsmouth bridge, where the yacht was dismasted and half filled with water, one of the men being thrown overboard by the shock, the other clinging to the mast until the boat passed through the bridge. The man thrown overboard clung to a pile, and both were rescued by the bridge watchman and some railroad men. They dried their clothing at the engine house on Noble's island, but we did not hear their names nor the name of the yacht, they desiring to avoid notoriety.

TELEPHONE CONNECTION WITH NEWCASTLE.

Now that there is no telephone at Fort Constitution, or any other place in the vicinity of the harbor, except at the Wentworth house, it wouldn't be a wrong idea to have one put into the new life-saving station at Jerry's point, Newcastle. The government will probably attend to the matter.—Times.

There was at one time a telephone connection between the light station at Newcastle (we think that was its location) and the custom house in this city, established by the government through the efforts of the former collector of customs, A. F. Howard, Esq. It was a great convenience to masters of vessels, and also enabled the prompt reporting of craft which put into the lower harbor for shelter in bad weather, often a matter of much interest. Under the cheese-paring policy of the Cleveland administration this telephone service has been abolished, thereby enabling the treasury surplus to increase several dollars a month faster than would have been the case had the service been continued. It should be re-established, and perhaps the life-saving station would be as good a place as any for the location of the Newcastle end, during the winter season; but the service should be continuous through the year, and the station is not manned from the 1st of May to the 31st of August.

CAN'T BEAT US AT THAT GAME.

Ed Kelly of Saco, who was arrested Tuesday for drunkenness, was brought before Recorder Emery at the Saco municipal court room this morning, and given his choice between thirty days in Alfred and leaving the state. He accepted the latter alternative, and this noon he shook the dust of Saco from his feet and started for New Hampshire. Maine's gain will be New Hampshire's loss.—Biddeford Journal.

Our Biddeford brother need not exult over the banishment of Mr. Kelly to this state; Maine is a good deal nearer to New Hampshire, so far as extradition purposes are concerned, than New Hampshire is to Maine. For instance, Mr. Kelly had about thirty-seven miles to tramp before getting out of the prohibition state of Maine into the prohibition state of New Hampshire; whereas, whenever Judge Batchelder gives some sinner the option of going to the county farm or out of the state, it only takes him fifteen minutes to reach the Maine end of the Portsmouth bridge.

CITIZENS' EXCURSION.

The Citizens' Excursion to the White mountains, via Boston and Maine railroad, is set for to-day, the train leaving this city at 11:12 o'clock A. M. Tickets to Fabyan's and return, good going today, and returning by any train until Tuesday, the 11th, will be sold at $4.50 each. Tickets from Fabyan's to Mt. Washington summit and return, will be sold in connection with the excursion tickets at $3 each. See advertisement.

Mr. Alpha Senter of Boston took advantage of Monday being Labor day, a legal holiday in Massachusetts, to make a flying visit to relatives and friends in this city. Mr. Senter has for nine years been in Hon. Frank Jones' office in Boston.

Mr. Fred G. Newton, who went to Texas about nine months ago, has arrived home.

Colonel John H. Jackson of the Boston custom house visited his old Portsmouth home on Saturday. He made only a short stay, being obliged to return on Monday to his duties, in spite of his inclination to enjoy himself during the splendid autumnal weather in this delightful region.

Mrs. Kate Sweet, and little Marion, are visiting Mrs. James Moses, of Islington street.

Mr. Charles A. Hazlett and several other local members of the Rockingham Bicycle club started on Monday to attend the national bicycle tournament at Buffalo, N. Y.

Mr. J. William Parks, formerly a carrier of the Chronicle, and one of the best and most faithful ones it ever had, arrived in this city on Monday from Montreal, for a stay of several days. Mr. Parks and his brother Harry, also a former carrier of this paper, and their sister, all live in Montreal, where the two young men have for several years had steady employment.

Mr. Frederick Watkins is on a vacation, first paying a visit to his brother in Malden, Mass., and afterward friends in Worcester and other places in Massachusetts; he will be absent a fortnight.

Mr. John Whittem, of the Boston Herald force, is in this city for a few days rest.

Capt. Albert E. Baker, of Boston, is passing his vacation in visiting his mother, Mrs. S. S. Baker, of Fleet street.

Mr. Alberto Fernald, of the firm of Preston & Fernald, architects, of Boston, is visiting his mother, Mrs. Albert A. Fernald of Lincoln avenue.

Miss Maude Hall of Concord, N. H., is visiting Mr. Granville Berry and wife at Kittery Point for a few days.

Mrs. James Adrian of East Somerville, Mass., is visiting her parents, Mr. Charles Foster and wife of South Eliot.

Senator Chandler, who passed Sunday at Little Boar's Head, went to Concord on Monday morning. The senator returns to Washington the latter part of this week.

Collector Hanscom went to Concord on Monday.

POLICE COURT---BATCHELDER J.

SATURDAY, Sept. 1st.

John McArthur was before the court, charged with the larceny of a silver watch from Michael J. Leary. Both were employed at the Wentworth house, Newcastle, Leary being engineer. The watch was hung on a nail in the engine room, and disappeared; and McArthur being arrested, the watch was found in his pocket. The accused told a story about finding the watch under the cushion of a carriage, but the magistrate thought the case looked serious enough for the grand jury to pass upon, and consequently held McArthur in $400 to appear; in default of sureties he was committed to jail.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT.

In the United States Circuit court on Monday, the accounts of United States Marshal Barker, for the fiscal year ending June 30th, were approved.

In Mitchell, admr., vs. Grand Trunk Railway, the plaintiff's objection to the defendant's drafts of exceptions was filed.

In the Mercantile Trust Co. vs. Portland & Ogdensburg Railroad Co. and others, the petition of the Maine Central R. R. Co. to be admitted as a party to the case was filed and allowed. For the purpose of discharging the receiver of the Portland & Ogdensburg road and giving possession to the Maine Central, the latter corporation has given its agreement to Wm. H. Hackett, clerk of the Circuit court, that the M. C. R. R. shall assume and discharge all the legal obligations of Receiver Anderson and other claims arising out of the receivership. A copy of the decree of the Supreme court of Cumberland county, Me., was filed. The court then ordered and decreed that Receiver Anderson deliver possession of the railroad of the P. & O. R. R. Co. to the Maine Central Railroad Co., the court retaining jurisdiction of the cause to enforce payments of liens, etc., with the right to reinstate the receiver or appoint a new receiver if it may be regarded expedient. The decree is assented to by W. L. Putnam for the trustees of the bondholders; Joseph W. Symonds, city solicitor of Portland, Me.; Chas. F. Libby, solicitor of the P. & O. R. R.; Gen. Anderson, receiver; and Drummond & Drummond, solicitors for the Maine Central.

THOSE MISSING CERTIFICATES.

The Times of the 3d inst. says; "A correspondent in this morning's Chronicle states that he has been informed that the city certificates of stock in the P. & D. R. R. are lost. We learn on inquiry at the city clerk's office that these certificates have been missing for a number of [illegible] was informed by his predecessor in answer to an inquiry that he had no knowledge of them, and was not aware that there were any. Of what possible use they could be to any one now in possession of them it is hard to say."

BASE BALL.

The Lowell club will play the Portsmouths on the South street grounds this afternoon; game called at 3:30 o'clock.

Manager William Sullivan, of the Electric club of this city, has released John Barry, right fielder of that club.

The Bangor Commercial says of one of the games played at the Maine state fair last week, when Portsmouth beat Manchester, nine to four: "The people at Maplewood yesterday afternoon who were at all interested in base ball saw one of the biggest ball games of the season between Manchester and Portsmouth. Col. Ferson did the twirling for Manchester, and while he was not hit very hard the hits came at critical points. Once with men on second and third, Householder, who is a good batter, was given his base on balls by Ferson, who thought it would be easier to dispose of Rudderham, the next batsman. But 'Ruddy' was equal to the emergency and he put in a corking single, bringing in two men and making the Manchester pitcher very weary. Willis pitched for the Portsmouths and was hit quite hard at times, but he pitched a very steady game, and just hard enough to win. Both teams made more errors than seemed actually necessary, but the immense crowd of onlookers did not seem to care very much for that, as they applauded just the same. Both clubs kicked at the umpire, not because they had any real grievance, but from principle merely. Rudderham played a beautiful game at second for the Portsmouths."

The South Berwick base-ball club will play the Electrics of this city at the South street ground on Wednesday, Sept. 12th. It will be a game worth seeing, Communications for the Electric club in regard to matches should be addressed to William Sullivan, manager.

The dry dock at the navy yard was hauled out Monday, to take up the U. S. S. Saratoga to-day.

It was reported on Monday that Thomas Lee had sold to the proprietor of the Portsmouth house, Maplewood avenue, the island at the Shoals known to the fishermen as Lunging island, and to some others as Londoner, for about $2400. The island has a good boat harbor and landing, and has been used for many years as a summer station for fishing; but it is of small extent, and the only water on it we should suppose would be what is saved in cisterns.

A sparrow flew through a pain of glass in one of the windows of the drawing room of Davis Brothers' photographic establishment on Pleasant street, Monday forenoon about eleven o'clock, and fell dead on the carpet about six feet in- so thick a pane of glass would hardly be credited.

The coaching party from Manchester-by-the-sea, (confoundedly silly affectation of an English style, that name is,) Mass., which arrived in this city last Friday, left on Monday. They had the best looking tally-ho coach we have seen, it being far less heavy and clumsy appearing than the first American imitations of the lumbering British go-carts, and the gentleman who sounded the horn was an artiste in that line.

A big coal barge which was towed up to the Concord wharf for discharge last week, drew twenty-one feet of water; but she had space enough between her keel and the bottom for another coal barge to have crawled under, if she had wanted to do it.

A new sidewalk is being laid on High street in front of John E. Roberts' barber shop, Sylvester Wright's cobbling shop and Mendum's new tenement and store block.

The Boston Journal of the 3d inst. says: "The Portsmouth Journal presents the name of Charles E. Batchelder, Esq., of its city, as the republican candidate for Congress in the first New Hampshire district. Mr. Batchelder is a young, able and scholarly lawyer, a thorough republican and a man of high character. He is particularly strong in his own county of Rockingham, which Frank Jones and the navy yard will try so desperately to hold in line for Cleveland and 'reform.' The democrats will find Mr. Batchelder a very dangerous antagonist." That is all so.

Peculiar

Many peculiar points make Hood's Sarsaparilla superior to all other medicines. Peculiar in combination, proportion, and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom. Peculiar in its strength and economy—Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, One "One Hundred Doses Dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's. Peculiar in its medicinal merits, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown, and has won for itself the title of "The greatest blood purifier ever discovered." Peculiar in its "good name at home,"—there is now more of Hood's Sarsaparilla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time, and retained its popularity and confidence among all classes of people so steadfastly.

A DISTRESSING COUGH.
How many, especially during the Fall and Winter months, are troubled with a Cough, sometimes dry and hacking, sometimes loose causing the sufferer to raise a large amount of offensive matter; this can soon be cured by using Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific, which acts directly on the Throat and Lungs.
Cured her Cough.
Mrs. JEREMIAH CLARK, Lowell, Mass., says: "Twelve years ago I first took a bottle of your Throat and Lung Specific. I had been troubled with a very bad Cough for months. A 50-cent bottle cured my Cough. Since then I have not been without it. I can heartily recommend it to any one who has a bad cough."
Saved his Life.
CHAS. A. WAITT, says: "No language can express the value I attach to your Specific. I believe it saved my life."
We would cite other testimonials did we think it necessary, but a trial bottle will convince you that it is all we represent. Give it a trial.
Ingalls' Throat and Lung Specific is sold by all Druggists. Price 50 cents and $1. Prepared only by the INGALLS MEDICAL CO., Lowell, Mass.
